R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them as early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents.'

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

WE AND OUR NEIGHBORS,

A sequel to "MY WIFE AND I." by HARRIET BEECHER STOWE.

Just received by JOS. H. FOSTER.

Portsmouth Chronicle.

CAPTURED BY TELEGRAPH.

During the winter of 1869 I was employed as night operator in the railroad office at D——, Iowa. The principal road between Chicago and Omaha runs through D——, and the great number of irregular night trains, and constant danger of collision resulting thereform, rendered the position of night operator by no means an easy one. It may be well to mention here as necessary to the following story—that, besides the railroad office, there was also at D—— a business office of the Union Company. This we alwas spoke of as the "down-town" office.

One stormy night, not far from eleven o'clock, I sat at my desk—and, for a wonder, idle. The wires had not called for some time, and I was leaning back in my chair listening to the wind outside and reflecting upon the loneliness of my situation. The eastern train had crossed the river more than an hour ago; all the depot officials had gone off home, and so far as I know I was entirely alone in the vast building.

Finally, tired of thinking, I picked up the evening paper and glanced listlessly over its columns. Among other things I read the detailed account of a fearful tragedy that had taken place fifty miles up the river on the previous night. Three raftsmen, well-known as desperate characters in that vicinity, had entered the cottage of one Mathews, a farmer living in an isolated spot—had butchered the farmer and his children, terribly maltreated his wife, and then departed as they came, having taken with them whatever plunder was handy. What interested me most was a full description, for purposes of identification, of the chief of the villainous trio, Tim Lynch. Here it is:

$500 reward will be paid for information leading to the capture, dead or alive, of Tim Lynch, the ringleader of the Mathews tragedy. Lynch is a remarkably large man, six feet four inches in height, very heavy, and broad across the shoulders. Eyes greenish-gray, with a deep scar over the right one. Hair wiry, black, and beard of same color. When last seen he was dressed in black Kossuth hat, faded army overcoat, pants of gray jean, and heavy boots. The above reward will be paid to any one furnishing positive information of his whereabouts, (Signed,) Sheriff of —— County.

At the very instant I finished reading this advertisement, there occurred the most remarkable coincidence that has ever come under my observation. I heard a heavy tread on the stairs, and then the door opened, and there entered—Tim Lynch. The moment I set eyes upon him I recognized him as perfectly as though I had known him all his life. The army overcoat and gray pants tucked in the heavy boots, the massive frame and shoulders, the slouched hat pulled down over his right eye to conceal—I was sure—the scar; above all a desperate, hunted look in his forbidding countenance—all were not to be mistaken. I was as certain of his identity as though he had stepped forward, pulled off his hat to show the scar and told me his name.

To say I was not alarmed at this sudden and unwelcome intrusion would be untrue. I am not a brave man, and my present situation, alone in the depot with a hunted murderer, was no means reassuring. My heart beat violently, but from mere force of habit I arose and asked him to be seated. While he turned to comply, I succeeded in conquering my agitation to some extent. He drew a chair noisily forward, and sitting down threw open his coat, displaying by so doing a heavy navy revolver stuck in his belt. Then he freed his mouth of a quantity of tobacco juice, and spoke:

"Young feller," he said, motioning with his head toward the battery, "thet thar masheen is what yer call a tellygram, I s'pose?"

"Well," I answered, with a faint smile, intended to be conciliatory, "that's what we send telegrams by."

"Wal, I want yer to send a message to a friend o' mine out in Cohoe. I tell yer afore-hand I hain't got no collateral. But I kinder guess you'd better trust me, young feller. (Here he laid his hand significantly on his belt.) I'll fetch it in ter morrow ef et's convenient."

I hastened to say that the charge could just as well be paid at the other end by his friend.

"Umph! Plaguey little you'll git o' Jim, I reckon. Howsumever, perceed."

"What is the message, and to whom is it to go?"

"I want yer to tell Jim Fellers of Cohoe, that the bull quit here las' night, and ther sheep'll be close on his heels."

As he delivered this sentence he looked at me as though he expected me to be mystified. But I thought it best not to appear so, and I said carelessly:

"I suppose you are a dealer in stock, and this is your partner? Ah, sir, the telegraph helps you fellows out of many a sharp bargain."

"Ya'as," he answered slowly, evidently pleased with the way I took it. "Ya'as, them's 'um. I'm sending down a lot o' stock. Bought it dog cheap in Genesee yisterday. Purty lot as ever you see."

I turned to my instrument. What was to be done! Though ours was a railroad office we often sent business messages; and if I did as usual now I should probably get rid of my unwelcome visitor without further trouble. B[illegible] with him I had somehow recovered from my first alarm, and I now conceived the idea of the capture of Tim Lynch.

I was only a poor salaried operator, trying to save enough to marry in the Spring. Five hundred dollars would do me a great deal of good just now—to say nothing of the eclat of the thing. But how was it to be accomplished? Here I was alone in the depot with a man big enough to whip his weight in such little men as I was several times over. Any attempt to secure him single-handed was not to be thought of. But could I not excuse myself, and, going out, fasten him in? No; well I knew from the distrustful look in his face that any proposal of mine to leave the room would be peremptorily objected to by him. What then?

Why simply this; I would telegraph to the down-town station. But alas! That very day the connection between the two offices had been cut for repairs. It was seldom used at any time of course. But what of that? It was only a question of a few seconds more time.

All these thoughts went rapidly through my mind with the rapidity of lightning as I went to the battery. Lynch regarded me from the corner of his uncovered eye with a suspicion that made me shake in my shoes. As I sat down he arose and came to my side.

"Look a here, young fellar," he hissed in my ear, and his breath was sickening with the fumes of liquor, "p'raps you mean fair enough—I hope ye do for yer own sake. But I don't understand nothin' 'bout them telygrams, and I jest want ter tell ye that yer'd better be squar'—fur, by the Eternal God! ef you go back on me, I'll stretch you on this yere floor as stiff as ever I did a man yit?" and I felt the cold muzzle of his revolver on my cheek. Perhaps my voice trembled a little, but I was still unmoved in my resolution as I replied:

"Never fear, sir; I'll tell him all about the stocks." He muttered something to himself and still remained standing over me.

You have heard perhaps how much character and expression a telegraph operator can put into his touch. Why, there were dozens of different operators communicating with our office, and I could tell at the instant, without ever making a mistake, who it was signaling. You could tell if a man were nervous from his telegraphing, just as you could from his handwriting. The call that I sent hurrying across the state to Council Bluffs, must have rung out upon the ears of the operator like a shriek.

"C. B. Are you there?" was what I asked, and almost instantly came back a reply in the affirmative. Then, with trembling hand, I rattled off my message: "For the love of God, telegraph to our down-town office at once. Tell them that Tim Lynch is within two feet of me, and they must send help."

A short pause, as though my message occasioned some surprise, and then came the response: "All right!" which assured me that I need not repeat.

"Wal," growled the deep voice of Lynch, "are you goin' to send my message?"

"I have sent it, sir."

"What! Does all that tickin' mean what I told you?"

"Yes, and if you will wait fifteen or twenty minutes, you'll get an answer."

"Wal; I dunno as I want an answer. Jim, he'll understand it all right."

"But I'll tell you soon whether he's there or not. Sit down."

So Lynch reluctantly took his seat, looking around at the door and windows once in a while in an uneasy way. I was determined to take him now at any cost; and I verily believe that I should have planted myself in his path had he insisted upon going now.

"Tick, tick, tick!" the battery called out, and I listened to the message. "Keep cool. Gould has gone for the police." Strange it was, wasn't it! That I should sit there and talk through two hundred and fifty miles of space with a man not half a mile from me.

"What's that signerfy?" inquired my companion, as the ticking ceased; and I replied that the clerk at Cohoe had just written off the message and sent it out. He seemed satisfied and settled back in his chair, where he sat in sullen silence, his jaws going up and down, up and down as he chewed his weed.

O, how slowly the minutes crept along. The suspense was terrible. I sat and watched the minute hand of the clock, and five minutes seemed as many months. My companion seemed nervous, too. He moved uneasy in his chair.

"Ain't it 'bout time ye heard from Jim?" he asked at length.

"We shall get word from him in a few moments now," I answered, and fell to watching the clock again. Five minutes more passed. Lynch got up and began pacing to and fro across the room. At length he paused and said:

"I don't b'lieve I'll wait any more. I've got to see a man down at the Pennsylvania House, and he'll be abed ef I don't git thar pretty soon."

"Hold on a moment, and I'll see what they're up to," I cried hastily, and I touched the key again. "Make haste," was my message, "I shall lose him if you do not. Not a moment to spare." Straightway came the reply, short, but encouraging: "A squad of police started for the depot five minutes ago." Thank Heaven! They ought to be here now. I looked at Lynch and thought of the five hundred dollars.

"Wal, what's the word?" he growled impatiently.

"Your friend is coming," I answered, for want of a better reply.

"Comin'! Comin'! Whar?"

"Coming to the office at Cohoe. He probably has an answer for you."

"An answer for me? Jim Fellers? What should he answer for?" Lynch stood stupid thought a moment, then looked at me with a dangerous light in his eye.

"Look a here, young feller," he cried out. "It's my private opinion you're lyin' to me. And ef ye are—" here he uttered a horrible oath— "I'll cut your skulkin' heart out. I don't know anything 'bout thet thar masbeen, but I swar Jim Fellers hain't got nothin' to answer. More like he'd git up and scatter when he heerd thet message."

He stood glaring at me as he uttered these words, his hands on his revolver. I can not account for it. As I before remarked, I am a timid man by nature. But this action only made me bolder. Everything depended upon keeping him a few seconds longer. It must be done at any cost. I tried a new plan.

"What do you mean, sir?" I shouted, rising, "by coming into this office and talking in that style? Do you think I'll endure it? Leave this room at once, sir, or I'll ——" and I advanced threateningly toward him. My unexpected attitude seemed to amuse him more than anything else, but it silenced his suspicions. He put his hands in his pockets, and delivered a loud laugh in my face.

"Wal, Wal, my bautum; ye needn't git so cantankerous. Who'd thought such a little breeches as you had so much spunk? Haw, haw! haw! Why, I could chaw you up 'thout makin' two bites of ye."

"Well, sir," I said, "still apparently unmollified, "either sit down and hold your tongue, or else leave the office." And he good-naturedly complied.

Once more we were sitting listening to the ticking of the clock, as the minutes dragged their slow length along. Would help never come? Three minutes more. Great Heavens! The suspense was becoming intolerable. I must go to the stair and listen if I die for it. I arose and took a step toward the door, but a voice stopped me.

"Hold!" shouted Lynch, standing upright, all his suspicions aroused once more; "Yer can't go out of thet door afore me. Come back here!"

"Sir!"

"Come back here, or by the Eternal —" and the pistol muzzle looked me in the face. He stood now half turned from the door and I was facing it. Slowly, without a particle of noise, I saw the knob turn and a face under a blue cap peep in. Thank God! Help had come! I felt a joy uncontrollable come over me. I must keep the murderer's attention an instant longer till some one could spring upon him from behind. I walked straight up to him, but his quick ear had caught a movement behind. As he turned with an oath, I sprang upon him, and bore down his arm just as the revolver went off, the ball burying itself harmlessly in the floor. Before he could free himself from my grasp, half a dozen officers were upon him, and he was quickly secured.

The next morning the papers were filled with glowing accounts of the capture of the murderer, and praises of my conduct. The principal business men of the town made up a purse of five hundred dollars and presented it to me; and this, with the reward that was paid me the following week, enabled me to get married at Christmas. But I shuddered at the remembrance of that half hour I spent alone with Tim Lynch; and I don't think one thousand dollars would tempt me to go through it again.

THURSDAY, JULY 1, 1875.

The American team outshot the Irish team at Dublin by a total score of 967 to 929. The shooting at 800 yards resulted as follows: Americans 337, Irishmen 338; at 900 yards, Americans 327, Irishmen 292; at 1000 yards, Americans 303, Irishmen 299.

The Newmarket National Bank has declared a semi-annual dividend of five per cent.

They had an original way of deciding who were men and who boys in Hart's Location. If the pay roll showed that a workman got a dollar a day, the selectmen called him a man and put him on the check-list; but if he got only fifty cents, they marked him a minor and left him off. John Anderson, whose name was on five times, must have been a "boss" who got good wages.

The National Granite Bank of Exeter has declared a semi-annual dividend of 5 per cent.

Says the New York World in all the excitement of italics: "The fact is, all Ohio democrats now see that the endorsement o republican currency faith and practice was a colossal political blunder."

The number of men, women and children drowned at Toulouse alone is estimated at 2000.

The financial editor of the New York Times considers that in business affairs the turning point has been reached, and there is every prospect that we are about to emerge from the depression and uncertainty which have characterized matters in financial circles for some time past. There are solid reasons for improvement in the general situation, as it is now pretty clearly demonstrated that the accounts of ravages by grasshoppers and other insects have been exaggerated for speculative purposes. The reports as to the condition of the crops are generally very favorable, and there is every promise of a large harvest. A generous yield of farm produce this year will do much toward stimulating a large Fall trade, which means a season of prosperity for the country. We have now experienced about all the depressing influences that can be brought to bear on values, and, with their gradual removal, there is no visible barrier to general improvement.

The New Hampshire Fire Insurance Company have declared a semi-annual dividend, as usual, of 5 per cent.

Keely's New Motor.

The Savannah News contains a communication from Tocoi, Fla., signed "J. W.," evidently written by Dr. John Westcott, the President of the Railroad between St. Augustine and Tocoi. In this communication, it is suggested that the new motor discovered by Mr. Keeley is nothing more or less than carbonic acid gas.

Dr. Wescott says that he is convinced by a description of the generator, multiplier and pipes used by Mr. Keely that carbonic acid gas is the power applied. It is generated in any desired quantity by the action of diluted sulphuric acid upon marble dust or chalk. At the ordinary temperature, Dr. Westcott says, it retains the gaseous state, but when objected to the pressure of thirty-six atmospheres (or five hundred and forty pounds to the square inch) at a temperature of 32° F. it is reduced to a liquid, while at a temperature of 45° F. it has an expansive force of one thousand and sixty pounds to the square inch. Dr. Westcott claims to have demonstrated its immense power as a mechanical agent by actual experiment, and he gives a table of results derived therefrom as follows:

At 5° Fahrenheit the pressure in pounds per square inch is 372.
At 10° Fahrenheit the pressure in pounds per square inch is 403.
At 20° Fahrenheit the pressure in pounds per square inch is 460.
At 30° Fahrenheit the pressure in pounds per square inch is 560.
At 40° Fahrenheit the pressure in pounds per square inch is 697.

As a motor, carbonic acid would be inexpensive. The propelling power generated therefrom is so cheap that it would require, according to Dr. Westcott, not more than five dollars' worth to run a steamer from any Atlantic port in the United States to New York.

Honoring the Dead.

[Boston Globe.]

Colonel N. G. Ordway and other citizens of Warner, celebrated the Seventeenth by hauling a fine bowlder from Kearsarge Mountain to the railroad, to be sent down to Boston to be placed at the head of the grave of Admiral Winslow in Forest Hills, as a memorial of his victory over the Alabama with his ship, the namesake of the mountain. The stone was transported free of charge; and a few days after the eleventh anniversary of the fight its arrival was acknowledged by the Admiral's widow. The following is a copy of the inscription to be cut upon the stone:

Rear Admiral
JOHN AUCRUM WINSLOW,
U. S. Navy,
Born in Wilmington, N. C., Nov. 19, 1811.
Died in Boston, Mass., Sept. 29, 1873.
He conducted
The memorable sea fight in command of the U. S. S. Kearsarge when she sunk the Alabama in the English Channel,
June 19, 1864.
The bowlder, taken from Kearsarge Mountain, Merrimack County, N. H., for which the corvette was named, and of whose timber she was constructed, is the gift of citizens of Warner, N. H., and erected to his memory by his wife and surviving children.

—What a bank cashier wrote to Washington, wanting to get "registered" bonds: "I may not have expressed myself properly, not knowing much about this business of swapping bonds, but my intentions are pure and innocent. I wish to have these bonds in such a condition that when burglars come to my room at midnight, put a pistol to my head, twist my nose, take me by each year, lead me to my bank, and compel me to unlock my safe, I can contemplate the removal of my bonds with a smile that is childlike and bland."

—A St. Louis woman, separated from her husband, recently sent him a long list of propositions, upon his acceptance of which she would live with him again. Woman-like, she indicated the only real cause of difference in a postscript, as follows: "Your mother must leave the house at once and forever."

—School inspector (to urchin)—"Now, Johnny, how many can you count!" "Johnny—"One, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten." Inspector—"Good, Johnny; go on." Johnny (after a moment's thought)—"Jack, queen, king, ace."

—There was once an independent old lady whose comments on the Bible were very pointed. Speaking of Adam's naming all the animals, she said she didn't think he deserved any credit for naming the hog—anybody would know what to call him.

—Who can sound the depth of a woman's love? A wife says of her husband; "His kick is an inspiration, and when he knocks me down I feel that my measure of human happiness is full to overflowing."

—A mother asked her little daughter to do something, and the daughter's reply was, "A general tiredness pervades me."

—The King of Dahomey has a necklace composed of 150 human ears, and that ear necklace is his great pride.

She Had Views.

[Hudson Co. (O.) Chronicle.]

Two women in one of the passenger cars on the train on Monday morning had views on the Tilton-Beecher business.

"I tell you," began one of them, looking wise and fierce, "I have my notions of this hull business, and have had for some time." This remark seemed to ease her a little, and lubricate the hinges of her tongue, which had become a little rusty over Sunday.

"Yes, so have I," meekly responded the other.

"I told 'em last, Fall," continued the energetic female, "that if you'd put the hull kit of 'em in a bag and shake 'em up you couldn't tell which would come out first, and I don't care who knows it." She shook her head and clawed the air to represent the shaking of the bag as it appeared ot her.

"Yes, so am I," murmured her companion with a meek and contrite expression.

"As I told the Widder Smith last Fall, Beecher an' Tilting an' Moulting and the hull kit of 'em are all of the same piece, an' I don't care what the jury say, they can't make me believe any different, an' I don't care who knows it!" She paused here for breath and to adjust her bonnet, which had pitched over on one ear.

"Yes, so do I," again replied the other gently, but with as much spirit as she could muster. "Yes, I have all along."

"D' you suppose they can make me believe he's innocent after all them letters an' —an'—an'—pshaw! As I tole mother, last Fall, you may put the hull kit of 'em into a bag and shake 'em up, and 'twould be hard to tell which would come out first. I tell you I have my views of this thing, an' I don't care who knows it." By this time she was terribly wrought up, and was manipulating her voice very near the ninth symphony. The tumult of scorn that swept over her face was fearful to contemplate.

They were going to Toledo, but at the rate she started in, it is doubtful whether she held out the entire journey.

—Prof. William Crookes has made one of the greatest discoveries in relation to the action of light which has come before the world since spectrum analysis was first made known. He has demonstrated that direct mechanical effect can be produced by light when luminous rays are allowed to fall upon one end of a most delicately balanced lever arm suspended in vacuo; the contrary has hitherto been assumed. This great discovery, fraught with unknown uses to society, may be fairly claimed as having been given to the world through Spiritualism. In endeavoring to obtain instrumental evidence of the existence of the assumed psychic force, and to test mediumistic power by causing it to move a few grains in a glass vacuum tube, he discovered a motion produced by an unknown cause, but finally traced to radiant heat, and, in working further at the new discovery, Mr. Crookes has been able to make fresh revelations to the world relating to light.

—A number of little boxes sent from England, and apparently containing pencils, were recently seized by the Custom House officers at Calais, France. The pencils were found to be hollow, and instead of lead, to contain false 20-franc notes.

—A Scotch manufacturer has devised a means of distilling gas coal by which he can avail himself of very high temperature and thereby convert what would otherwise be liquid hydrocarbon compounds into permanent illuminating gas.

—In a small New England town a druggist was surprised and disturbed to receive at the hands of a dirty-looking customer the following prescription: "Pleas give the barer sumpthin to fizick him 15 cents worth."

—A wag, seeing a door nearly off its hinges, in which condition it had been some time, observed that when it had fallen and killed some one it would probably be hung.

—If you become famous, beware of the feeble—for they always gather around the people who are stared at.

—Unfriended, indeed, is he who has no friend bold enough to point out his faults.

—Not every one who has the gift of speech understands the value of silence.

—An inconstant man is despicable. A faithless man is base.

—Women always give more than they promise; men, less.

—He who can talk only on one subject, is seldom wanted.

—If a borrower comes, lend him your ear.

Three Attainable Blessings.

A good appetite, vigorous digestion and sound sleep are three blessings that imply a good many more, and are attainable by the daily use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. The stomach that is invigorated by that ruling tonic rapidly disposes of the food committed to it, and at the proper time craves for more with natural earnestness, and the brain from which pain and despondency have been banished by that salutary anodyne and cheering cordial, enjoys at the hour of rest that tranquil dreamless repose for which no other boon that Providence can bestow can compensate. Besides these most desirable results, the entire physique is strengthened and fortified against the attacks of disease by this splendid vitalized and protective agent, which, take it altogether, is about the most desirable, as it is is unquestionably one of the most popular medicines in existence.

An oriental traveller describes this busy scene, witnessed on historic shores: "Our steamer landed on a beach which was the port of Antioch, where the disciples were first called Christians. There was no town at the water's edge, no people, no wharf. The passengers and the merchandise were put ashore in lighters, which ran up into the sand. A troop of camels, with their drivers, lay on the beach, ready to transport the goods into the interior. Among the articles landed were boxes marked 'DR. J. C. AYER & CO., LOWELL, MASS, U. S. A.,' showing that they contained medicines and whence they came. These with other goods were hoisted on the backs of camels, for transportation to Antioch. Thus the skill of the West sends back its remedies to heal the maladies of populations that inhabit those eastern shores, whence our spiritual manna came."—Windsor (Vt.) Chronicle.

Jottings.

The judiciary committee of the House reported on Tuesday a bill increasing the civil jurisdiction of the Portsmouth police court, with an amendment prohibiting naturalizations by it. Hatch and Mellows opposed the amendment, and Barton and O. C. Moore favored it. It was carried by a vote of 169 to 152, and the bill passed.

Daniel Foley, a coal heaver, fell down the hatchway of a vessel at Railroad wharf Tuesday evening, and a heavy plank fell on him. He received two severe wounds in the head and severe internal injuries. Dr. Whittier was called and dressed the wounds.

G. W. Frost, a joiner employed by Thos. J. Spinney on the new house of John P. Hart, Esq., corner of Union and Islington streets, fell from a staging to the ground, Wednesday morning, a distance of twenty feet. He was picked up senseless and was attended by Dr. Potter, who upon examination found that he had sustained a compound fracture of the arm and internal injuries.

The Ladies' Social Circle of the Universalist Society will hold a Strawberry Festival in the Church vestry this evening. A choice variety of berries are engaged. Ice cream of the best quality will be for sale, and no effort will be spared to make the occasion one of pleasant social enjoyment to all who desire to spend an evening there.

—We have just heard a frightful story, the hero of which is now in Paris. Three months ago a rivalry in love existed between two merchants of New York, Mr. Fergus MacClellan, domiciled at 43 Broad street, and Samuel O'Deary, living at 49 Wall street. Both were paying attention to a young girl whose name we feel bound to suppress. One day, without notifying either of her lovers, she suddenly left New York. Despair united the two enemies, who resolved to set out together in search of the fugitive, and to have an explanation with revolvers when she was found. One started for Europe, the other searched in America. Six weeks ago the former learned that Miss —— was with her father in Calcutta. He loyally advised his rival by telegraph, and proposed to him the following arrangement, which was accepted: They would play a game of checkers by sending the moves by transatlantic cable, the stakes to be the life of one of the players. The game was begun, and lasted nine days. Mr. MacClellan, who remained in America, has just lost the game. Day before yesterday a dispatch informed Mr. O'Deary that MacClellan had blown his brains out. Mr. O'Deary leaves for Calcutta to-day. It remains to be seen whether the young girl, the stake in this mortal game, will have anything to do with the victor.—Paris Figaro.

—A school teacher in Mississippi used his facility in short hand to make a verbatim report of a negro clergyman's prayer, and he sends it to the Educational Monthly as follows: "O Lord God of this glorious universe, wilt dou look down in de omnipotence of dy eye upon dese dy collard children bowed upon de knuckle-bone dis night. Take a solemn peep upon us and let a heap of light in. Dou knowest what dese dy poor darkies need. On every side dou knowest, O Lord, is de evidence of de dislocation and destruction of the human family. Dere be fighting among one another and natural disease. But we die to live again either as saints or evil spirits. Dere be disciushions on doctrines, ecleshion, before ordination, perfection, and sich like, confusin' the intellects of both the black men and white. But, good Lord, dou knowest dat dese are vain allusions, splittin' and dividin' dy creatures into sexes without mercy. Whoever will, can go to glory. Many dere will be with shick countenances, white collars and fine clothes, who will find de gates shut against them, while de blind old woman, hobbling on crutches, she go straight in. Amen."

—Alluding to the recent death of George W. Hill, a professional gambler, the New York Clipper says: "He was a professional gambler, and had been the proprietor of several gambling houses in this city, Washington and Saratoga. The money he picked up on one side of the table, was either put down on the other or squandered upon dress, as to which latter he was for many years a man of perhaps unmatched extravagance. He seldom wore a pair of boots oftener than a half dozen times, the gloves he bought by the hundred pairs were discarded after having been once worn, twenty-five dollars apiece was no unusual price for him to pay for shirt bosoms made in Paris, his wardrobe contained suits of clothes unnumbered, and he has been known, while standing at Florence's, corner of Broadway and Houston street, to hail a cab three or four times a day, for no other purpose than to go to his apartments to don a fresh suit to be displayed on the same corner.

—A party of rough miners near White Pine, away out West, played a rather severe joke upon a green hand, one Perley, and had afterward occasion to regret their fun. Perley and the rest went to a dance, and the boys feeling rather well, concluded to duck Perley in a running brook. When he came out he was shivering like a cat pulled from a well. Perley said little, but thought a great deal and waited. The dance over, the party camped out for the night, and then Perley rose for revenge He took the cook into his confidence, paying for his assistance, and then did some more waiting. Much whiskey had made the miners drowsy, and they were all soon lying on the ground sleeping soundly. Then Perley and the cook went out into the darkness. The former had matured his plan for vengeance. The design was to so turn the mountain torrent from its natural channel that it would whelm the sleepers below. It was no light task they had undertaken, but one was laboring for money and the other for revenge It was nearly morning when the dam was completed and everything ready to let the water into the new channel. The final blows were given and the chating stream escaped into the new channel a roaring torrent. It raged down upon the sleepers in the tent and went over them as the water did over Pharaoh, and his hosts. Tent, provisions and tools went, and miners, half drowned, escaped to land with difficulty. When daylight came Perley and the cook were gone, and a band of wet miners sat upon the bank, very melancholy and full of sorrow. Perley was more than even with them.

—A writer in a California newspaper says: About half a mile over a mountain from Bartlett Springs there is what is called the gas springs. This is the greatest curiosity of the mountain. The water is cold, but bubbling and foaming as if it boiled, and the greatest wonder is the inevitable destruction of life producted by inhaling the gas. No living thing is to be found within a circle of one hundred yards of the spring. The very birds, if they happen to fly over it, drop dead. We experimented with a lizard on its destructive properties by holding it a few feet above the water. It was dead in two minutes. It will kill a human being in twenty. We stood over it about five minutes, when a dull, heavy aching sensation crept over him us, and our eyes began to swim. The gas which escapes here is of the rankest kind of carbonic, hence its sure destruction of life; also of quenching of flames instantaneously —Captain Allen Young proposes in his approaching Arctic trip in the Pandor to steam up Baffin's Bay, through Lancaster Sound, and down Prince Regent's inlet, after which, should circumstances prove favorable, he will endeavor to make his way along the north coast of America as far as Behring Strait by way of the east coast of King William's Land, the scene of Sir John Franklin's disastrous end. Admiral Collinson in 1854-5 found but little difficulty in making his way along the Arctic coast of North America, progress in shore being much facilitated by the action of large rivers which discharge themselves into the sea.

—Count Arnim says he is the worst persecuted man alive, and that the Berlin goddess of justice instead of being the usual maiden with even-balanced scales, is a ruffian with a whacking big club in his hand. Consequently, his appeal, now before the Judges of Berlin, he expects to go against him like a frog sliding off a log. The trouble of the dapper count sprang from his imagining A to be the first letter of the alphabet, while in German B is, and stands for Bismarck.

—The Providence youth who gave his sweetheart an opera-glass worth $25, and arriving at the home of the fair one arrayed in his visiting harness, with the intention of sparking her, received the following cheerful news from his would-be mother-in-law: "Mary has gone to the show with Bill Smith, It's kinder givin' you away, but she would go."

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH OF THE CITY OF PORTSMOUTH call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10 of the City Ordinances and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the city to aid them in the execution of their duty.

CHAPTER X.

Sec. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, &c. shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the health officers may direct.

Sec. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

Sec. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten days from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time above specified.

Sec. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offal of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

Sec. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisances shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

Sec. 12. When any householder shall know that any person within his family is taken sick of the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 13. When any physician shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for each refusal or neglect forfeit the sum of five dollars, to be recovered by either of the health officers in the name of the city.

Sec. 16. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other thing deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier —the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may, by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

Sec. 21. No person shall erect, keep or continue or permit to be erected, kept or continued, upon any land occupied by him, any pen for the keeping of swine, or privy, over either of the mill ponds in this city, or so placed that offensive substances therefrom shall be discharged or drained into either of said ponds, or into any creek, or cove or drain leading thereto. And no person shall construct, keep or continue any drain leading from any pen for the keeping of any swine, slaughter-house, privy vault, or other unwholesome or offensive place, into either of said ponds, or to any flat or marsh adjoining the same. And no person shall throw or suffer to be thrown from his land into either of said ponds, or upon any of said flats or marshes, any dead, decaying, unwholesome or offensive animal or vegetable substances.

WORK.

Strong gales keep the clouds from raining;
Work lulls the sad heart's complaining;
[ache;
Through the task and the toil runs the yearning
Yet Duty grows dear for her own grave sake,
And muscles grow stronger for straining.

Each life has some prize for gaining;
Each woe has a balm in its paining;
So we seek for it long in faith and prayer,
For the finger of God is everywhere,
While the days are dawing and warning.

Though the mildew its bloom is straining,
The rose has some scent remaining;
Through the darkest hour, still trust in the light;
What the hand has to do, let it do with its might;
Strong gales keep the clouds from raining.

GOD BLESS THE FARM.

God bless the Farm—the dear old farm!
God bless its very rood,
Where willing hearts and sturdey arms
Can earn an honest livelihood!
Can from the coarse and fertile soil
Win back a recompense for toil.

God bless each meadow, field and nook,
Begemmed with fairest flowers,
And every leaf that's gently shook
By evening breeze or morning showers;
God bless them all! each leaf's a gem
In nature's gorgeous diadem.

The orchards that, in early spring,
Blush rich in fragrant bowers,
And with each autumn surely bring
Their wealth of fruits in golden showers;
Like pomegranates on Aaron's rod,
A miracle from Nature's God.

And may He bless the farmer's home,
Where peace and plenty reign;
No happier spot 'neath heaven's high dome
Doth this broad, beauteous earth contain,
Than where, secure from care and strife,
The farmer leads his peaceful life.

Unvexed by toil and tricks for gain,
He turns the fertile mould;
Then scatters on the golden grain,
And reaps reward a hundred fold;
He dwells where grace and beauty charm,
For God hath blessed his home and farm.

Sing a song o' sixpence, a pocket full of "rocks,"
Four and twenty white folks mount a car in flocks;
When the car has started, a dozen more get in,
Isn't this a pretty mess—isn't it a sin?
The "punch" man's on his feet, a-taking up the fares;
The driver, with an eye to "biz," importunately stares;
Fat woman startleth up—out the car she goes,
When down comes a heavy foot, and treads upon your toes.

—A clergyman at Paris, Ky., stopped his prayer to lead an unruly man out by the ear, and went on: "As I was saying, oh, Lord."

An English Remedy

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM

AND TONIC PILLS.

For Nervousness and General Debility.

PREMATURE decay, mental and physical prostration, fear, despondency, over indulgence in the use of opium or alcoholic drinks, tobacco, &c., &c. Medicines unrivalled for their wonderful properties and remarkable cures of all Nervous Complaints. Their efficacy is equally great in the treatment and cure of Cancers, Nodes, Ulcers, Pustules, Pimples, Tetter, Fever Sores, Ringworm, Erysipelas, Scald-Head, Barbers' Itch, Scurvy, Salt Rheum, Copper Colored Blotches, Glandular Swelling, Worms and Black Spots in the flesh, Discoloration, Uterus in the Throat, Mouth and Nose, Sore Legs, and sores of every character, because the medicines are the very best Blood Medicine ever placed before the people, and are warranted to be the most Powerful Alterative ever originated by man. They impart Strength to the Body and Vigor to the Mind, removing Morbid Sensibility, Depression of Spirits, Dementia and Melancholia.

NERVOUS DEBILITY.

However obscure the causes may be which contribute to render nervous debility a disease so prevalent, affecting as it does, nearly one-half of our adult population, it is a melancholy fact that day by day, and year by year, we witness a most frightful increase of nervous affections from the slightest neuralgia to the more grave and extreme forms of Nervous Prostration.

It is of the highest importance, then, that individuals should be able to judge for themselves, by their own feelings, if and to what extent they are attacked by this insidious enemy to ill health, comfort, and even life itself if left to run its course unchecked by the early and prompt application of curative remedies.

DRUNKENNESS.

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS is the only remedy that has ever proved by practical experience a benefit to those who suffer from over-indulgence in alcoholic liquors; it completely destroys the taste for them, and restores the victim of intemperance to health and vigor. A single trial will prove it to be just what it is recommended to be.

Price $2.50. Large size, $5. Each package of the Cordial Balm contains one box of the Tonic Pills, which may also be had separately at 50 cents per box.

RECENT TESTIMONIALS.

FREWSBURGH, Nov. 12, 1874.

I have used the Cordial Balm and Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills as a preventive and cure for the use of ardent spirits and habitual intoxication, and find them actually specific in such cases. I regard them as most invaluable medicines, and nothing could induce me to be without them.

JACOB MESERVE.

TIPTON, Dec. 3, 1874.

We take great pleasure in informing you of the surprisingly beneficial results from the use of your English Remedy, The Cordial Balm of Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills, in a case of great Nervous Debility and Prostration, by a member of our family who had been under treatment by different doctors for nearly three years past without any apparent benefit therefrom; but your medicines have produced a most wonderful change for the better and the patient now enjoys comparatively excellent health. MRS. HARRIET STURGISS.

P. S.—We tell all with whom we are acquainted who are similarly afflicted to try your medicines.

Convincing and Satisfatory RESULTS.

SPEEDY RELIEF AND POSITIVE CURE

OF THE

MR. SHEWELL,

The Popular Manager of the Boston Theater.

THE GREAT VALUE OF THE

DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

APRIL 4, 1875.

Prof. ANTHONE HILLER: Dear Sir—Many thanks for two bottles of "Diamond Rheumatic Cure" which you so kindly sent me through Mr. Marston, I used but one bottle, which relieves me of a severe attack, and better still, I have not had a twinge since, and I am in hopes that I shall never have another, as the last attack was in July, 1875. Should it, however, return, I still have the other bottle left and shall try it, and expect the same beneficial results. Gratefully yours, L. R. SHEWELL.

The above testimony ought to convince the most skeptical rheumatic that a sure cure has been discovered in the

DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

It is from such results and every day proofs like these that physicians are now prescribing the DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE as an infallible specific for removing the cause of Gout, Chronic, Acute or Muscular Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Nervous Headache, Neuralgia of the Head, Heart, Stomach and Kidney; Tic Doloreaux, Nervousness, Flying Pains, Twisted Joints, Swollen Joints, Pain in the Back and Loins, Weakness of the Kidneys, Tired feeling, Languid, Weary Prostration, and all Nervous and Chronic Diseases.

Let any sufferer who reads this purchase a small bottle and take it according to the instructions around the package, and it will not take long to convince him that paying doctors' fees is money thrown away —liniments of all kinds are useless.

This medicine is for sale at all Druggists' throughout the United States and Canada. If it happens that your Druggist has not got it in stock, ask him to send for it to the Wholesale Agents, GEORGE C. GOODWIN & CO.; SMITH, DOLITTLE & SMITH; CARTER, HARRIS & HAWLEY; RUST BROS. & BIRD, and GILMAN BROTHERS, Boston. C. H. MARTIN & Co., Concord. J. W. PERKINS & CO., Portland.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,
Croup,
Diphtheria,
Asthma, etc.,

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

AN INTERVIEW WITH THE BOSS DEMOCRAT.

The story which I here relate
Is not with fine art consummate;
And it the cynics may berate
With little pity—
Yet hath this virtue: it's as true
As gulls ne'er entered me nor you
Nor any of that holy crew
Of Brooklyn city.

One night when I was quite asleep
I dreamed I went where devils keep Their revels foul, and roast and weep
And knaw a file.
At first I met a democrat
From Noble's Island—in his hat
Some feathers were—the while he sat
On brimstone pile.

Said I—"Old Boy, I came to see
His most Satanic Majesty;
And so you'll please present to me
Your overseer."
He limped away—the old burnt boot—
I followed like a raw recruit
And heard the ghostly phantoms hoot
Like crazy Lear.

He straightway vanished from my side
And right in front of me I spied,
Who on a pitchfork sat astride,
Old Cloven-foot.
"Ah! I exclaimed, how are you Clove,
Of late you do not seem to rove;
What cause for absence up above
Do you impute?"

With deep resentment in his face
At my familiar commonplace,
He writhed his angry tail apace,
And stormed and scolded.
And said he would a tale unfold
And one he never mortal told
The reason why he had not strolled.
(Then tail he folded.)

Said I, "Old Hoof, now don't deceive;
You played a scurvy game on Eve,
And would on me I do believe
Fain play your tricks."
He said that when they freed the slave
It nearly laid him in his grave,
But soon there came a tidal wave
In politics;

And that his friends had lost some hats
In betting on H. G. and Gratz;
But lately that the democrats
Had made a gain.
Then from that deep Plutonian dark
I heard a howl t'made devils hark,
The old discordant ward-room bark,
In weird refrain.

When died the stale and doleful wail
Of this grim hunker nightingale
Old Platt, proceeded in his tale
About his call-in.
He said Ohio had gone right
And vowed the second Concord fight
Had caused more genuine delight
Than old Bill Allen.

Then spake a member from Ward Six
Who just that moment came with bricks.
Across the sombre river Styx,
And bade him "rise it."
The boss resumed: "I can't be beat
While Governors for me will cheat,
Or voters at the polls repeat,
And dem's advise it.

Nor while impervious to the law
I know a judge superior
To any that I ever saw
Down here or there;
Nor while a Gingham rules the crowd
Or Councillors to gouge allowed;
And for an outrage I am proud
Of Ah sin Clair.

But for a mean, unmanly trick,
Give me my subtle rival Nick
In sophistry and gab to stick
And hatch opinions;—
Whose breast is filled with sin and bile
And with his artificial smile
I fear at times he will beguile
My own dominions."

Then Johnnie Son's son, sitting by,
With parchment face and skim-milk eye,
Yelled, "You schall yump," with such a cry
And vicious poke,
That all the fierce, unearthly crew
Then gave their files an extra chew,
Which ended all our interview—
And I awoke.

The National Centennial.

[Cor. New York World.]

Letters received by the commission show first a strong and generally diffused interest in the big show, and next, evince an equally strong interest to know what the chances are for being cared for over night. Well, if one looks to the hotels, the prospect is not encouraging. There has been a good deal of fuss and splutter—Fourth of July talk and cheap fireworks—over the grand hotels projected since the outbreak of the centennial fever. Elegant hostelries of all sorts and sizes have been built in the air or floated through patriotic brains, but none of them have got a foundation on terra firma. To-day there is still another scheme on foot, but the size, material, style, site, investors, and other such matters have not been definitely agreed upon. There is some prospect of putting up two rows of houses, each row to be used as a caravansary during the Centennial.

As far as present hotel accommodation is concerned it is little beyond what is required for ordinary every day business. When the Masonic Temple was dedicated in the fall of 1872 it was estimated that there were 7,000 strangers in the city. To lodge these visitors the large hotels found it necessary to fill the halls on the upper floors with cots. The Continental alone had to put up 300. The proprietors have made a detailed statement of the number of guests each can now accommodate as well as the number that can be lodged after making contemplated improvements. These figures foot up: For present accommodation, 7,562; adding additional accommodations about 11,000. Now it does not take much figuring to see that the anticipated daily average—50,000 visitors—cannot be packed in a space that will be well filled by 11,000.

The Centennial buildings are so steadily and surely approaching completion that the Commissioners have no doubt they will be ready on the opening day. This calculation is based upon what has already been done and the time remaining for the accomplishment of the remainder. Indeed, it may be set down as reasonably sure that the buildings will be ready to receive the exhibits, and afford sufficient time for their arrangement, by May 10, 1876. The total expenditures, including buildings, current expenses, etc., are estimated at $5,600,000. Of this sum $5,000,000 have already been received, and the Board of Finance hopes to have $1,500,000 more on hand by the opening of the day. These figures I have from ex-Governor Bigler.

Now, as to the sight-seers, ex-Governor Bigler says that this matter has received the careful attention of the Board of Finance, and the number of visitors, placed at the probable minimum, is estimated at 3,000,000. In the main exhibition alone there will be twenty miles of avenue, more space than most visitors would care to cover in one day. In addition to the main building will be the many other attractive adjuncts to bring the visitor on the grounds for more than one day. An important question, then is, How often will he come? The gentlemen who have studied the problem say at least three times. Three entries for 3,000,000 people gives a total of 9,000,000 entries, which ex-Governor Bigler thinks a moderate estimate.

A reliable firm, with extensive European connections, is already in receipt of advices which lead to the belief that all Europe will be represented by at least 500,000 people. The greater part of these will come from Great Britain and Germany; it is difficult to say which will send the larger number. This leaves 2,500,000 to be drawn from the States and Territories, nearly all of which have given very promising assurances. The Commissioners think, however, that the requisite number can be relied upon without going very far in any direction. Taking Philadelphia as a focus, there are, within a radius of 250 miles, 12,000,000 of people, allowing five members to each family; should each send a representative, there will be 2,400,000 visitors from near-by points, leaving 100,000 to come from outside the limits named. The Commissioners estimate 50,000 as the average daily attendance.

The largest influx of strangers is expected on July 4, 1876. The Roman Catholic total abstinence societies will dedicate their monumental fountain. They expect to parade 50,000 strong. Fifty thousand Germans will dedicate the monument to Humboldt. Ten thousand Italians, 25,000 Israelites and 20,000 Presbyterians will dedicate their respective statues. At least 25,000 soldiers are expected, besides a number of civic societies not yet fully determined upon. These figures swell to the magnificent total of 180,000 people.

The Centennial people cipher away all the difficulties in this fashion, which has at least the merit of cleverness. They had information leading them to believe that 40,000 private houses will be opened to lodgers. Allow an average of only three lodgers to each house, and behold the result; 120,000 people can be accommodated outside of the hotels. It is considered unlikely that any great number of people will want to pay four or five dollars a day at the hotels, merely to have a shelter through the night. There will be so much to see on the Centennial grounds, and such an abundance of good restaurants, that visitors will hardly be willing to trouble themselves about hotels whenever meal time comes. Besides this, it will cost fifty cents (it is thought) for each admission, and this would be virtually part of the Hotel bill. For the period of the Centennial, at least, visitors will be likely to live on the European plan—secure their lodgings and eat where they please and when they please.

There is still another item to be taken into consideration: The time from New York to Philadelphia will be but two hours; excursion tickets will be put at low figures, to induce travel. The kaleidoscopic attractions of the great metropolis will lead a large number of strangers to make their temporary homes in New York, visiting Philadelphia whenever so disposed. This, the Commissioners think, effectually disposes of the question of lodgings, and now that hotel proprietors have promised not to charge more than they can help (!) the Centennial gentlemen regard this whole problem of how to live as beautifully tinged with couleur de rose.

Daily Chronicle.

FRIDAY, JULY 2, 1875.

News and Notes.

The Beecher jury reported on Thursday afternoon that they could not agree. Foreman Carpenter said the disagreement was on facts and but one man on the jury believed any agreement could be arrived at. Judge Neilson then sent them out again for further consideration, asking them to report about four o'clock. It was reported that eleven of the jury were for Beecher and one for Tilton.

The details of the lynching of the negro Keemer, who committed a shocking outrage upon a lady in Greenfield, Ind., make up a thrilling chapter. The inhabitants of the village appear to have been wrought up to a high pitch of indignation, owing to the dastardly nature of the negro's crime, and several Quakers even were among the lynchers. The avenging column, composed of 160 men, halted in front of the jail where the brute was confined, and, an entrance to the jail having been effected, they demanded the keys of the sheriff, who refused to give them up. Violence had the better grip, however, and the keys were found on his person. The next order of the mob was to find the culprit's cell. While the work of battering down the grated door was going on the prisoner lay upon his bed within without betraying the least emotion; but as the door swung open he sprang and struck the man who was first to enter a terrible blow in the face. A second man was sent reeling out of the cell in a similar manner. But the lynchers were too many for him and he succumbed to a blow from a hand-spike. Being placed in a spring wagon his arms and legs were pinioned, and he was hurried to the fair grounds, about a mile east of the town. Here a rope, thrown over the limb of a tree, was hastily adjusted about his neck, and then for the first time he was allowed to speak. "Have you anything to say?" growled the leader in a hoarse voice. "Nothing, except that you are all doing wrong," replied the negro. "Then drive on," said the leader to the man in charge of the wagon, and in another moment the negro was dangling between heaven and earth.

The Pepperell and Laconia corporations at Biddeford are to reduce their productions one-third, by running on short time. These companies have a very large quantity of goods in store.

Daniel S. Dinsmore of Laconia, a member of the House, has been appointed an additional aid on Gov. Cheney's staff.

An ill-disposed burglar stole an important piece of the Claremont Advocate press, but a skillful mechanic soon replaced it, and the weekly edition came out as usual. He left the following modest note behind: "I knew you would not let me take this if I should ask you for it, so I borrow it without askin. I am inventin somethin, and this piece is necessary to my success. Will bring it back in four weeks."

The Tulca (Chili) Opinion says: Many persons have doubted the existence in this province of a man who is 135 years of age, but there is nothing more certain, as is proved by the particulars obtained by the census collectors. His name is Felix Rojas, and he was born in 1740, and under the Spaniards held the position of sergeant-major in a line regiment. When Carlos the Third issued the celebrated order to expel the Jesuits, Rojas took in charge two members of the Order and carried them from Linares to Santiago. This venerable man remembers with great clearness all the events of those times, and to converse with him about Chili is to listen to the minute history of nearly a century and a half. He passes our printing office every day in a portable chair which is carried by two servants, and our readers can see him whenever they please in his place at the church hearing mass.

One hundred and fifty-five Mormons arrived in New York in the last steamer from Europe, recruits for Brigham Young. They have gone to Utah.

The Iowa republicans have nominated Samuel J. Kirkwood for Governor. They adopted a platform in which was a resolution opposing the third term and taking President Grant's letter on that subject as removing that issue from politics.

The recently published memoirs of John Quincy Adams contain the revelation that DeWitt Clinton, the model statesman of the past epoch, made a distinct proposition to purchase the whole of the legislature of the State of New York, in so important a matter as the casting of its electoral vote. The Utica Herald, commenting upon this incident, says: "The careful reader of the private correspondence of men who long since passed into their dowry of perpetual panegyric, is constantly brought up by allusion to some plot or proposition which would politically damn its maker, if he lived in the atmosphere of to-day."

A Manchester man boasts of the exploits of his Newfoundland dog that caught and safely held a canary bird which had escaped from its cage.

A short time since the shop of John O. Clark at Deering was entered by tramps in the day time by a window while the family were absent, and a keg of tobacco carried off, and on the night of the 19th of June, the cellar of Mr. Herron was entered and a lot of cider and a pup three weeks old were taken.

The demand for a reduction of the President's salary to its old figure does not meet with much favor in any quarter. The general opinion seems to be that the present compensation is not a bit too large. Thus The St. Paul Pioneer says: "The truth is, the salaries paid American legislators, judges, and cabinet officers are much too small. We either compel them to draw largely on their own resources to support their positions, or we oblige them to be dishonest to protect themselves against impecuniosity. Neither of these conditions should exist. The day of niggardly compensation to public officers we hope is past. Let the President's salary alone."

It was Gen. Cary, democratic candidate for Lieut. Governor of Ohio, who in a republican speech at Akron, a few years ago, declared that "democrats have no rights that loyal men are bound to respect, excepting the right to be hanged."

A rich vein of gold and silver has been found about three miles from Alton Corner by Messrs. C. H. Kelley and Lewis F. Jones of Farmington. After tracing the vein for half a mile in nearly a straight line, they bonded the land the whole distance as far as they had traced the vein. Then they blasted out the rock by the side of the vein down five feet, and found that the vein was six inches wider and five feet deeper than it is at the surface. The quartz is very heavily loaded with the ore, and the ore consists of gold, silver and galena. Preparations are being made for sinking a shaft, which will be commenced this week.

The census of the inhabitants of Portland, just completed, shows 16,062 males and 18,358 females—total 34,420, against 31,413 given in the United States census in 1870, showing an increase of 3007 in five years.

All the money in the Treasurer's office is now being counted. About 125 ladies are engaged in the business in several rooms. The counting is superintended by gentlemen especially appointed for that service. It is estimated that the money aggregates about sixty millions of dollars, each separate note passing through the hands of the counters. All this money is to be recounted before it is transferred to the new Treasurer, who entered upon his duties Thursday.

George Chase of Gilmanton was ridden on a rail recently by six young men of Belmont. The boys were all arrested and fined.

The sentiment of the Ohio German press is well stated in the Waechter America of Cleveland as follows: "No success can be wished for the democrats of Ohio in the coming State election. The country has suffered enough. A renewal of this destructive inflation fever must be energetically opposed if the country is to be lifted out of its present deplorable condition."

The Detroit Free Press describes some of the startling incidents attending the destructive tornado which swept over that city, as reported by telegraph. Its track was one hundred and fifty feet wide, and within that limit nothing could resist its tremendous force. Houses were taken up high in air, shaken into fragments, and in many instances scattered over territory a mile in length. Indeed, flying pieces of timber were seen whirling aloft and flying about fully two miles from the place where the work of demolition began. Where one moment stood a row of substantial houses, the next witnessed a scene of devastation impossible to realize, with scarcely a vestige of the buildings in sight, so utterly were they swept off the face of the earth. Everywhere were heard the cries of the wounded, whose bleeding and mutilated bodies were pitiful to look upon. A boy was caught up and carried into the topmost branches of a tall elm and he fell dead to the ground, a distance of fifty feet. A little babe, seven months old, was found dead in the street. A widow had gone up town to visit her father, and when she returned her house was nowhere to be found. It had been carried bodily at least 200 feet, torn to atoms and scattered far and wide. Two horses were carried over a barn and flung to the earth dead, and numerous domestic animals were made to perform some most astonishing gyrations. Incident upon incident illustrating the peculiar action of the storm-cloud are related, and over fifty persons are reported seriously, if not fatally injured.

Those Circus Bills.

[Detroit Free Press.]

She had one in her hand as she came up stairs, and she didn't say a word until after she had wiped her spectacles, placed them on her nose, unfolded the bill, and read a few of the headlines.

She was old fashioned in look. There were strings to her bonnet, she had no bustle, her hair was combed down smoothly, and there were only eleven yards in her black alpaca dress.

"Young man, don't you know that circuses are awful liars and humbugs?" she finally inquired.

The man at the table leaned back in his chair and refused to express his opinion.

"Well, I know it," she continued in a positive tone, "and I believe they git wuss every day. Now see here—listen to this: 'A gorgeous panorama of amazing wonders—a gigantic combination of astonishing acrobatic talent.' That's all right on the poster, but hev they got 'em? I'd like to see one o' them animals."

"You're laboring under a mistake, madam. It means a grand display of natural curiosities, and informs the public that the proprietor has secured many first-class acrobats—the chaps who stand on their heads, turn head over heels, and cut up so many monkey-shines."

"It does, eh?" she mused; "waal, do you believe it takes a smart person to keel over?"

"Well, one has to have a good deal of training."

"They do, eh?" she remarked, as she put her umbrella in the corner and spit on her hands; "I'll show you that you are deceived! I'm an old woman, but if I can't ——"

"Madam; hold on—don't do it!" exclaimed the man behind the table.

"I can flop right over there and never shake my bonnet." she said, as she rose up.

"I know you can, madam; but don't. I am here alone, and I—I don't want you to. I'd rather you wouldn't. If you are determined on it, I shall leave the room!"

"Well, you know I can do it, and that's enough. You may be right about what that means, but see here—hear this: 'The highways ablaze with resplendent chariots—the grandest pageant on earth.' I've been to lots of circuses, young man, and I never saw a pageant yet. If they had one the door of his cage wasn't open."

"You are also in error there. The bill refers to the fact that the great number of wagons, chariots, etc., make up a sight worth seeing as they pass along the street."

"Um-m-m," she muttered as she folded the bill over: "I don't see why they couldn't have said so then. And now see here—read that: 'Sig. Govinoff, in his aerial flights.' Now, then, is that a boa constructor or a cundurango?"

"It is a man, madam—one of the performers. His real name is probably Jones, but that isn't grand enough, and so they put him down as 'Sig. Govinoff.' He is the man who jumps off a rope, turns over twice, and comes down all right."

"He is, eh? Well, if he's got an idea that he's the smartest man alive I wan't to disappoint him. I never did try to turn over twice, but I'll do it here and now, or break my neck! Git the things off'n that table!"

"Stay, madam—don't. I wouldn't have you do it for fifty dollars."

"Just once!"

"For heaven's sake, madam, get down o'ffn this table—here—here's a dollar if you won't do it!"

"I don't want your money, and I won't try it if you're so scart, but I don't want no circus going around talking about aryal flights and deceiving the people!"

She sat down, the young man wiped the sweat off his brow, and presently she remarked:

"And here's another thing, right here: 'A sparkling asterisk, flashing across the field of the cloth of gold—Mons. Gomerique in his great delineations of human character.' I'd like to know who she is?"

"Madam, that's a man—a man who delineates character."

"How?"

"Why, he makes up faces—expresses mirth, sorrow, joy, and so forth."

"He does, eh? Well, what's that to blow about? Make up faces—see here!"

And she shut her eyes, run her tongue out, and looked like the bottom of a brass kettle which had been kicked in by a mule.

"They are humbugs, sir!" she said as she drew her tongue in," and y'd 'spose I'd pay fifty cents to go to one?"

"They are quite entertaining as a general thing."

"They are, eh? Entertaining, eh? Well, if I can't do more entertaining in five minutes than a circus can do all day I'll leave my bonnet up here! Here, hold on to this chair!"

"Madam, I earnestly hope you are not going to perform any tricks."

"I hain't, eh? You just hold on to the legs of this chair!"

"I can't madam—I wouldn't do it for all the diamond pins in Syracuse! Go away, madam—go home! I'm in an awful hurry!"

"Well, I won't then, but when I say circuses are humbugs, I can prove it. I don't keer two cents for their big words and their panoplies, pageants, asterisks, giraffes, aryals, georgouses and orang-outangs—I can beat em all holler myself!"

And she took off her spectacles lifted her umbrella, and went down stairs.

Male Chambermaids.

The order had been given over night for coffee to be served at 11, writes a feminine American from Paris. Consequently at 11 precisely there came a tapping at the chamber door, and in answer to a sleepy "entrez" from the bed, in marched, one after another, with as little diffidence as children enter the presence of their mother, three great horrid unblushing men! No ghost of Banquo, or spectre of murdered victims in Richard's tent, was more startling to the looker-on than this strange procession defiling into a decorous bedroom was to the astonished spectator. For, although she had known for long that many of the chamber-maids in France were men, she was not prepared for an incursion of more than one Gaul at a time upon her privacy. With an unruffled brow, No. 1 entered and drew a tiny table to the bedside, upon which he placed the tray he bore, containing a delicious pat of butter molded to the shape of a strawberry, cooled with a diamond of ice, and resting upon a fresh crisp leaf of lettuce, a long French roll, a dainty china jug of boiling milk, a few lumps of sugar, and a silver pot of coffee. He said, "Bonjour, madame," as he deposited his inviting burden, and withdrew, leaving in plainer sight Pierre, the mustached chamber*maid*, who was just putting upon the washstand a tin can of hot water and spreading snowy towels about with a deft hand, albeit a very dirty one, as any Marie or Lizette could have shown. No. 3 proved to be Francois, also a whiskered "chamberman," who bore before him as the warriors of old bore their shields, the tin bath-tub which had been ordered over night. And as the occupant of the couch gazed in wonder at the unwonted spectacle of three men in her room at that untimely season, she felt sure that she tasted the first flavor of a foreign experience that she longed for, and concluded that she preferred her next taste to be of a different kind. It is beyond expression disagreeable to the English and American lady to have all the offices of her chamber performed by a great hulking man, who seem to have no idea (and they are all much alike in this) of the uses of l'eau chaude and l'eau froide as far as their own hands are concerned, and to whom the use of hair brush and comb are apparently as great mysteries as the rites of Freemasonry. Many ladies, however, who have lived very long abroad, declare that there are advantages in the services of a chamberman that quite counterbalance the infelicities. For instance, when served by Henri rather than Marie, one never suffers from a suspicion that if, by accident, bureau-drawers are left unlocked, one's daintiest articles of lingerie go out upon a holiday with Marie and her lover, or that the best velvet jacket takes an "outing" and figures largely at Cafes Chantants in the Champ Elysees, or worse places.

—Donn Piute, of the Washington Capital, sailed for Europe, Saturday. There is no danger that the ocean will swallow Donn. If it does it will be throwing up guano islands and coral reefs for three months after, and will be the sickest ocean that ever went to sea.—Ohio State Journal.

Three Attainable Blessings.

A good appetite, vigorous digestion and sound sleep are three blessings that imply a good many more, and are attainable by the daily use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. The stomach that is invigorated by that rulling tonic rapidly disposes of the food committed to it, and at the proper time craves for more with natural earnestness, and the brain from which pain and despondency have been banished by that salutary anodyne and cheering cordial, enjoys at the hour of rest that tranquil dreamless repose for which no other boon that Providence can bestow can compensate. Besides these most desirable results, the entire physique is strengthened and fortified against the attacks of disease by this splendid vitalized and protective agent, which, take it altogether, is about the most desirable, as it is le unquestionably one of the most popular medicines in existence.

An oriental traveller describes this busy scene, witnessed on historic shores: "Our steamer landed on a beach which was the port of Antioch, where the disciples were first called Christians. There was no town at the water's edge, no people, no wharf. The passengers and the merchandise were put ashore in lighters, which ran up into the sand. A troop of camels, with their drivers, lay on the beach, ready to transport the goods into the interior. Among the articles landed were boxes marked 'DR. J. C. AYER & CO., LOWELL, MASS, U. S. A.,' showing that they contained medicines and whence they came. These with other goods were hoisted on the backs of camels, for transportation to Antioch. Thus the skill of the West sends back its remedies to heal the maladies of populations that inhabit those eastern shores, whence our spiritual manna came."—Windsor (Vt.) Chronicle.

Jottings.

As freight W of the Eastern Railroad was passing under a bridge on the upward trip, at Berwick, Thursday afternoon, Conductor Henry Taylor French was seen lying prostrate on a car which had passed under. Before help could reach him he fell to the ground, receiving a bad contusion on the back of the head. He was taken up insensible and brought to this city, where Station Agent Barrett had him kindly cared for at the National House. Dr. Whittier was called and administered a stimulant, which seemed to have the effect to cause partial consciousness. The unfortunate man was in great pain all through the night, and is doubtless seriously injured internally. It is thought the bridge struck his chest and abdomen.

Howes & Cushing's Circus comes to-day in all the pomp of gilded preparation. The Eastern press speak highly of their performances. Doors open at one o'clock and seven.

The Manchester Mirror's Concord correspondent says of the discussion over the proposition to allow Judge Page to naturalize foreigners: "Hatch thought it very cruel that any one should hint that his constituents would prostitute even a police court to partisan purposes, but the republicans, mindful of the workings of the Manchester mill last winter, judged it quite as safe not to put any temptations in the way of His Honor who sits in judgment on the simple drunks by the sea-side, and when the matter came to a vote it was decided by seventeen majority that he had better not try his hand at making voters."

Rev. J. Haughton, of Hanover, will officiate at the Episcopal church on Sunday. For the present, evening service will be held in the chapel on Sunday evenings at 7 1-2 o'clock.

Several well-known Washington correspondents, with their families, will spend the summer at the Jenness cottage, Rye Beach, among the most prominent being General H. V. Boynton, of the Cincinnati Gazette; W. Scott Smith, of the New York Evening Post, Boston Traveller, and several other evening papers East and West, and W. J. Vance of the Cincinnati Commercial. A number of other citizens of Washington have also engaged rooms at the same house.

"I have heard a great deal about Hatch's ability, but he is just like a Portsmouth lobster—he crawls hindend foremost as well as any," said a member, after listening to the High Churchman's speech the other night.—Manchester Mirror.

Mr. Robert Phinney fell and broke a thigh at C. E. Walker & Co.'s coal wharf, Thursday.

All brakemen on the Eastern Railroad have been cut $5 per month in their wages, which hereafter will be $40 per month. This is the second reduction which has been made in the monthly wages of brakemen during a short period, and much dissatisfaction has arisen on the part of the employes.

Stokell & Co. received a few days ago 224 lambs from Covington, Ky. They came through in five days, and bleated melodiously on arrival.

Conductor Charles H. Wyatt of this city, one of the most faithful, gentlemanly and popular conductors on the Concord Railroad, is to be transferred to the main line between Concord and Nashua next Monday. He will be succeeded on the morning train to Concord from this city by baggage master Edward Harvey, son of Mr. Richard E. Harvey of this city, whose promotion is well merited.

Laighton Bros. have secured the services of Mr. George W. Clark, formerly of Sweetser & Clark, for Agent of the Appledore.

It took but nineteen hours to unload that big cargo of 1230 tons of coal from steamer Perkiomen at Railroad wharf—the quickest feat of the kind on record here.

County Officers.

The new officers for the County for the ensuing year were legally qualified for duty on Tuesday, June 29th, by taking the oath of office before C. G. Conner, Esq., clerk of the Circuit Court, at Exeter. The Board of Commissioners was organized as usual by the choice of Woodbury M. Durgin of Northwood for chairman, and Nathaniel H. Brown of Derry, clerk,—Frank P. Cram of Hampton Falls taking the place in the Board of Frank W. Miller, whose three years' service has expired. Among other changes in County affairs during this term, the debt has been reduced from $138,000 to $96,000; and if all concerned would endeavor as much as the Commissioners to lessen public expenses, the debt could be speedily paid in full.

George E. Lane of Exeter assumed the duties of County Treasurer—W. N. Dow retiring after three years' very efficient and valuable service; and George W. Weston commenced his fourth year as Register of Deeds, in which position he is very capable, attentive and popular.

The Legislature.

In the House, June 30th, Mr. O. C. Moore offered an amendment to the bill regulating elections, fixing the time of opening the polls in cities and towns on election day at nine o'clock A. M., and closing at seven P. M. This amendment is intended to prevent the perpetration of such frauds as were committed in Ward V., Manchester, at the last March election. An amendment offered by Mr. Hiland, democrat, of Manchester, fixing the hour of closing at eight o'clock, was voted down, 147 voting yea and 192 nay.

The bill repealing the act disfranchising students came on its third reading and was discussed, the republicans contending that students who move into town for the purpose of gaining an education should be placed on an equality under the law with persons who go to the same town to learn a trade; that no discrimination should be made against educated men. The bill passed by a vote of 169 to 124.

A resolution was offered that the present session of the legislature be brought to a close on Saturday, July 3, which was adopted. After the passage of several minor matters, the bill in relation to a partial reimbursement of municipal war loans, involving an expenditure of over $2,000,000 by the State, was indefinitely postponed.

The London Times On Bunker Hill.

The leading article in the Times fills over two columns, and is mainly a historical review of the fight. The comments upon the event we reproduce as being interesting, both as a reflection of English sentiment toward us at this time, and as a discriminating estimate of the significance of the battle celebrated:

"On receiving the news of Bunker's Hill the first thing they did was to rake Europe for mercenaries and to send a regiment of cavalry to Boston, where there was nothing for horses to do, nothing for them to eat, hardly spare ground for them to stand upon; and where both soldiers and citizens were already on short commons of bad food. If any method is to be found in the madness of the British government it is that they thought it just possible to frighten, bully and cajole the Americans into submission. All the loud talk about the invincibility of the British soldier and the inevitable cowardice of men accustomed only to take shots from behind trees at game or red Indians pointed to this. They dared the Americans to prove themselves men, and they had to accept the issue of that wager. The Americans proved themselves not only brave men, but sensible men, with a proper value for the lives they were ready to stake, and a determination to sell those lives dear.

At the present hour, with the experience of a century, England would be not only disposed, but even compelled, to rate more highly the scientific audacity shown on the American side than the bulldog courage and obstinacy which was all the British brought to the encounter. Elder people may remember to this day how often it has been said that the Americans could only fight behind breastworks, and that they always shrank from the open. It became a tradition of office, derived from times when life was cheap, when men were always in the market, and Ireland produced any number of native warriors. Since those days a few rude lessons that we have had to learn ourselves, besides operations on a grander area in which we happily took no part, have taught us that in order even to destroy life we have to learn first how to economize it, and that which includes the highest exercise of reason.

Not only the Americans, however, but England, and the world, have far more substantial reasons for a grateful remembrance of the day. The gain to all sides is great and unquestionable. The greater part of the American contention in that war was equally shared by the British people. The principles of popular representation, and no taxation without it, self-government by popular municipal institutions, the independence of the judicial bench, and complete responsibility in the exercise of all power and patronage, were equally at stake on both sides of the Atlantic. No doubt the sense of this added to the reckless and inhuman obstinacy with which the British government persisted in the struggle, long after every man at liberty to use his senses and reason on the question saw that it was hopeless.

The politicians then at the head of affairs, and the people by whom they were surrounded, knew well that their own position depended on their successfully maintaining the principles of utter absolutism, both at home and in the colonies; and that if those principles failed, their own fall followed. They fought for dear life against Chatham and Burke, and, as they well knew, against the true people of England. Meanwhile they had to do all the work, whether for peace or for war, by second-rate men. It is a significant fact that one of the witnesses and chief actors in the scene at Bunker's Hill left on record his opinion at the time the British Empire in America was then trembling in the balance, and himself lived to suffer the disastrous reverse which, two years after left no doubt how that balance would finally rest. Fortunate was it for England that the question was fought so far from its shores. The triumph of American Independence inaugurated a great but bloodless work at home in the shape of popular reform, or, rather, in the fuller development of those democratic institutions by which it has been said the British throne is surrounded. Whatever the Americans have gained, we have gained also, and now possess substantially all that they fought for.

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH OF THE CITY OF PORTSMOUTH call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10 of the City Ordinances and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the city to aid them in the execution of their duty.

CHAPTER X.

Sec. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, &c. shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the health officers may direct.

Sec. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten days from the publication of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time above specified.

Sec. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offals of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

Sec. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisance shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

Sec. 12. When any householder shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 13. When any physician shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for each refusal or neglect forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the health officers in the name of the city.

Sec. 16. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other thing deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier—the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may, by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

Sec. 21. No person shall erect, keep or continue or permit to be erected, kept or continued, upon any land occupied by him, any pen for the keeping of swine, or privy, over either of the mill ponds in this city, or so placed that offensive substances therefrom shall be discharged or drained into either of said ponds, or into any creek, or cove or drain leading thereto. And no person shall construct, keep or continue any drain leading from any pen for the keeping of any swine, slaughter-house, privy vault, or other unwholesome or offensive place, into either of said ponds, or to any flat or marsh adjoining the same. And no person shall throw or suffer to be thrown from his land into either of said ponds, or upon any of said flats or marshes, any dead, decaying, unwholesome or offensive animal or vegetable substances.

After Marriage.

A philosopher writes; The girl is generally educated on novels, and her first disappointment comes in the quiet indifference of the husband after the honey-moon. "You love me no longer," said a bride of a few months to her better-half in his gown and slippers. "Why do you say that, Puss?" he asked quietly, removing a cigar from his lips. "You do not caress me, nor call me pet names. You no longer seek anxiously my company," was the tearful answer. "My dear!" continued the aggravating wretch, "did you ever notice a man running after a car? How he does run!—over stones, through mud, regardless of everything till he reaches the car? And he seizes hold and swings on. Then he quietly seats himself and reads his paper." "And what does that mean?" "An illustration, my dear! The car is as important to the man after he gets in as when he is chasing it; but the manifestation is no longer called for. I would have shot any man who put himself in my way when in pursuit of you, as I would now shoot any one who would come between us. But, as a proof of my love, you insist upon my running after the car. Learn to smoke, my dear, and be a philosopher. The two combined clear the brain, quiet the nerves, open the pores, and improve digestion."

—A thoughtless young man from Massachusetts went out into Pottawattamie county, Iowa, not long ago to start a paper, and in order to tickle the fancy of the inhabitants, of whose temper he was ignorant, he published the following in his first issue: "The fighting editor is at home at all hours of the day and night, ready, willing and anxious to receive all visitors who have grievances. He carries two revolvers, a slung-shot, a pair of brass knuckles, a bowie-knife as long as a crosscut saw, a razor in each boot, an eelskin bludgeon and a bottle of poison!" Every man in Pottawattamie thought it was a challenge, and all day long they dropped in, singly, in pairs, in threes, and in squads and platoons. Every soul of them whipped the editor, and the last man, who came in about 7 P. M., had to sweep him up in the middle of the floor and paste him together with putty, in order to get a kick at him. The paper only issued the initial number.

—It is said that when Mr. Jefferson Davis is settled in his new home he will write a book on the war. If that is his intention his friends should keep him dodging about in sleeping cars for many years yet.—N. O. Republican.

PREMATURE decay, mental and physical prostration, fear, despondency, over indulgence in the use of opium or alcoholic drinks, tobacco, &c., &c. Medicines unrivalled for their wonderful properties and remarkable cures of all Nervous Complaints. Their efficacy is equally great in the treatment and cure of Cancers, Nodes, Ulcers, Pustules, Pimples, Tetter, Fever Sores, Ringworm, Erysipelas, Scald-Head, Barbers' Itch, Scurvy, Salt Rheum, Copper Colored Blotches, Glandular Swellings, Worms and Black Spots in the flesh, Discoloration, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth and Nose, Sore Legs, and sores of every character, because the medicines are the very best Blood Medicine ever placed before the people, and are warranted to be the most Powerful Alterative ever originated by man. They impart Strength to the Body and Vigor to the Mind, removing Morbid Sensibility, Depression of Spirits, Dementia and Melancholia.

NERVOUS DEBILITY.

However obscure the causes may be which contribute to render nervous debility a disease so prevalent, affecting as it does, nearly one-half of our adult population, it is a melancholy fact that day by day, and year by year, we witness a most frightful increase of nervous affections from the slightest neuralgia to the more grave and extreme forms of Nervous Prostration.

It is of the highest importance, then, that individuals should be able to judge for themselves, by their own feelings, if and to what extent they are attacked by this insidious enemy to ill health, comfort, and even life itself if left to run its course unchecked by the early and prompt application of curative remedies.

DRUNKENNESS.

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS is the only remedy that has ever proved by practical experience a benefit to those who suffer from over-indulgence in alcoholic liquors; it completely destroys the taste for them, and restores the victim of intemperance to health and vigor. A single trial will prove it to be just what it is recommended to be.

Price $2.50. Large size, $5. Each package of the Cordial Balm contains one box of the Tonic Pills, which may also be had separately at 50 cents per box.

RECENT TESTIMONIALS.

FREWSBURGH, Nov. 12, 1874.

I have used the Cordial Balm and Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills as a preventive and cure for the use of ardent spirits and habitual intoxication, and find them actually specific in such cases. I regard them as most invaluable medicines, and nothing could induce me to be without them.

JACOB MESERVE.

TIPTON, Dec. 3, 1874.

We take great pleasure in informing you of the surprisingly beneficial results from the use of your English Remedy, The Cordial Balm of Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills, in a case of great Nervous Debility and Prostration, by a member of our family who had been under treatment by different doctors for nearly three years past without any apparent benefit therefrom; but your medicines have produced a most wonderful change for the better and the patient now enjoys comparatively excellent health. MRS. HARRIET STORMS.

P. S.—We tell all with whom we are acquainted who are similarly afflicted to try your medicines.

Convincing and Satisfatory RESULTS.

SPEEDY RELIEF AND POSITIVE CURE

—OF—

MR. SHEWELL,

The Popular Manager of the Boston Theater.

THE GREAT VALUE OF THE

DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

APRIL 4, 1875.

Prof. ATTHOSSE HILLER: Dear Sir—Many thanks for two bottles of "Diamond Rheumatic Cure" which you so kindly sent me through Mr. Marston, I used but one bottle, which relieved me of a severe attack, and better still, I have not had a twinge since, and I am in hopes that I shall never have another, as the last attack was in July, 1875. Should it, however, return, I still have the other bottle left and shall try it, and expect the same beneficial results. Gratefully yours, L. R. SHEWELL.

The above testimony ought to convince the most skeptical rheumatic that a sure cure has been discovered in the

DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

It is from such results and every day proofs like these that physicians are now prescribing the DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE as an infallible specific for removing the cause of Gout, Chronic, Acute or Muscular Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Nervous Headache, Neuralgia of the Head, Heart, Stomach and Kidney; The Doloreaux, Nervousness, Flying Pains, Twisted Joints, Swollen Joints, Pain in the Back and Loins, Weakness of the Kidneys, Tired feeling, Languid, Weary Prostration, and all Nervous and Chronic Diseases.

Let any sufferer who reads this purchase a small bottle and take it according to the instructions around the package, and it will not take long to convince him that paying doctors' fees is money thrown away —liniments of all kinds are useless.

This medicine is for sale at all Druggists' throughout the United States and Canada. If it happens that your Druggist has not got it in stock, ask him to send for it to the Wholesale Agents, GEORGE C. GOODWIN & CO.; SMITH, DOLITTLE & SMITH; CARTER, HARRIS & HAWLEY; RUST BROS. & BIRD, and GILMAN BROTHERS, Boston. C. H. MARTIN & Co., Concord. J. W. PERKINS & CO., Portland.

ZERO REFRIGERATOR

Why the Improved Zero Refrigerator has taken premium over all others:

It requires less than one half the ice to run it. It dispenses with the nuisance of having a drip pan under it. It is a refrigerator and water cooler combined. It has the dryest provision chamber. It is built in the best manner and style of design. It is the cheapest to buy and it is a perfect Meat, Fish, Fruit and Ice preserver. Send for Illustrated Catalogue, with prices, and study our claims and be convinced for yourself. For sale by John P. Sweetser, 46 Market Street, Portsmouth, N. H.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,
Croup,
Diphtheria,
Asthma, etc.,

—USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. The Hired Girl for the Hour.

[Detroit Free Press.]

When she came to work for the family on Congress street, the lady of the house sat down and told her that agents, book-peddlers, hat-rack men, picture sellers, ash-buyers, ragmen, and all that class of people, must be met at the front door and coldly repulsed, and Sarah said she'd repulse 'em if she had to break every broom-stick in Detroit.

And she did. She threw the door open wide, bluffed right up to 'em, and when she got through talking, the cheekiest agent was only too glad to leave. It got so after a while that peddlers marked that house, and the door-bell never rang except for company.

The other day, as the lady of the house was enjoying a nap, and Sarah was wiping off the spoons, the bell rang. She hastened to the door, expecting to see a lady, but her eyes encountered a slim man, dressed in black, and wearing a white neck-tie. He was the new minister, and he was going around to get acquainted with the members of his flock, but Sarah wasn't expected to know this.

"Ah—um—is Mrs.—ah—?"

"Git!" exclaimed Sarah, pointing to the gate.

"Beg pardon, but I'd like to see—see—?"

"Meander!" she shouted, looking around for a weapon; "we don't want any flour-sifters here!"

"You are mistaken," he replied, smiling blandly; "I called to—"

"Don't want anything to keep moths away—fly!" she exclaimed, getting red in the face.

"Is the lady in?" he inquired, trying to look over Sarah's head.

"Yes, the lady's in, and I am, and you're out!" she snapped, "and now I don't want to stand here talking to a fly-trap agent any longer! Come lift your boots!"

"I am not an agent," he said, trying to smile, "I am the new—"

"Yes, I know you; you are the new man with a patent flat-iron; but we don't want any, and you had better go before I call the dog!"

"Will you give the lady my card and say that I called?"

"No, I won't; we're bored to death with cards and handbills and circulars. Come, I can't stand here all day!"

"Didn't you know that I was a minister?" he asked, as he backed off.

"No, nor I don't know it now; you look like the man who sold the woman next door a dollar chromo for eighteen shillings."

"But here is my card."

"I don't care for cards, I tell you! If you leave that gate open I'll heave a flower pot at you!"

"I will call again," he said as he went hrough the gate.

"It won't do you any good!" she shouted after him; "we don't want no prepared food for infants—no piano music—no stuffed birds! I know the policeman on this beat, and if you come around here again he'll soon find out whether you are a confidence man or a vagrant!"

And she took unusual care to lock the door.

The Decay of a Noble Profession.

[Matador, in New York Graphic.]

I want to be a pirate.

It was the young dream of my innocent boyhood. I used to sit on Sunday mornings, during good old Dr. Paul's sermons on the "Essential Wickedness and Logical Atheism of the Heretical Doctrine of Baptism by Immersion," and dream of a swift schooner with enormous guns, commanded by myself, and perpetually skimming the seas of such profitable cream as Spanish galleons and silk-laden Indiamen.

I did not intend to be a bloodthirsty pirate. If blood and rapine should prove necessary, of course I was ready to do my duty as a man and a pirate, and furnish as much blood and rapine as might be required.

In ordinary circumstances, however, I intended to confine my piracies to English ships, which, as all patriotic American boys know, have no rights that any American is bound to respect. Of course, I meant to make all fat and otherwise outrageous Britons walk the plank, but the rest of the prisoners I resolved to set free on convenient islands — treating the women with the utmost delicacy and consideration.

The uniform that I wore on board of my imaginary schooner consisted almost exclusively of gold lace and pistols. At least a dozen of the latter were stuck in my belt, while my diamond-hilted sword was of the finest Damascus steel. I carried a rifle in my hand—as pirate captains habitually do—and always fired the long brass thirty-two pounder myself. My crew were devotedly attached to me, and while I maintained the strictest discipline, I constantly gave them presents of enormous value, chiefly consisting of Arabian horses, guns and pistols.

I have sat out dozens of dreadfully depressing sermons with the utmost pleasure and profit by thus dreaming of my pirate schooner. Alas! that the dreams of youth should so rarely develop into realities.

Those were my innocent days. Little did I think when I pictured myself a great and good pirate that I should come to be a chronic journalist.

I know now that even with the strongest sense of duty urging me to be a pirate, piracy has become absolutely impracticable.

Of course, a man could buy the necessary schooner and the necessary guns and black flag; but there is nothing left for him to pirate.

What romance would there be in capturing a cotton ship or a Cunard steamer? The cotton would be useless, and even if a schooner could capture a Cunard the passengers would chaff the honest pirate and tell him he was only "making believe."

It is barely possible that an earnest pirate might succeed in robbing a vessel with a valuable cargo. But then he could not take it into port and sell it without being arrested by a policeman.

There isn't a Spanish galleon in existence. All the stout Indiamen with white canvas have given place to iron steamers that pass through the Suez canal. Piracy is dead. Its game has been extirpated, and it has not a port in which to convert its plunder into money and to spend its ill-gotten gains.

I really think the fish commissioners ought to do something about it. They take great pains to stock the streams with game for the fishermen, but they have not a word to say in favor of stocking the ocean with game for pirates.

Seth Green ought to hatch out and let loose a few thousand young Spanish galleons, and an equal quantity of young silk-laden Indiamen. Then if there were laws prohibiting piracy during the breeding season, and the young game were allowed to grow, pirates would soon find excellent sport where they now find none whatever.

And yet—and yet—as the Tribune powerfully remarks—though what the remarks mean I haven't the slightest idea.

I am afraid, however, that even were the sea to be restocked with piratical game, the absence of any uninhabited tropical islands suited for single pirates, or squadrons of pirates desiring the quiet of a home, would still make piracy impracticable.

Now, half the pleasure of a pirate's life consists in his tropical islands, to which he can retire when he is wearied of active duty, and read the illustrated papers and consume unlimited quantities of gingerbread and gum drops until he is again ready to put to sea.

This sort of thing can't be done on Long Island or Staten Island, or even in Cuba. There are too many inhabitants on all these islands, who would disturb the pirate's solitude and betray him to that ruthless foe, the local constable.

It is useless to conceal the fact that in any event piracy is too thoroughly dead to be revived. You might as well attempt to revive Schuyler Colfax or the Northern Pacific railroad.

The modern substitutes for piracy are extremely unsatisfactory. A man may become a popular eccentric preacher and command a congregation of reckless men; but there is no real fun in it, and he is always liable to be tried by ill-natured people who don't approve of that sort of moral piracy.

Or a man who has piratical longings which he cannot satisfy with a schooner and a black flag may establish an independent newspaper and rob his fellow beings of their character.

But this, too, lacks the spice of an adventure. There is a world of difference between the brave pirate who orders his gunner to "slap a round shot into that frigate's mainmast" and the independent editor who orders his chief writer to "pitch into Grant and say he wants a third term."

There may be men who would be satisfied with this sort of life, but I am not one of them.

I remain faithful to the dream of my boyhood. Give me piracy, or give me an honest living. If I cannot be a noble pirate I will earn my bread in some humble station in life, and try to be contented with my lot.

News and Notes.

The Beecher jury again reported on Friday that they could not agree, and were discharged. Nine were for Beecher and three for Tilton. Mrs. Beecher shook hands with them as they went out, the tears streaming down her cheeks. Francis D. Moulton has published a defiant card, stating that he has hurried back to Brooklyn from his summer vacation to defend himself against the threatened proceedings charging him with conspiracy.

Cambridge celebrates the 100th anniversary of G. Washington's taking command of the continental army to-day.

Newburyport Visitor: The Grangers have instituted a thousand lodges in the last three months. Their action in the coming Ohio election may decide the political complexion of the country for a long ime. That will have a vast influence on the elections to follow this year, and the presidential election in '76. Their convention in Ohio in September is of the utmost importance to themselves and the country." Who said the Grangers were dying out?

Judge Neilson, in charging the jury said that the defendant was "entitled to the benefit of the consideration that the intimacy between pastor and parishioner is of greater latitude than the intimacy with an ordinary acquaintance." It is this "greater latitude," says the Brunswick (Me.) Telegraph, which has led to all the mischief and obloquy of the present case,—to the disgrace and admitted criminality in several others which have appeared in the public prints within the past few months, not one of which has been published in our columns. We submit that the confessed intimacy between pastor and female parishioner in Plymouth Church is enough of itself to justify all thoughtful men in saying hands off. The pastor, if a gentleman is entitled to just such courtesies as any other gentleman may claim, and if not a gentleman he is out of place in either pulpit or parlor. It is doubtless true that women go to their pastors with all manner of complaints or questions for solution. A man of sense will know how to treat them, without courting or allowing undue familiarity.

When France comes to war again with Germany she will find how exceedingly serious is the loss of the fortresses taken from her in the late war. Metz, especially, will prove a grievous thorn in her side. The Germans have lately been strengthening it in anticipation of another struggle. They have added four forts to the seven already built by the French, and ammunition and provisions are stored away in sufficient quantities to supply an army of forty thousand men for several years. Preserved vegetables, in very large quantities, form an important feature in the supplies. The same work has been going on at Strasburg, and there ten fortresses will soon rank, in the estimation of military men, as among the strongest in the world.

The Legislature.

In the House, Thursday, communications were received from Ivory Varney, republican Representative from Ward One, Dover, and Charles J. Hillsgrow, democratic Representative from Loudon, each resigning his seat in the House on account of disputes before the committee on elections in relation to the number of ratable polls in the places which they represented. The resignations were accepted.

An act to incorporate an association for building a monument at Dover Point in commemoration of the first English settlement of New Hampshire, was read a third time and passed.

In the afternoon, a number of distinguished people were present, among whom were ex-Governor Bigler, of Pennsylvania, ex-Governors Stearns, Straw and Harriman, and Gov. Cheney. Mr. Bigler was introduced. He said he appeared in behalf of the managers of the Centennial celebration. He spoke for about forty minutes, and explained the position of the undertaking. They need one and a half million dollars more to complete buildings, etc. The whole cost will be between seven and one-half and eight and one-half millions. Pennsylvania has appropriated two and one-half millions. New Hampshire's proportion was first fixed at $80,000, but they have cut this down to 15 cents per capita of her population of 326,000, or between $45,000 and $50,000. Thirty-eight foreign governments are to be represented there. The buildings will occupy about 49 1-2 acres of ground and are fire-proof, built of iron, glass and granite. The stock was divided into shares of $10 each and a dividend would be declared at its close, and might well be all paid back. The managers did not care whether this sum of $40,000 or $50,000, put down as the quota of New Hampshire, be raised by the State or by individuals. Gov. Straw endorsed the remarks of Mr. Bigler.

Joint resolutions in favor of the several White Mountain roads were passed.

Amendments to the bill relating to the manner of conducting elections were passed, and the bill ordered to a third reading.

The bill to abolish the office of Superintendent of Public Instruction was passed.

A bill to class Hart's location, Nash and Sawyer's location, Crawford's grant, Crawford's purchase and Elkin's grant, for the purpose of sending Representatives to the legislature, was passed.

In the Senate, the committee to take into consideration what action, if any, is necessary to be taken relative to certain resolutions passed by the House on the 25th ult., reflecting upon the action of the Senate, reported a protest, and recommended that it be entered in full on the journal. The document gives the original resolutions in full, and declares that their passage by the House is a flagrant usurpation of power over the Senate and the executive branch of the Government; that such an interference is a high breach of privilege, and may well excite alarm as indicative of a revolutionary purpose. It also declares that the action of the Governor and Council was not subversive and destructive of the independent and separate working and existence of the three essential powers of the Government, but was imposed upon them in express words by the constitution. The averment in the House resolutions that the action of Governor Weston and Council in throwing out votes for Natt Head and Arthur Deering was unconstitutional is not true. Their action in this matter was also compelled by both statute and constitutional law. The report also declares that the resolutions are offensive and disrespectful in language both to the executive department and Senate.

The Army of France.

Let us now see how those leading principles are to be embodied in actual facts. The rule of general military service, the conscription without lasting exemptions, will give France every year a contingent of about 150,000 young men, without counting the "dispensed with" class," liable to be called out on important occasions. Every man enrolled in each yearly contingent will be obliged to serve for twelve months at least, omitting certain exceptions made in favor of aptitude and education; and a large number, to be selected by lot, will have to serve a much longer time, in order to supply the special arms—artillery, engineers and cavalry—which require a long professional training. The yearly contingents so distributed will be liable to serve five years in the first main divisions of the armies of France; and though the period of actual service for a great part of the men will, as a rule, be shorter, they will be all held ready to join the ranks at a summons from the minister of war. When the term of five years shall have passed, each contingent will fall into the first reserve; and here every man will again be liable to serve a further period of four years, and to be recalled to the army at a moment's notice. After an actual or potential service for the two terms of five and four years, each contingent will be drafted in turn to the second reserve of the national forces, and it will be held to service for five or six years—that is, during eleven years—in the two divisions of what is meant to be the last great support of the French army. Each contingent will thus, in different ways, be subject to serve for twenty years, and consequently, at the end of that full period, the forces of France raised by conscription will amount to the immense aggregate of twenty contingents of 150,000 men each, all, or nearly so, trained and effective soldiers, with deductions, of course, for deaths and casualties, and even in ten years they will be formidable in no mean degree. The age of service, it should be added, will be from twenty to forty, and thus the flower of the youth and manhood of France will be all enrolled in the national ranks.

This immense mass of military forces will not, however, represent the whole of the power and resources of France for war. In addition to the conscription levies, she will have a "permanent army" of 120,000 men, composed of "officers, staff, administrative corps, gendarmes, veteran and reengaged soldiers;" and besides these, of the "foreign auxiliaries," the legion etrangere, and similar bodies, who have often added to the renown of her arms. This permanent army, we need not say, will be an extremely valuable force. It will largely contain the most precious and important elements of military strength; it will be animated by a high professional feeling; and it will give consistency and force to the arrays of contingents. Taken altogether, the forces of France, after making allowance for all losses and non-effectiveness of various kinds, would ultimately, under the intended scheme, reach the enormous total of 2,500,000 men, according to calculations by no means sanguine; and far the greater part of the war-like multitude would, we repeat, be expert soldiers, not worthless recruits, or troops on paper. Let us now consider how it is proposed to combine and generally distribute this colossal whole, the most formidable organization for war which has ever been designed by a vanquished nation. The permanent army and the first nine contingents—that is, those of five and four years' service—would, it is believed, yield without difficulty about 1,350,000 men; and these are to form the active army, composed of a first line and a first reserve. The active army is, in time of peace, to have a strength of 480,000 men—men present with the colors and in the ranks; for a considerable portion of each contingent, though liable to serve, would be sent on furlough when it should have been sufficiently drilled; but on a declaration of war, it would quickly expand into a force of 780,000 men, by calling in at once the mass of the trained contingents belonging to the first line and the first reserve, these contingents being eight, it should be observed, in number; for the ninth contingent, that of the existing year, would, it might be assumed, be, as a rule, unformed. The 780,000 men would thus immediately form an imposing army, made up, without exception, of excellent troops; but this would be only the first front of war which France would possess the means to present. Over and above the 780,000 men, the eight trained contingents would in a short time be able to yield nearly 300,000 more: to these should be added the ninth contingent, about 150,000 strong, and the "dispensed with" class, which it is supposed would reach 140,000 men; and thus a second army, though composed to a considerable extent of raw levies—the untrained ninth contingent and the "dispensed with" class—would be from 500,000 to 600,000 in numbers, would stand in the rear of the first army and afford it a very powerful support. Nor are even these the limits of the force which, in the event of a protracted struggle, France would be able to place in the field. The eleven last contingents—that is, those of the later five and six years' service—are, as we have seen, to form a second great reserve, and this great army, which is supposed would amount to 1,000,000 or 1,200,000 men, is to constitute the territorial army, the supplement of its active associate. This force is to be arranged into two main parts, the first more ready to move than the second. Its duties, speaking generally would be to protect and defend the territory of France, to garrison fortresses, hold strong points and set the active army free for field operations; but occasionally it would join that army, and co-operate with it in the shock of battle, and it is to be linked with it in the closest manner. It is superfluous to add that it is intended to provide the most complete material and equipment of all kinds for these immense arrays, which, we say it again, would, when fully developed, amount to 2,500,000 men, real soldiers the greater number of them. In all these arrangements an imitation of the German system manifestly appears, but there are some marked differences.

How They Fare in Florida.

[Frazer's Magazine.]

A correspondent of the New York Evening Post gives the following description of household life in Florida:

There appear in the newspapers occasionally, letters from Florida, which have, of course, some truth in them, and yet vastly amuse us by their lack of truth. To be sure, people's experiences are varied, and all eyes do not see alike. I do not purpose to be charged with telling stories, so I only shall say how we live, and how others can live if they choose; and anybody can come and see who says, "That's not so."

We live on the St. John's River, up and down which thousands of people have gone this year, and returned with very little more idea of Florida than they had when they came from their homes. A hotel life, a trip on a boat on the rivers, and a run to St. Augustine do not tell much of life here. Our house is a good stone's throw from the river bank, and is on a shell mound a good many feet above the water-level. These shell-mounds are frequent on the river, are very high and dry and make lovely walks about the grounds. Our house is built of wood, like a New England house, and has shingles for roofing. For shingles we pay $3.50 per thousand, and $12 per thousand for building timber. (This is statistical.) Our house is very comfortable and we live a very pleasant life, I think. Much is written of "no milk," of "tough beef," of "canned food," etc. Persons who have to do with such things do not know how to live. Cattle can be bought for $15 a head, and live on food in the woods. Our cattle are branded and range for twenty miles. The milch cows are not deprived of their calves, but we keep the calves at home, and the cows come up to them every evening. We have from three cows, besides what their calves take, about sixteen quarts of rich milk daily. Of course, this is not like Northern cows, but it is good rich milk, and keeping cattle so is no expense, so it as easy to have a dozen as one. So much for "no milk." In the Spring we make our own butter. We have about sixty cattle, most of them fat, and about once in two or three weeks we kill one of them and have as good beef as you can get at the North anywhere. We eat some of the beef while fresh, and corn the rest, sell the hide, make oil of the feet and soap of the fat; and our $15 beast has paid us well. Chickens we get for 30 cents each. They lay well (so we have eggs enough,) and we kill them from time to time. About once a week our man kills a wild turkey in the woods near the house. About once in two weeks some one of the household shoots a deer, and we have venison. Let me here say that the reason so many Northerners do not like venison is because it is not properly cooked. Cooking venison is a thing not universally known—like some other things. Early in the morning we send a man with a net to the river and he catches about twenty fish. A "cast net" costs $6. People do not know about them. That is why fish are scarce on many tables. Our hogs number about thirty, I believe, and we kill them off for lard, bacon and pork, (a grown pig is worth $4.) They range the woods and feed on what they find. Besides the above list of meats, we have quail and ducks, pigeons and bear's meat. Boars are to be had in the woods. Sometimes they like our pigs and help themselves to one or two. So much for milk and beef, which our friends say cannot be had in Florida. Now as for canned things. We have had, all this last year round, Irish potatoes, sweet potatoes, cabbages, lettuce, tomatoes, peas, turnips and beets, all of which came from our own gardens and which the soil yielded with very little trouble and expense. We also had figs in the autumn, oranges (sweet, sour and bitter-sweet this winter,) lemons and citrons, grapes and blackberries, huckleberries, musk and watermelons, and peaches and bananas. All these were grown and not canned. We never saw a can. We expect another year to have raspberries and strawberries, but these expectations are not facts, and it is only with facts that I am dealing just now. We buy Florida-made sugar; and have our own corn and hominy; also our own syrup, of sugar-cane grown here, and our own rice. We have a mule to plough and work, as mules do better than oxen. Price, $130. And we have a horse for family use. We have one watch-dog and ten hunting dogs which eat sweet potatoes, and keep us in venison and game. We have colored servants. We pay the men $15, and the women $8 per month, and they do well. I should not desire more faithful "help," as you call them at the North. You know about wood here; of course—pine for house fires, and oak for cooking in a stove. This is all picked up on the place. You know all about our fine air, and our bright sun, and how we sail and drive and walk. We are busy enough, early and late; and so we are not lonely, especially as we have nice neighbors.

Now, who of your readers who has sailed up to Enterprise and back knows all this? If I succeed in resenting the "beef, milk and canned food" slanders on Florida, I shall rest satisfied.

Three Attainable Blessings.

A good appetite, vigorous digestion and sound sleep are three blessings that imply a good many more, and are attainable by the daily use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. The stomach that is invigorated by that ruling tonic rapidly disposes of the food committed to it, and at the proper time craves for more with natural earnestness, and the brain from which pain and despondency have been banished by that salutary anodyne and cheering cordial, enjoys at the hour of rest that tranquil dreamless repose for which no other boon that Providence can bestow can compensate. Besides these most desirable results, the entire physique is strengthened and fortified against the attacks of disease by this splendid vitalized and protective agent, which, take it altogether, is about the most desirable, as it is is unquestionably one of the most popular medicines in existence.

An oriental traveller describes this busy scene, witnessed on historic shores: "Our steamer landed on a beach which was the port of Antioch, where the disciples were first called Christians. There was no town at the water's edge, no people, no wharf. The passengers and the merchandise were put ashore in lighters, which ran up into the sand. A troop of camels, with their drivers, lay on the beach, ready to transport the goods into the interior. Among the articles landed were boxes marked 'DR. J. C. AYER & Co., LOWELL, MASS, U. S. A.,' showing that they contained medicines and whence they came. These with other goods were hoisted on the backs of camels, for transportation to Antioch. Thus the skill of the West sends back its remedies to heal the maladies of populations that inhabit those eastern shores, whence our spiritual manna came."—Windsor (Vt.) Chronicle.

Jottings.

Conductor French, who was injured at South Berwick and brought to this city, died about four o'clock Friday morning, without returning to consciousness. His injuries were caused by a blow in the back from the bridge, causing inflammation and mortification. Mrs. French, who arrived from East Boston Thursday evening, is left with a blind child of three years. Her husband was taken to Maine for interment.

Col. Hackett will sell at auction to-day, at noon, bank and railroad shares.

There will be a religious service conducted by Rev. John A. Goss in the open air on Haymarket Square to-morrow afternoon at six o'clock, if the weather should prove favorable.

Congressman Frost and family of Chelsea, Mass., are at the Appledore.

When Judge Fowler was in the House in 1871, he was obliged to resign the office of U. S. Commissioner, but no republican has been captious enough to deprive the democracy of the wisdom and legislative experience of Ex-Speaker Hatch on this ground.

Miss Emma Hilton, a bright little lady who has been learning telegraphy at the Western Union office in this city, now has charge of the office at the Waumbek House, Jefferson.

The Sovereigns of Industry, a thriving order, will picnic at Wallis' Sands next Tuesday.

At the annual examination and graduating exercises of Bradford Academy last week, Miss Nellie M. Freeman, daughter of Mr. Washington Freeman, acquitted herself finely in a French dialogue. Portsmouth has four of her fair daughters attending this school.—Journal.

The Young People's Union Rooms are closed for the Summer.

The Journal endorses the filling of the navy yard with timber for seasoning purposes. The workmen would like to see a portion of the money appropriated by Congress applied for labor. The few may be enriched by the contract business, but the many suffer. Give the men some work, Constructor Hanscom, and just hang up a little on live oak.

The Aqueduct Company is issuing six per cent. bonds to meet the outlay in increasing its supply of water.

On the day of the execution of Wagner some kind person placed over the graves of his two victims, at rest in Harmony Grove cemetery, two elegant floral tributes in the form of a cross and crown.

Rev. Thomas F. Davies, D. D., is expected to occupy the Episcopal pulpit during July and August.

Parties destined to Kittery Point boarding houses are now obliged to take the 'buss, as the steam yacht which last year ran from this city has gone to Lake Winnipesaukee for the season.

At Harvard College Commencement, the degree of Bachelor of Arts was conferred on William Russell Foster, son of Joseph H. Foster, Esq., of this city.

During June 17, 131 trains were run on the Eastern road, causing 202 changes in each electric signal. As there are 68 of them, the total number of changes during the day was 17,816.

U. S. Storekeeper John Hodgdon, 2nd, and Wm. R. Martin, U. S. Gauger, have been transferred for the next sixty days, the former to Lawrence's Medford distillery, and the latter to Sawtelle's South Boston distillery. They will be succeeded here at Ward's distillery by Gauger James R. Poor and U. S. Storekeeper Sargent, both of Boston, who with their families will sojourn at the Wentworth House, Newcastle.

Howes & Cushing's Circus drew a great crowd into the streets on Friday to hear the music and see the lion lying unbound on the chariot behind the musicians. He had his face washed and his hair combed preparatory to his ride through the streets.

Arrangements are being perfected for the ocean regatta at the Shoals on the 23d, Stake boats will be moored ten miles east, directly out to sea from Star Island, distance thirty miles, to be sailed round by boats of the first class. For the second class, stake boats will be five miles out toward each of these points, distance fifteen miles. Ten prizes will be given, as follows: Two for schooners and two for sloops in the first class; two for centre-board sloops in the second class: two for keel sloops in the same class, and two for schooners in the same class. The first class consists of yachts 40 feet and over, and the second class 20 feet and less than 40. The race is open to all yachts belonging to any regular yacht club in the United States; entries to be free. About forty entries have been made.

For the CHRONICLE.

TO MISS HARRIET McEWEN KIMBALL,

(Authoress of "O, Spotless Lamb," etc.)

Art's sway is felt in Poet's rhymes,
In Painter's and in Sculptor's skill;
In Music's calm harmonious chimes,
That captivate the heart and will.

Nature, less bold but more sincere,
Gives tone and color ever new;
Though she in undress may appear,
Her garments are of roseate hue.

To blend the poles, diverse—apart,—
To juxtapose them true and fair,
Demands the touch of highest art,
With Nature's genius deep and rare.

Your muse has crown'd sublimer heights,
In ambient air empyreal;
Nor been confined to "Swallow Flights,"
But breathed lark-notes melodial.

Acting like grace upon our hearts,
That breath, lifts to the Throne above;
Where the dear "Spotless Lamb" imparts,
His own embodiment of Love.

Author we love;—Savior adore!
Cloth'd in the sackcloth of our sins,—
We pray for more inspiring power,—
With penitence and faith that wins. C.

Kittery.

The rusticators begin to flock hither. About all Mr. Safford's room, in his Pepperrell House, are engaged; and Mr. Locke has his house about full at Lower Foreside; and at Kittery Point, he has a lease of the Lawrence House, with a good prospect of filling it to the brim. Generous provisions are being made by the old Congregational Parish here for the celebration of the glorious Fourth, (on the 5th, Monday next) especially for the Sabbath School scholars and Young America generally,—Elder Rowell's (Christian Baptist) society and Sunday School, and the Congregationalists of Newcastle uniting with them in their celebration. With tables well supplied for a free lunch, patriotic speeches, songs and other music—including of course, the church-going bells and gunpowder interludes—swings and other sources of amusements and heroic inspirations provided in Mr. Gerrish's grove (the beautiful "Follett field" and arbor) near the old church, a good time generally is anticipated,—to which "all the world and the rest of mankind" are cordially invited.

A new and large floating stage at Gerrish's wharf affords a very convenient and easy landing for parties in large or small boats, at any time of tide; and like free grace, is available to all who will Christianly embrace its privileges.

RATTAN WARE MANUFACTORY.

ONLY 4 Rattan Ware Factories in the United States, and one of them has just begun manufacturing in Portsmouth. The furniture made by this firm is made of the very best quality of East India Rattan, and for beauty, attractiveness, ease and durability is more desirable than any other furniture. We claim that the generality of our work is better than can be procured elsewhere in the United States. Few people comparatively have ever seen many pieces of this attractive furniture, and we cordially invite any one to call and examine our work even if they have no idea of purchasing. We warrant every piece of our ware to be as good as can be bought elsewhere and at less price.

Don't fail to call up, and see what few people in the United States have seen; viz. a collection of this ware. OVER FREEMAN'S OYSTER HOUSE, on Congress street, up one flight.

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH OF THE CITY OF PORTSMOUTH call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10 of the City Ordinances and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the city to aid them in the execution of their duty.

CHAPTER X.

Sec. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, &c. shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the health officers may direct.

Sec. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

Sec. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten days from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And, any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time above specified.

Sec. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be peralitted to throw any offal of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

Sec. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisances shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

Sec. 12. When any householder shall know that any person within his family is taken sick of the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 13. When any physician shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for each refusal or neglect forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the health officers in the name of the city.

Sec. 16. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other thing deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier —the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may, by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

Sec. 21. No person shall erect, keep or continue or permit to be erected, kept or continued, upon any land occupied by him, any pen for the keeping of swine, or privy, over either of the mill ponds in this city, or so placed that offensive substances therefrom shall be discharged or drained into either of said ponds, or into any creek, or cove or drain leading thereto. And no person shall construct, keep or continue any drain leading from any pen for the keeping of any swine, slaughter-house, privy vault, or other unwholesome or offensive place, into either of said ponds, or to any flat or marsh adjoining the same. And no person shall throw or suffer to be thrown from his land into either of said ponds, or upon any of said flats or marshes, any dead, decaying, unwholesome or offensive animal or vegetable substances.

Daily Chronicle.

—A correspondent of the Watchman and Reflector draws a very melancholy picture of Jeff. Davis' present life and the ill fortune that has dogged him ever since his downfall began. "He came out of the great struggle," says the writer, "with money enough to enable him to live comfortably for his remaining days, but an evil genius seems to have pursued him; every investment was a failure. He sought employment, and was made president of a life insurance company; it endured his administration for a year or two, and then gave up the ghost. He bought stocks, but always to sell again at less than cost. And now he is, or will very soon be, dependent upon the charity of people, many of whom have an aversion for him. He would much rather work than lay himself under obligations even to his best friends, but he is over seventy years old, and nobody cares to give employment to a man whom bad luck so persistently follows. Indeed, he has but few friends—none among the loyal people—and the friends of the 'lost cause' charge all their failures to his mismanagement; so he lives, with his wife and quite numerous family, in a very quiet way, avoiding publicity. He declined to deliver the Decoration day address at Memphis, saying that he was so directly interested that he might say something that he would afterward be sorry for. His punishment is indeed severer than if he had been made a martyr to the 'lost cause' on the scaffold."

—At the Dog show—On being asked by one of his fair daughters why the bull-dog's nose is placed so far behind his mouth, the very reverend gentleman depicted above discovers another instance of the merciful consideration ever shown by—shall we say "Nature?"—to the humblest of her creatures, and replies: "My love, it is to enable him to breathe more comfortably while he is hanging on to the nose of the bull!"—Punch.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Cough, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind and become household words, among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured so wide a reputation, or maintained it so long as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long continued series of marvelous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues, never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most effectual cures of Coughs, Colds, Consumption, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well founded if the remedy be taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

An English Remedy

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS,

For Nervousness and General Debility,

PREMATURE decay, mental and physical prostration, fear, despondency, over indulgence in the use of opium or alcoholic drinks, tobacco, &c., &c. Medicines unrivalled for their wonderful properties and remarkable cures of all Nervous Complaints. Their efficacy is equally great in the treatment and cure of Cancers, Nodes, Ulcers, Pustules, Pimples, Tetter, Fever Sores, Ringworm, Erysipelas, Scald-Head, Barbers' Itch, Scurvy, Salt Rheum, Copper Colored Blotches, Glandular Swelling, Worms and Black Spots in the flesh, Discoloration, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth and Nose, Sore Legs, and sores of every character, because the medicines are the very best Blood Medicine ever placed before the people, and are warranted to be the most Powerful Alterative ever originated by man. They impart Strength to the Body and Vigor to the Mind, removing Morbid Sensibility, Depression of Spirits, Dementia and Melancholia.

NERVOUS DEBILITY.

However obscure the causes may be which contribute to render nervous debility a disease so prevalent, affecting as it does, nearly one-half of our adult population, it is a melancholy fact that day by day, and year by year, we witness a most frightful increase of nervous affections from the slightest neuralgia to the more grave and extreme forms of Nervous Prostration.

It is of the highest importance, then, that individuals should be able to judge for themselves, by their own feelings, if and to what extent they are attacked by this insidious enemy to ill health, comfort, and even life itself if left to run its course unchecked by the early and prompt application of curative remedies.

DRUNKENNESS.

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS is the only remedy that has ever proved by practical experience a benefit to those who suffer from over-indulgence in alcoholic liquors; it completely destroys the taste for them, and restores the victim of intemperance to health and vigor. A single trial will prove it to be just what it is recommended to be.

Price $2.50. Large size, $5. Each package of the Cordial Balm contains one box of the Tonic Pills, which may also be had separately at 50 cents per box.

RECENT TESTIMONIALS.

PERKWSBURGH, Nov. 12, 1874.

I have used the Cordial Balm and Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills as a preventive and cure for the use of ardent spirits and habitual intoxication, and find them actually specific in my cases. I regard them as most invaluable medicines, and nothing could induce me to be without them.

JACOB MESERVE.

TIPTON, Dec. 3, 1874.

We take great pleasure in informing you of the surprisingly beneficial results from the use of your English Remedy, The Cordial Balm of Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills, in a case of great Nervous Debility and Prostration, by a member of our family who had been under treatment by different doctors for nearly three years past without any apparent benefit therefrom; but your medicines have produced a most wonderful change for the better and the patient now enjoys comparatively excellent health. MRS. HARRIET STURGISS.

P. S.—We tell all with whom we are acquainted who are similarly afflicted to try your medicines.

Convincing and Satisfatory RESULTS.

THE ONLY TRUE TEST —OF— MERIT.

SPEEDY RELIEF AND POSITIVE CURE

—OF—

MR. SHEWELL,

The Popular Manager of the Boston Theater.

THE GREAT VALUE OF THE

DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

APRIL 4, 1875.

Prof. AFFHONSE HILLER: Dear Sir—Many thanks for two bottles of "Diamond Rheumatic Cure" which you so kindly sent me through Mr. Marston, I used but one bottle, which relieved me of a severe attack; and better still, I have not had a twinge since, and I am in hopes that I shall never have another, as the last attack was in July, 1875. Should it, however, return, I still have the other bottle left and shall try it, and expect the same beneficial results. Gratefully yours,

L. R. SHEWELL.

The above testimony ought to convince the most skeptical rheumatic that a sure cure has been discovered in the

DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

It is from such results and every day proofs like these that physicians are now prescribing the DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE as an infallible specific for removing the cause of Gout, Chronic, Acute or Muscular Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Nervous Headache, Neuralgia of the Head, Heart, Stomach and Kidney; Tic Doloreaux, Nervousness, Flying Pains, Twisted Joints, Swollen Joints, Pain in the Back and Loins, Weakness of the Kidneys, Tired feeling, Languid, Weary Prostration, and all Nervous and Chronic Diseases.

Let any sufferer who reads this purchase a small bottle and take it according to the instructions around the package, and it will not take long to convince him that paying doctors' fees is money thrown away—liniments of all kinds are useless.

This medicine is for sale at all Druggists' throughout the United States and Canada. If it happens that your Druggist has not got it in stock, ask him to send for it to the Wholesale Agents, GEORGE C. GOODWIN & CO.; SMITH, DOLITTLE & SMITH; CARTER, HARRIS, & HAWLEY; RUST BROS. & BIRD, and GILMAN BROTHERS, Boston. C. H. MARTIN & Co., Concord. J. W. PERKINS & CO., Portland.

ZERO REFRIGERATOR

Why the Improved Zero Refrigerator has taken premiums over all others:—

It requires less than one half the ice to run it. It dispenses with the nuisance of having a drip pan under it. It is a refrigerator and water cooler combined. It has the dryest provision chamber. It is built in the best manner and style of design. It is the cheapest to buy and it is a perfect Meat, Fish, Fruit and Ice preserver. Send for Illustrated Catalogue, with prices, and study our claims and be convinced for yourself. For sale by John P. Sweetser, 46 Market Street, Portsmouth, N. H.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

—USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs

No. 78 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents.'

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

Dot License.

[Detroit Free Press.]

A little old man, smoking a pipe and wearing an excited look, rushed into the Detroit City Hall and found his way into the rooms of the Chief of Police. Standing by that official, the little old man swelled out and exclaimed:

"No—by dunder—no!"

"No what!" asked the Chief.

"You tings I bay dot license," shouted the smoker. "You tings I bays a one hoondred fifty dollar tax license."

"That's the new law."

"You tings I was a fool zo high, und zo big around, und zo long?" continued the man, measuring the air.

"I guess you'll have to pay."

"We shall zee about dat pooty quick! I shall do sometings."

"What?"

"I shall show you—ha? You know what I does—oh? I shall shut up my zaloon und zell nodings more. Ven der fellers comes arouud und kick on the door nobody shall be dere. Ven a pig growd comes up from Detroit on Zunday dey shall have no peer, no zigars, no Limpurger. I shall rent my zaloon mit an insurance agent, und he shall sheat, der beeples shall have to drink wasser, und Daytroit shall go down the hill, und somebody shall gome here from New York, und puy the whole blace for zwelf dollars, and move him up by Shicago—ha!"

And he shook his fist at the Chief and rushed out.

—The Chinese at Honolulu are said to be very shrewd smugglers. Recently, on the arrival of a steamer, a canoe load of watermelons went alongside, and some of the fruit that had been passed on deck was after a time returned into the canoe by Chinese passengers, who intimated that they did not desire to purchase them. It afterward transpired that the insides of those melons had been carefully scooped out, the cavity filled with boxes of opium and the rind put neatly together again, when the "no goodee melon" was taken on shore again.

—A Detroit fruit seller recently observed an old man pinching a cocoanut, and handling it as if he had hold of an apple, and he stepped to the door and asked:

"Would you like to buy a nut?"

"Waal, I thought some of it," replied the old man; "but I guess I'll wait till they get a little softer—it's coming on to the sickly season and a feller ought to be careful."

—A gentleman of White Plains, N. Y., has placed a notice to burglars, printed in gold letters on a card board, in a conspicuous position in his safe, to the effect that it contains papers only, of no value to any one but the owner; but if burglars wish to take a peep inside for themselves, not to burst the safe, but use the combination according to the instructions which he gives.

—A fourteen-year-old girl in Sandy Hill, N. Y., eloped with a school boy, was married, and returned home with him to be forgiven. She was soundly spanked by her mother, and the husband on his way out of the house was kicked eighteen times by her father. They had never read anything like that in novels.

Daily Chronicle.

MONDAY, JULY 5, 1875.

The Legislature.

On Friday, the House resumed the consideration of a bill to aid in the purity of elections, the question being on the adopting of the amendment offered by Bingham, of Littleton, to the amendment to the bill offered by Randall, of Somersworth. After discussion the House rejected the amendment of Mr., Bingham, by a vote of 146 yeas to 178 nays—the yeas and nays being called on motion of Mr. Bingham. The House then adopted the amendment of Mr. Randall, adding a new section, in relation to repeating and voting under false names, without a division.

In the Senate, the protest against the House resolutions of censure of the Governor and Council was passed by a vote of 7 to 5. The following protest was then presented by the republican Senators against the protest, which was entered upon the journal:

"The undersigned, members of the Senate, hereby enter their solemn protest against the action of the Senate, this day taken, in adopting what is styled a protest against certain resolutions passed by the House of Representatives on the 25th day of June, 1875. We believe that the action of the House of Representatives was justified and warranted by facts and the Constitution. There is no principle of free government better settled or more firmly maintained than the duty of one department to resist an encroachment by another. It is notorious and beyond denial that the action of the Governor and Council in throwing out the return of votes cast for Natt Head and Arthur Deering, in the Second and Fourth Senatorial Districts, at the last election in this State, was without precedent in the history of the State; was an assumption of power not conferred upon them by the Constitution; was contrary to the plain decision of the highest tribunal of the State and contrary to the letter and spirit of the decisions of the highest courts of fifteen States of the Union. We believe, with the House of Representatives, that said action of the executive department constitutes a mischievous and dangerous precedent, which will be fatal to the rights of electors and of a co-ordinate branch of the Government, unless it shall be condemned by the people at the ballot box. As we believe, and the returns prove, that vacancies did exist in the Second and Fourth Senatorial Districts at the late election by a failure of the people to give to any one candidate, in either district, a majority of votes, the action of the Governor and Council was unconstitutional and usurpatory, and the Senate in copying and affirming that action was equally unconstitutional and usurpatory, for the Constitution expressly provides that when it appears that no candidate has a majority of the votes in any Senatorial District the deficiency shall be supplied by members of the House of Representatives, and such Senators as shall be declared elected. Said vacancies in the Second and Fourth Districts were not supplied, and hence we believe, with the House of Representatives, that the action of the Senate in filling them was arbitrary and unconstitutional, and that the dangerous and distractive precedent which it established should be revised and corrected at the ballot-box. We cannot resist expression of deep regret that a partisan majority in the Senate, forgetting how that majority was obtained, should arraign a co-ordinate branch of the legislature for maintaining their plain and time-honored constitutional rights. To the minds of all fair, intelligent and patriotic men such an arraignment will appear as it does to us, a burlesque on free government; and we hereby enter our firm and emphatic protest against the 'arrogance' and 'audacity' which characterized it. The statements are not facts, and its conclusions are as unwarranted as are the assumptions from which they are drawn."

Signed, J. F. Hall, J. B. Smith, Charles Holman, George A. Whitney, G. H. Stowell.

After adjournment, Charles P. Sanborn, Speaker of the House, and Albert R. Hatch, Speaker of the House last year, were each presented with an elegant gold-headed cane, appropriately inscribed. Samuel C. Clark, Clerk, Charles C. Danforth, Assistant Clerk, and Charles H. Smith, Clerk last session, were each presented with a pair of heavy gold sleeve buttons by members of the legislature.

The House passed a joint resolution relating to the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of American Independence, appropriating $15,000 for the purchase of centennial stock, and appropriated $5000 to be expended under the direction of the Centennial committee.

The Mirror compliments the steadfastness of the republican members of the House. Not only the able-bodied men but the invalids report for duty at every action. At the first of the session one member from the north part of the State was carried to Concord on a bed, and when remonstrated with by some of his, replied that his constituents wouldn't mind having a dead representative, but would be very apt to kill one who stayed away and thereby helped the democrats organize the House.

The legislature adjourned sine die on Saturday, having passed the Constitutional convention bill.

The Manchester Frauds.

One of the most energetic members of the House of Representatives is Mr. Gilmore of Manchester, who one day last week startled the House with a description of some of the performances in Ward Five on election night, which, though familiar as household words to Manchester people, seemed to strike the members as so unparalleled and outrageous as to be impossible in New Hampshire. And when Gilmore went on to declare that the Attorney-General of the State took his position by the selectmen while they were making out the bogus check-list, and publicly told them to put on the name of every man who would vote the democratic ticket and he would back them up in it, men held their breaths in astonishment and whispered to each other, "Is it possible?" A little farther along the speaker alluded to a late judge of the police court, and said that he had resigned in order to escape impeachment for his participation in the villainies of the late election, and so continued to pour in the hot shot until the whole democratic side of the House got altogether too mad to make much of a reply, and confined itself to saying, "Tain't so." Gilmore replied that it was so, and he would prove it before the committee on elections or apologize to the House.

News and Notes.

Mr. Beecher's lecture room talk on Friday evening was as egotistical as ever. According to the reports in the newspapers he said God had not baptized him for nothing, but was preparing him for work, though he "did not yet know what it was." A suffering public confidently hopes that the information may be speedily made public after the Supreme Being reveals it, as soon as is consistent with the convenence of the self-called junior partner.

The State tax is to be $400,000.

Mr. J. S. Pillsbury, the man whom the Minnesota republicans will probably nominate for Governor, is said to have secured a great deal of his popularity by his modesty. He cannot make a speech when he has nothing to say, and this unusual trait in a public man is immensely gratifying to the people.

The Massachusetts Council have voted unanimously not to recommend the Governor to commute the sentence of Pomeroy, the boy fiend.

A Washington despatch says men are at work at the Navy Yard breaking up Ironclads. The ironclads being broken up are the Hero and Piscataqua. The iron will be sold at auction. The Nipsic (screw) is also being broken up.

Hughes, the murderer, was hanged at Newton, N. J., Friday. His neck was not broken, but he died of strangulation in eighteen minutes. The prisoner protested his innocence.

There is considerable interest and not a little amusement created over a rather novel civil rights suit which has been begun at Washington. A white man rented a room at a lodging-house kept by a colored man. The room was secured in the absence of the landlord. When the lodger returned at night for his room the landlord refused him admission, and informed him that no white man should lodge in his place. Suit has been entered against the landlord for violation of the civil rights bill.

Alexander Hamilton, formerly Treasurer of Jersey City, was sentenced to three years in State Prison, and to pay a fine of $1000, for embezzlement during his term of office.

The N. Y. Times says that the next movement on the part of Tilton will be to indict Gen. Tracy for perjury upon the ground that Tilton, Moulton and Woodruff distinctly stated to him that the charge against Beecher was adultery, while he swore on the witness stand that it had reference to improper proposals, Tilton has been advised to take this step by counsel who have had nothing to do with the trial, and it is believed that proceedings will be taken in the matter without delay.

A special from Philadelphia says the defalcation of Alexander Erwin, financial agent of the Morris Foundry, reaches nearly a million and half dollars. The defalcations extend back some three years.

Says the Worcester Gazette: Beecher's best friends cannot claim that he is vindicated. He has gained no new adherents in the six months that have passed. The air grows still fouler with scandals against his good name, and men shake their heads more dubiously than ever when Plymouth Church is mentioned. In all this sad history, there has been no gleam of light. The end of this trial deepens the darkness.

Judge Buskick of Indiana has decided that a man and woman can marry themselves, but they can't grant each other a divorce.

The reduction in the public debt last month was nearly one and a half millions.

The Beecher Business.

The Brooklyn Eagle publishes the following account of the deliberations of the jury, said to be obtained from one of the number: "When first they retised, the twelve took an informal ballot, which made them stand 10 for Beecher and 2 for Tilton. Another informal ballot was taken with a like result, when some of the juryfmen stated there was some error in the record, and it was suggested that they should formally organize by the election of a foreman and secretary, in order to avoid any further mistake. Carpenter objected to the election of a foreman, claiming that he had been appointed by Judge Neilson, and his fellow jurors had no right to substitute any one else. He emphatically opposed any attempt to supplant him, and for purposes of harmony and good-will, the majority decided to accept him as foreman. This difficulty being settled, the twelve proceeded to elect a secretary, and the choice fell on Jeffrey. A formal vote was then taken. The secretary announced that the vote stood eight for Beecher and four for Tilton. After a prolonged discussion of the evidence, another formal ballot was entered into. This time some of the twelve who were in favor of Beecher voted with the minority, so the vote stood six for Beecher and six for Tilton. This was Friday last. The Beecher men were not in the slightest disheartened, and the shrewdest among them worked harder than ever to convince the small minority in favor of Tilton that they were in error. The minority nearly all through the deliberations in the jury room consisted of Jeffrey, Davis and Flate. They appeared open to conviction, and entered calmly and seriously into the discussion of the views advanced by a few of the majority, Another formal ballot was taken. The Secretary declared the vote eight for Beecher and four for Tilton. Several ballots were taken, with like result. The number of ballots taken from the time the jury left their seats, at the close of the Judge's charge, until they were disbanded by order of the Court, was 53. The Beecher men worked hard all Friday night, and a change in their favor was apparent the following morning, when the secretary announced that the jury stood 9 for Beecher and 3 for Tilton. Saturday morning a few of the Beecher men, who had been using gigantic efforts to convert Jeffrey, Davis and Flate to their side, had so far succeeded that these gentlemen at last consented to bring in a verdict for Beecher. Had the jury then been summoned to the Court-room, Beecher would have gone forth with a declaration of innocence. Some were in favor of going into Court at once, but, unfortunately for Beecher, it was determined that they should delay their return to the Court-room until 8 o'clock that evening, when they would hand the Judge a sealed verdict. At this moment one of the Beecher men made an indiscreet remark, which, in no wise affecting the evidence in the case, occasioned a flutter of undue excitement, and had the effect of alienating the minority from the majority. Persistent efforts were made to counteract this act of indiscretion, but the minority, consisting of Jeffrey, Flate and Davis, retiring to the ground they had compacted to abandon, emphatically declined to hold any further argument. They were determined to stand by Tilton. On Sunday there was no balloting, as many of the jury had religious scruples. The ballot, however, on Monday, showed that they had returned to the Tilton side, as the vote stood 9 for Beecher and 3 for Tilton, and from this count there was no variation. The following is a correct account of the division of the jurymen: For Beecher—Chester Carpenter, Griffin B. Halstead, Henry Thyer, George Hull, Christopher Fitter, A. R. Case, Edward Whelan, John McMurn and John F. Taylor. For Tilton—William T. Jeffrey, Samuel Flate and William H. Davis.

Letter from Lawrence.

LAWRENCE, MASS., June 30th.

Editor Chronicle; In a former letter from this beautiful city, I alluded to extensive preparations for a system of water works. I find the operations already under way, with a fair prospect of completion in the coming Fall. With the excellent facilities afforded by Nature, it is a matter of surprise that this work had not been undertaken at an earlier date. Some idea of the magnitude of the proposed system may be gathered from the following statement:

The city is bounded on its Western side by a romantic and sightly elevation, known as "Tower Hill." On the summit of this hill has been made an excavation, the capacity of which is estimated at a trifle less than forty million gallons. The Northern side is strongly fortified upon its interior with heavy granite masonry, while the remaining portion of the walls of the reservoir require no such precaution. From this point to the river, a distance of about half a mile, immense iron pipes are laid, through a tunnel, connecting with the "pumping station." Here, within fifty feet of the river bank stands a handsome brick edifice, of substantial construction and appropriately inscribed.

The engines are in process of erection, and attract many visitors. They were built by I. P. Morris & Co., Port Richmond Iron Works, Philadelphia. The wells are sunk seventy feet below the engine bed-plates, and supply two pumps, each capable of raising six million gallons of water every twenty-four hours. The diameter of high pressure cylinder is 20 inches; low pressure cylinder 40 inches, with a stroke of eight feet. The fly wheel measures thirty feet in diameter, while close at hand lie two massive walking beams, each weighing eleven tons.

This Titanic machinery has no slight labor to perform, in sending a fifteen inch column of water up a grade of one hundred and sixty feet from the bed-plate; but its builders claim that it possesses even greater capacity. The inlet is being laid into the river, the coffer-dam having just reached completion. A portion of the service pipes are already in place, while in view of a possible difficulty at the reservoir, a second delivery pipe proceeds to the city, directly from the pumping station.

No other engines of similar capacity is to be found in New England; the nearest in size may be seen at Lynn, the capacity of which is five million gallons daily, with a seven foot stroke. The city of Lawrence may be congratulated upon this splendid addition to its multitude of attractions, and it is to be hoped that its greatest drawback, a fine, penetrating dust, will be effectually disposed of.

MASONIC.

It was my peculiar good fortune to be present at the regular conclave of Bethany Commandery of Knights Templar, last evening, and to witness the conferring of the order of the Temple upon a candidate, by eminent Sir Wyzeman Marshall. The magnificent apartments, the presence of a host of the chivalry of the Old Bay State, the handsome face and stalwart figure of the whilom Eminent Commander, combined to give to the solemn rite an impressiveness that time can hardly efface. It would amply repay a thousand times a longer pilgrimage than mine.

In olden time, the craft was often reproached—with how much justice, I cannot say—with habits of undue conviviality. I can speak of later days, and testify that the reproach is unmerited. The Sir Knights of Bethany are especially happy in having found a new beverage—most peculiar in its nature, and supplying a want long existing in civilized communities. It bears the euphonic title of "Palm Toddy." It is distilled from the dried leaves of the African date palm, from which tree it derives its name. It contains no alcohol, or at least, so little as to be non-intoxicating, though one should indulge in a barrel-full. Its specific gravity varies from .001 to .001 1-2. It contains eight equivalents of hydrogen; fourteen of carbon; nineteen of oxygen: and three of carbonic acid gas.

Its empirical formula is F2 A6 N4. Palm Toddy is cordial, and stomachic; also, slightly stimulant. In its manufacture, it is highly necessary that the leaves should be thoroughly dried, and well handled. It possesses great general curative properties, and is a specific for Bright's disease. Its distillation begins about the middle of May; and the liquid is in perfection about the 24th of June. The above description is the result of a hasty test; but specimens have been sent to Boston, for a more thorough analysis of its chemical constituents. The results will be made known to the craft, generally, and, I trust, ultimately to the world.

A Democrat Repudiates His Party.

The following letter explains itself. We make no doubt that there are many democrats who think with this writer and they will vote as he will vote next March—to rebuke the chicanery and fraud of the democratic party leaders in this State:—Statesman.

CLAREMONT, June 12, 1875.

Messrs. Editors: I have voted forty years, and have often made the remark that I was proud to be called a democrat. But within the last six weeks that pride has all left me, every whit of it, and never while I live, will I vote again for a democrat for any office whatever. You of course will not ask me why I take this course. You are not so green as that. You do not believe that an honest man could vote with or in a party that will back up the executive or judicial branches of the State government in the course they have pursued in regard to the organization of the Senate. What is it but usurpation of the gravest kind, the like of which was never known since the organization of the government of this State? And if this state of things should be suffered to exist without censure of any kind from official quarters, God only knows where it will end. Therefore I will venture to suggest that articles of impeachment be presented before the close of the present legislature, if there is a member there who has back-bone enough to do it. The commander of the democratic craft has run the ship against a snag, and a big one, too, and she is leaking badly, and I am going to get out of her before she goes down, and thank God I am not the only one of the crew who will take to life boats. I asked a brother democrat the other day what he thought of the proceedings of the Governor and Council, court, etc. Why, he said he thought it was an outrageous usurpation of power; it was virtually disfranchising nearly 4,000 legal voters, and he would not back up such rascality, either by word or deed. And now it is my honest belief that the last act of Weston before abdicating the throne, will be the means of sinking his party below the possibility of resurrection, and that Priest and Proctor and some others will be elected to stay at home next year, and that future generations will rise up and call the usurpers cursed.

Three Attainable Blessings.

A good appetite, vigorous digestion and sound sleep are three blessings that imply a good many more, and are attainable by the daily use of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. The stomach that is invigorated by that ruling tonic rapidly disposes of the food committed to it, and at the proper time craves for more with natural earnestness, and the brain from which pain and despondency have been banished by that salutary anodyne and cheering cordial, enjoys at the hour of rest that tranquil dreamless repose for which no other boon that Providence can bestow can compensate. Besides these most desirable results, the entire physique is strengthened and fortified against the attacks of disease by this splendid vitalized and protective agent, which, take it altogether, is about the most desirable, as it is is unquestionably one of the most popular medicines in existence.

An oriental traveller describes this busy scene, witnessed on historic shores: "Our steamer landed on a beach which was the port of Antioch, where the disciples were first called Christians. There was no town at the water's edge, no people, no wharf. The passengers and the merchandise were put ashore in lighters, which ran up into the sand. A troop of camels, with their drivers, lay on the beach, ready to transport the goods into the interior. Among the articles landed were boxes marked 'DR. J. C. AYER & CO., LOWELL, MASS, U. S. A.,' showing that they contained medicines and whence they came. These with other goods were hoisted on the backs of camels, for transportation to Antioch. Thus the skill of the West sends back its remedies to heal the maladies of populations that inhabit those eastern shores, whence our spiritual manna came."—Windsor (Vt.) Chronicle.

South Mill street has been a scene of tumult of late, and the libations of a few denizens have been frequent. Nathaniel G. Gordon and his wife, the notorious Kate Emery, filled up on Friday night and came to a disagreement Saturday morning. Kate emphasized her declarations of infidelity with her fist, and Gordon's mother-in-law charged the jury against him. Then Nathaniel went abroad and was seen in the dock of Russell & Odion on Water street, from which he was rescued dripping. Then he went home discouraged and came out again more disheartened. Passing over South Mill Bridge he crossed the Salter estate and was last seen alive on the wharf. About noon his dead body was found a short distance below the mill. An inquest was deemed unnecessary.

We shall issue no paper to-morrow.

The New York Evening Post says of the Direct United States cable: "A connection was made with the mainland at Rye Beach, June 9th. Since this connection has been made the electricians in charge of the cable have not been able to send any message through it, and it is not known that even signals have been transmitted. An attempt has since been made to raise the cable where the difficulty was supposed to exist for the purpose of making repairs, but the cable was broken in the attempt. Another effort to repair the cable is already in progress, and is expected to result more successfully."

Only eight years more to the Reunion.

RICHARD IRETON, a legend of the early settlement of New England, by Martha Remick, a Kittery lady whose contributions to the press have made her well known here, is published in Boston by Loring. Dr. Miner says: The plot is well laid, the details are not too full, the interest continually increases, the descriptions are often comprehensive by suggestion, the philosophy is profound, the characters are strongly marked, human nature is accurately depicted, the consummation satisfies our sense of justice, and the moral tone is every way unexceptionable. Add to these excellencies that the style is pure and simple, and we have a productions of very grand merit.—For sale by William B. Lowd.

HORSE RAKE.

Farmers are respectfully requested to inspect these Machines before purchasing elsewhere.
They are believed to be the best Mower and Rake in the Market.
The Mower is strong, durable and of the lightest draft.

IT HAS TAKEN ONE HUNDRED PREMIUMS.

The demand has increased from 200 in 1873 to over 7000 in 1875 which is ample proof of their superiority.
The rake for 1875 is perfected so that by a simple centre-trip attachment, three pounds' pressure with the foot will DUMP THE RAKE.
These Machines can be seen at Hayes Farm and will be cheerfully shown to parties whether they purchase or not. We are ready to compare notes with any other machines in a field trial.

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH OF THE CITY OF PORTSMOUTH call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10 of the City Ordinances and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the city to aid them in the execution of their duty.

CHAPTER X.

Sec. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, &c. shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the health officers may direct.

Sec. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

Sec. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten days from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time above specified.

Sec. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offals of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

Sec. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisance shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

Sec. 12. When any householder shall know that any person within his family is taken sick of the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 13. When any physician shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for each refusal or neglect forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the health officers in the name of the city.

Sec. 16. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other thing deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier —the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may, by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

Sec. 21. No person shall erect, keep or continue or permit to be erected, kept or continued, upon any land occupied by him, any pen for the keeping of swine, or privy, over either of the mill ponds in this city, or so placed that offensive substances therefrom shall be discharged or drained into either of said ponds, or into any creek, or cove or drain leading thereto. And no person shall construct, keep or continue any drain leading from any pen for the keeping of any swine, slaughter-house, privy vault, or other unwholesome or offensive place, into either of said ponds, or to any flat or marsh adjoining the same. And no person shall throw or suffer to be thrown from his land into either of said ponds, or upon any of said flats or marshes, any dead, decaying, unwholesome or offensive animal or vegetable substances.

WORK.

Strong gales keep the clouds from raining;
Work lulls the sad heart's complaining;
[ache;
Through the task and the toil runs the yearning
Yet Duty grows dear for her own grave sake,
And muscles grow stronger for straining.

Each life has some prize for gaining;
Each woe has a balm in its paining;
So we seek for it long in faith and prayer,
For the finger of God is everywhere,
While the days are dawing and warning.

Though the mildew its bloom is straining,
The rose has some scent remaining;
Through the darkest hour, still trust in the light;
What the hand has to do, let it do with its might;
Strong gales keep the clouds from raining.

GOD BLESS THE FARM.

God bless the Farm—the dear old farm!
God bless its very rood,
Where willing hearts and sturdy arms
Can earn an honest livelihood!
Can from the coarse and fertile soil
Win back a recompense for toil.

God bless each meadow, field and nook,
Begemmed with fairest flowers,
And every leaf that's gently shook
By evening breeze or morning showers;
God bless them all! each leaf's a gem
In nature's gorgeous diadem.

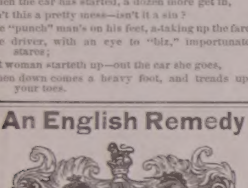
The orchards that, in early spring,
Blush rich in fragrant flowers,
And with each autumn surely bring
Their wealth of fruits in golden showers;
Like pomegranates on Aaron's rod,
A miracle from Nature's God.

And may He bless the farmer's home,
Where peace and p lenty reign;
No happier spot 'neath heaven's high dome
Doth this broad, beauteous earth contain,
Than where, secure from care and strife,
The farmer leads his peaceful life.

Unvexed by toil and tricks for gain,
He turns the fertile mould;
Then scatters on the golden grain,
And reaps reward a hundred fold;
He dwells where grace and beauty charm,
For God hath blessed his home and farm.

Sing a song o' sixpence, a pocket full of "rocks,"
Four and twenty white folks mount a car in flocks;
When the car has started, a dozen more get in,
Isn't this a pretty mess—isn't it a sin?
The "punch" man's on his feet, a-taking up the fares;
The driver, with an eye to "biz," importunately stares;
Fat woman starteth up—out the car she goes,
When down comes a heavy foot, and trends upon your toes.

An English Remedy



THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM
AND TONIC PILLS.
For Nervousness and General Debility,

PREMATURE decay, mental and physical prostration, fear, despondency, over indulgence in the use of opium or alcoholic drinks, tobacco, &c., &c. Medicines unrivalled for their wonderful properties and remarkable cures of all Nervous Complaints. Their efficacy is equally great in the treatment and cure of Cancers, Nodes, Ulcers, Pustules, Pimples, Tetter, Fever Sores, Ringworm, Erysipelas, Scald-Head, Barbers' Itch, Scurvy, Salt Rheum, Grocer's Colored, Blotches, Glandular Swellings, Worms and Black Spots in the flesh, Discoloration, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth and Nose, Sore Legs, and sores of very character, because the medicines are the very best Blood Medicine ever placed before the people, and are warranted to be the most Powerful Alterative ever originated by man. They impart Strength to the Body and Vigor to the Mind, removing Morbid Sensibility, Depression of Spirits, Dementia and Melancholia.

NERVOUS DEBILITY.

However obscure the causes may be which contribute to render nervous debility a disease so prevalent, affecting as it does, nearly one-half of our adult population, it is a melancholy fact that day by day, and year by year, we witness a most frightful increase of nervous affections from the slightest neuralgia to the more grave and extreme forms of Nervous Prostration.

It is of the highest importance, then, that individuals should be able to judge for themselves, by their own feelings, if and to what extent they are attacked by this insidious enemy to ill health, comfort, and even life itself if left to run its course unchecked by the early and proper application of curative remedies.

DRUNKENNESS.

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS is the only remedy that has ever proved by practical experience a sure fit to those who suffer from over-indulgence in alcoholic liquors; it completely destroys the taste for them, and restores the victim of intemperance to health and vigor. A single trial will prove it to be just what it is recommended to be.

Price $2.50. Large size, $5. Each package of the Cordial Balm contains one box of the Tonic Pills, which may also be had separately at 50 cents per box.

RECENT TESTIMONIALS.

FREWSBURGH, Nov. 12, 1874.

I have used the Cordial Balm and Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills as a preventive and cure for the use of ardent spirits and habitual intoxication, and find them actually specific in such cases. I regard them as most invaluable medicines, and nothing could induce me to be without them.

JACOB MESERVE.

TIPTON, Dec. 3, 1874.

We take great pleasure in informing you of the surprisingly beneficial results from the use of your English Remedy, The Cordial Balm of Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills, in a case of great Nervous Debility and Prostration, by a member of our family who had been under treatment by different doctors for nearly three years past without any apparent benefit therefrom; but your medicines have produced a most wonderful change for the better and the patient now enjoys comparatively excellent health. MRS. HARRIET STURLES.

P. S.—We tell all with whom we are acquainte who are similarly afflicted to try your remedies.

OF
MR. SHEWELL,
The Popular Manager of the Boston Theater.
THE GREAT VALUE OF THE
DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

APRIL 4, 1875.

Prof. APPHONSE HILLER: Dear Sir—Many thanks for two bottles of "Diamond Rheumatic Cure" which you so kindly sent me through Mr. Marston, I used but one bottle, which relieved me of a severe attack, and better still, I have not had a twinge since, and I am in hopes that I shall never have another, as the last attack was in July, 1875. Should it, however, return, I still have the other bottle left and shall try it, and expect the same beneficial results. Gratefully yours, L. R. SHEWELL.

The above testimony ought to convince the most skeptical rheumatic that a sure cure has been discovered in the

DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

It is from such results and every day proofs like these that phenomenal cures are now prescribing the DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE as an infallible specific for removing the cause of Gout, Chronic, Acute or Muscular Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Nervous Headache, Neuralgia of the Head, Heart, Stomach and Kidney; Tic Doloreaux, Nervousness, Flying Pains, Twisted Joints, Swollen Joints, Pain in the Back and Loins, Weakness of the Kidneys, Tired feeling, Languid, Weary Prostration, and all Nervous and Chronic Diseases.

Let any sufferer who reads this purchase a small bottle and take it according to the instructions around the package, and it will not take long to convince him that paying doctors' fees is money thrown away —liniments of all kinds are useless.

This medicine is for sale at all Druggists' throughout the United States and Canada. If it happens that your Druggist has not got it in stock, ask him to send for it to the Wholesale Agents, GEORGE C. ZERO REFRIGERATOR

Why the Improved Zero Refrigerator has taken premiums over all others:
It requires less than one half the ice to run it. It dispenses with the nuisance of having a drip pan under it. It is a refrigerator and water cooler combined. It has the dryest provision chamber. It is built in the best manner and style of design. It is the cheapest to buy and it is a perfect Meat, Fish, Fruit and Ice preserver. Send for Illustrated Catalogue, with prices, and study our claims and be convinced for yourself. For sale by John P. Sweetser, 46 Market Street, Portsmouth, N. H.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

s no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not know ing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,
Croup,
Diphtheria,
Asthma, etc.,
—USE—
Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

The Superior Court Outdone.

[Lake Village Times.]

Some of our readers will doubtless remember that several months since our illustrious fellow citizen, Elijah Blaisdell, was rendered miserable by the loss of some dozen or fifteen choice fowl, which were taken from his hen-house in the dead of night. But if his hens were gone, 'Lij' was not the man to sit down and suck his thumbs in hopeless sorrow; oh no! He went to work with all the skill of a scientific detective to unravel the mystery and unmask the thief. It was evident that the rascal was some hen-fancier, as he took only the choice ones from the flock. So a list of this class in Lake Village was made out, as follows: Hamas Tom, Tim. Baker, Geo. Dolloff, Mart. Durrell, John Ira Folsom, Henry B. Quimby, Ralph Aeams, Sam. Clark.

It was figured down so that one of these must be the guilty party, but which? Eight small boys were hired to keep watch round the residences of the above-named parties, and bring in any evidence which they might discover in the shape of feathers, etc. At length, out of the multitudinous fragments of plumage which were brought in by the active skirmishers, 'Lija' recognized one tuft which he was sure belonged to one of his Chittagongs.

Whose back yard, think you, was that found in?

Tom's!

So it was; and he was brought to the bar of justice, and his examination it is our design to report in full, But as we have many points of information on this affair not known to the general public and not produced at the trial, we will begin at the beginning and tell it in our own way, working in our own knowledge with that already made public.

Tom, it appears, had cast sheep's eyes upon the fair possessions of his own neighbor, and coveted them. Like other would-be thieves, he desired to do his stealing in such a manner as to steer clear of the jaws of the State Prison, and following an illustrious precedent, he determined to "consult the court."

So one evening he took a pocketfull of peanuts, and made a neighboral visit to Police-Justice Clark.

"Judge," he exclaimed, patting his old cronie familiarly upon the back, "I am in a devil of a quandary."

"Spit it out, Tom."

"Well," (in a whisper) "can't you find some sort of a law that'll bear me out in stealing a dozen or so of 'Lij' Blaisdell's new lot of hens?"

The Judge thought earnestly for some time.

"No, Tom, I don't believe there's a law that will directly permit stealing."

"But I tell you, Sam, it's for the eternal interest of both of us that we have those hens. I tell you if we don't get them it's just taking the bread and butter out of your mouth. Here you've been waiting twenty years to slip into this nice little berth of Chief Justice of Lake Village, and I tell you if we can't get the hens you're a gone sucker. 'Lij' will feast on them, and get so fat that they'll make him a Judge, and you may have to wait another twenty years before you again attain your present position."

"By George," exclaimed the Judge with a look of alarm; "I aren't sure but th re's something in that. I wouldn't be 'set back' for all the wealth of Ormus or of Ind. You go ahead and steal those hens, and if you are hauled up I'll find some law to clear you. You know 'self-preservation is heaven's first law.' Tom, acted upon this suggestion. He stole those coveted bipeds. 'Lij' got track of him, as before intimated, and had him "pulled."

"The hens belong to me," Tom, brazenly cried.

"To you!" screamed 'Lij.' "Why, you rascal, I bought and paid for them."

"That don't make any difference, it's my constitutional right to take them. You've got as many left as you'd ought to have, anyway. And besides, you probably stole the money to buy them with."

"Well," quietly responded 'Lij,' strong in consciousness of the justice of his cause, "we've got a Court to sit on such cases, and we'll go to that."

"Go and be hanged, but you'll find I'm one of those parties that don't give up a good thing when I've got it, unless I'm forced to."

THE COURT.

"Lij" secured 'Squire Key as counsel and Tom paid Squire Hutchinson $5.00 for an "honest" written opinion as to the merits of the case.

Tom was duly arraigned before Justice Clark. "Your Honor," he pleaded, "there no denyin' that I took those hens, but who's got a better right? It is one of the constitutional privileges of a member of the Hydrographic Survey to take just what he wants, and that's the kind of a clothes-pin I am. I'd like to inquire what in the dickens Blaisdell thinks he can do about it?"

(Here the Court whispered in Tom's ear that it would perhaps be just as well not to mention that the Honorable Court had had a chicken stew of that lot.)

'Lij's counsel briefly presented the case, and as the theft was acknowledged and the Jaw plain, had no doubt as to the decision of the judge.

When he sat down Tom blandly arose and handed to the Court 'Squire Hutchinson's unbiased opinion, with the remark, "Here, your Honor, here's your decision."

The Judge took it, and after glancing at it a few moments, he arose, drew on the black cap, and rendered his DECISION.

"The principles which should govern us in determining grave questions of this nature have been elucidated by eminent counsel and jurists of former days. Cushing in the case N. H. Banditti vs. The People lays down the broad rule that if a Judge don't want to decid eagainst his friends he can dodge.

In this case it appears that Mr. Tom gained actual possession of the property. This is presumptive evidence that it belonged to him. On an impartial consideration of the case I am unable to see that I have anything to do with the matter. If I should criticise the action of Tom it would hurt his feelings, and you must all understand that it would be very improper, to say the least, should one branch of this government presume to criticise the actions of a coordinate branch. I am clerk of the House, and Tom is a Hydrographic commissioner. I refuse to decide at all; the prisoner will be discharged."

Here the counsel for the plaintiff ventured to remonstrate, "Your Honor, isn't this rather an unusual proceeding?" To which His Honor blandly responded, "In the language of the late decision of Judge Ladd, 'If you think you're going to make a board of referees of me you'll find yourself devilishly mistaken.' To which I respond in the language of Judge Smith "I dinks vot you dinks, vot you dinks, hey?" To sum up, I want it distinctly understood that I shan't render any decision in this case unless I can decide for Tom."

The moral of this affair is obvious. Courts may not necessarily be courts of justice.

Daily Chronicle.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 7, 1875.

News and Notes.

Did it ever occur to you that Hon. Aaron H. Cragin would make an excellent candidate for President? Don't you forget it, either!

The time seems to have arrived for Hon. Alexander H. Rice or Hon. George B. Loring to become Governor of Massachusetts. You can't do better than that, friends.

A collision occurred on Monday near Rockaway, N. Y., by which twelve persons were killed and as many more wounded. A train from Williamsburg, heavily laden with passengers, met another train on the same track. The accident was the result of gross carelessness.

John Porter, a boy of thirteen years, was fatally injured at Biddeford on the 5th by the bursting of a small cannon.

Clinton S. Baker, eighteen years old, was killed at Manchester on the 5th by the explosion of a small cannon. He was standing in the doorway of Pennscook hose company's house, a considerable distance away. A fragment of the breech, weighing eleven and a half pounds, struck his head and crushed in the skull. The cannon was of iron and was about two feet and a half long.

Geo. W. Pemberton will be hanged on Friday, Oct. 8, between the hours of nine and eleven o'clock A. M.

Winchester had a $25,000 fire, originating in a restaurant, Tuesday morning. W. S. Phillips, Emerson Cook, E. Wilbur, J. A. Powers, E. Albee, Abel Fosset, Miss Rice and the Masons were burned out.

Theodore Tilton attended Plymouth Church on Sunday, and listened to Mr. Beecher's sermon.

Benj. Haley stabbed John Coffy, a boy, at Newburyport, in the bowels, in a street fight, Sunday night. Coffy died of his wounds on Tuesday.

Some one has been figuring up the expense per head of late administrations, exclusive of war times. Here they are, and they make a pretty good showing, too, for the republican party:

Administrations.	Expense per head.
Polk, democrat	2 05
Taylor and Fillmore, whig	1 89
Pierce, democrat	2 23
Buchanan, democrat	2 23
Lincoln and Johnson, republican	1 96
Grant, republican	1 69

There was a heavy fall of water in Durham village a few nights ago. The broadside of Mrs. Giles' cistern came out, letting thirty hogsheads of water into the cellar. The inmates believed it to be an earthquake on a small scale.

The Amoskeag Company of Manchester is employing a large number of hands in straightening the Merrimac river, by means of which from six to seven acres of made land will be available for manufacturing purposes. A heavy stone wall, fifteen feet high, is being constructed from Mechanics' road to a point in the rear of the Amoskeag mills, nearly half a mile in length, and the filling-in process will be begun as soon as possible.

Col. Waterman Smith's residence at Manchester was destroyed by fire about one o'clock, Sunday morning. Many tramps had been driven from the grounds and a dog had been poisoned. Hearing a noise down stairs, Mr. Smith started with a revolver to ascertain its source. At the head of the stairs he was met by a dense volume of smoke and gas, which completely prostrated him, and he remembers nothing else that occurred until he was found in an insensible state, near the back door of the house, some time afterward. Mrs. Smith, in the meantime, finding that the house was in flames, had thrown a feather bed from the second story window, about fifteen feet from the ground, wrapped herself in quilts and leaped for her life, sustaining no other injury than a bad sprain. The estimated loss is from $45,000 to $50,000. Insured for $20,000. The house was erected about two years since at great expense, and was regarded as one of the finest residences in the state. Everything in the house is a total loss, as nothing was saved except the bedding upon which Mrs. Smith jumped. The wardrobe of the family was valued at $6000, the furniture from $10,000 to $12,000, besides a large quantity of jewelry and silverware.

"I used to tell my ol' friend the Wanderin' Jew," says Governor Allen, "that 'twant no use to wish to die. If he'd only a' drunk Cincinnati whisky like I did he'd a' had sech a foretaste of a hot hereafter that he wouldn't want to die no more'n I do. I used to feel like it 'ud be good to be stowed away, 'fore I struck that article, but I'm satisfied with this climate now."

Miss Susan B. Anthony, one of the persons to whom Mrs. Tilton is said to have confessed, is editing the Leavenworth Times during the illness of her brother, who is its proprietor. One of her editorial articles reviews Mr. Beecher's public life approvingly, and adds: "To err is human, and if a man falls once, we should not strike him while prostrate, but allow him to make another effort to gain the foothold he has lost. The Americans are a fair, liberal-minded people, who, believing Beecher guilty, will yet always remember him as the greatest of pulpit orators, and a true friend to the oppressed of every race."

Uncle William, of Ohio, gets up in the morning now, works his old joints until they stop creaking, straightens himself up and mutters: "Tilden's no man for the presidency; he's too young."—St. Louis Republican.

Prof. Ward of Syracuse University has come into possession of what is pronounced a veritable American crocodile, an animal whose existence in this country has long been in dispute. The specimen was shot in Florida last winter, and is fourteen feet long.

Rev. Phebe A. Hanaford of Jersey City (Universalist) recently exchanged pulpits with her son, Rev. H. A. Hanaford (of St. Paul's Church), at Little Falls, N. Y. The first pastoral exchange on record between mother and son.

The Cucuta Earthquake.

Later advices from different places in Colabra more than confirm the reported horrors of the earthquake in May last. A letter from Salazar of May 28, says Cucuta is a dreadful sight; everything is in ruins, and not a house remains standing. Thieves and robbers from the surrounding country have swept down on the ill-fated city and hardly a single safe has been saved from the custom house.

Four hundred mules were killed in the streets, and there is no one to remove them; the stench is becoming frightful. The villages of San Cristobal, Taribs, Guasimo, Cafracho, San Antonio, Lobaters, San Juan, De Wrena, Rosario and San Cayetano are completely destroyed. The storehouse at Puerto De Los Cachos was sacked and burned by the bandits. A letter from Ocana, May 30, says 10,000 people were killed at Cucuta, in addition to other thousands who were seriously wounded and bruised. Death and desolation reigned everywhere. Great numbers of haciendas were destroyed, and hundreds of houses in the country were overthrown, leaving people homeless and consigned to poverty. Many trees were torn up by the roots, and small hills were opened like melons. The cause of the great catastrophe is, of course, unknown, and the precise place of its first manifestation. Some suppose that the volcano of Sobaters, which was in action in 1848, is again breaking out, while others say that a new volcano has appeared in the hills of Gracha. A dispatch to President Perez, from Chinacota, May 24th, says: "The mountain of San Jose Posano and San Cayetano have disappeared. The rest of the department is in ruins. More than 4000 people have perished." A dispatch from Socorro, May 24th, says the situation is assuming a grave aspect, and sickness and starvation in Pamplona are increasing.

Pools on the Presidency.

The following is from a Washington letter in the Philadelphia Star:

Some of the gentlemen in one of the principal social clubs in this city have organized a pool selling meeting on political candidates for once a week until the Presidential nominations take place. I was present at the last meeting, and it will be seen from the betting how these people look at the chances of the many political candidates. For the republican Presidential nominations the following names are entered: Grant, Blaine, Washburne, Wilson, Bristow, Butler, Jewell, Conkling, Logan, Morton, Fish, Judge Miller, Hawley and Governor Noyes. Fifty-four pools have been sold up to date, with the following result:

Seventeen, in which Blaine is selected as first choice; thirteen, in which Washburne is first; ten, in which Bristow comes to the front; five, in which Morton leads off; three, where Grant has the call; the same number in which Wilson was first, and three in which Logan is the leader. The others are all bunched in the field. It will be seen by this that Blaine, Washburne and Bristow are the favorites, and that there are still some who believe in a third term.

On the democratic prospects the following entries are made: Hendricks, Judge Davis, Tilden, Thurman, Old Bill Allen, Bayard, Seymour, Church, Governor Gaston, Charles Francis Adams and Pendleton. In all the pools sold, excepting seven, Hendricks was the choice, with Tilden, Bayard and Adams competing for second choice. In the seven pools carried against Hendricks Judge Davis was the choice in two, Tilden in one, Old Bill Allen in three, and Bayard in one.

On the Fall elections in Ohio and Pennsylvania the democracy were the favorites, with slight odds of the former, and on the latter the betting was even up.

A bet of $500 was made that if Noyes beats old Bill Allen for Governor in Ohio next Fall he will be the republican candidate for Vice President, and the republicans will carry the presidential election.

History in a Bottle.

[Wichita Beacon.]

No little interest has been manifested in the German family, a portion of whom were brutally murdered by the Cheyenne and Arraphoe Indians while on their way from Georgia to Colorado, and the remainder, the two eldest daughters, carried into captivity, though now happily restored to civilization once more. The particulars of their capture, and the tales of their terrible suffering while held by the savages, are heart-rendring in the extreme, and are familiar to our readers; but there is another little unpublished episode connected with their checkered career which we will give our readers. Some time since, we are informed by Wm. Redus, of Texas, a bottle was picked up on the beach of the Gulf of Mexico, near the mouth of the Brazos river, which, upon examination, was found to contain a paper on which was written an account of the capture of the German girls and the names of the various members of the family, how the parents were murdered, together with other facts and incidents; also, their approximate location and temporary camp, which was evidently on the headwaters of the Brazos. This bottle had been corked up tightly by Catharine and Sophia, the two eldest girls, and thrown into the river, in hopes it might reach civilization in that way, and, strange to say, after having traveled 800 or 1,000 miles along the devious winding and changing current of the Lone Star State's most magnificent stream, it was picked up in the Gulf of Mexico, many weeks after the captive girls had written this bottle history of their sufferings, and about the same time the story of their eventful and horrible eight months' captivity was given to the world from thei own lips.

Poor Old Soldier.

[Indianapolis Herald.]

He carried traces of the last haystack he slept in, about his hair and beard, and his calico shirt was ragged and dirty. His breath was corn-beer on a substratum of "hoodlum's delight." For five years he answered to roll-call, slept in dog-tents, marched, fought and performed all the other duties of a soldier. He has a bullet in his hip and his name on the pension rolls. But he is "broken down," played out, a perfect wreck, without a home, hope or ambition. How did he get that black eye? A fightin', of course. Anybody could whip him now. A good puff of wind from a strong man would blow him out like a candle. But he had fit for five years into the war, and he wasn't a goin' to let any blasted fool shoot off his mouth 'thout a reachin' for him, even if he knowed he'd get licked. It didn't matter how soon he was wiped out, anyhow. Brace up? 'Twan't no use. He was too far gone. No, he wasn't hungry, and he didn't care for clothes nor a place to sleep in. All he wanted was whisky. He wouldn't lie about it, either. He wasn't a going to pretend that he wanted money to buy something to eat and then go off and spend it for whisky. No use to preach to him. When he was drunk he didn't feel his misery. With tremulous fingers the poor old soldier clutched the few nickels given him, and hobbled in eager haste to the nearest beer shop.

Takin' Vacation.

A boy in ragged garb had been sitting under the fountain in front of the Y. M. C. A. rooms for some time yesterday afternoon, and the people keeping stores around there were beginning to get tired of seeing him monopolizing so much room, distorting the scenery and frightening the horses driven up to the iron trough for drink.

"What you doing here?" at length inquired a man, sauntering toward the lad from a neighboring door.

"Oh, enjoying myself," was the answer.

"Don't you think you'd better be out selling papers or something, making some money?" suggested the adult.

"That's my biz," responded the gamin; "I ain't no 'rag,' I ain't."

"I shouldn't think you would be sitting round here so long, then," said the man.

"Well, you see, mister,"—and the boy grew confidential—"I'm kinder layin' off, cause as how, you see a gentlemun gin me a dollar for holdin' his horse, this noon, an' I reckoned I could 'ford to spend a little time at some waterin' place!"

He was permitted to remain.

Settled.

[Memphis Avalanche.]

It was all about a kitten. The Dardanelle (Ark.) Independent contained a paragraph denouncing some "dirty low-born brute"—name unknown—who had so mutilated a kitten as to "just leave life in its little body." It seems that Captain R. W. Wishard, who had probably kicked the conceit out of a cat, regarded the item as a gross personal reflexion on his "honah." He called on Mr. Cloyd, who acknowledged paternity of the paragraph. "We will settle this thing—no use being in a hurry"—solemnly observed Captain Wishard, as he moved off majestically. Mr. Cloyd happened to know what "settling things" meant. Three hours later Captain Wishard returned. The words were few, but some moments after it would have been difficult for an expert to note the distinguishing features between Captain Wishard's body and a lead mine. "This thing" was settled.

—A hired girl in the employ of a West street family, Danbury, discovereda unique way of extracting teeth. She suffered nearly a whole week with an aching tooth, but had not the courage to go to a dentist. One afternoon it troubled her so much as to force her to look for a remedy, and she finally hit upon a plan. With a piece of stout twine she made a loop, which she put about her tooth. Then she took a bit of soap and rubbed it on the floor, opposite the back door. The other end of the twine she fastened to the knob of the closed door. Then she took a position on the soaped boards, and commenced to lean back. When she had acquired a slope of about forty-five degrees, the soap suddenly took hold, and she came down on the floor with such force as to knock a pair of ten dollar vases from a mantel up stairs. And there she sat, reaching out for breath, when the affrighted family made their appearance, while the offending tooth dangled from a string against the door.

—The immensity of the national debts is exhibited by Blackwood's Magazine, which shows that since 1860, when America entered the money market as borrower, at a prodigious rate, the indebtedness of the world has increased at the average rate of two hundred millions a year. It then goes on to say, "If this average is kept up, in twenty-five years more the total debt of the world will reach ten thousand millions, the interest of which, taken at the average rate of five per cent., will amount to the present aggregate public revenues of all the States of Europe and North America."

—The Chicago Tribune tells of a swarm of grasshoppers which moving at the rate of fifteen miles an hour, occupied sixty hours in passing over a town in Missouri, and was estimated to be from thirty to seventy-five miles wide and a half a mile deep.

—Near Creston, Iowa, a murderer, being pursued and surrounded by horsemen, coolly drew a razor from his pocket, and remarking, "I suppose you think you've got me now," cut his throat from ear to ear.

—The Eastern Free Press says that Joshua was the first man who ever took a newspaper. He stopped the Daily Sun. We suppose he did so because the war news did not suit him.

Three Attainable Blessings.

A good appetite, vigorous digestion and sound sleep are three blessings that imply a good many more, and are attainable by the daily use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. The stomach that is invigorated by that ruling tonic rapidly disposes of the food committed to it, and at the proper time craves for more with natural earnestness, and the brain from which pain and despondency have been banished by that salutary anodyne and cheering cordial, enjoys at the hour of rest that tranquil dreamless repose for which no other boon that Providence can bestow can compensate. Besides these most desirable results, the entire physique is strengthened and fortified against the attacks of disease by this splendid vitalized and protective agent, which, take it altogether, is about the most desirable, as it is in unquestionably one of the most popular medicines in existence.

An oriental traveller describes this busy scene, witnessed on historic shores: "Our steamer landed on a beach which was the port of Antioch, where the disciples were first called Christians. There was no town at the water's edge, no people, no wharf. The passengers and the merchandise were put ashore in lighters, which ran up into the sand. A troop of camels, with their drivers, lay on the beach, ready to transport the goods into the interior. Among the articles landed were boxes marked 'DR. J. C. AYER & CO., LOWELL, MASS, U. S. A.,' showing that they contained medicines and whence they came. These with other goods were hoisted on the backs of camels, for transportation to Antioch. Thus the skill of the West sends back its remedies to heal the maladies of populations that inhabit those eastern shores, whence our spiritual manna came."—Windsor (Vt.) Chronicle.

Local Matters.

Disorder and Disturbance.

It was very unfortunate for the peace of this community that Portsmouth was in democratic hands on the occasion of the ninety-ninth anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, and that the "glorious Fourth" should have taken a notion to appear on Sunday in 1875. The racket commenced on Saturday night and a general filling up on the part of the "boys" ensued, judging by the staggerers about the public streets. Noise and coufusion reigned, and exuberant enthusiasm overflowed in snatches of song and uproarious chorus, which died away as the midnight clocks tolled the approach of Sunday.

There must have been an energetic and industrious hoisting in of liquids on the Sabbath, judging by the uproar that commenced soon after dark. The streets were thronged with "wild" young men in good clothes and shouting accompaniments. They found easy entrance to grog-shops and made their vicinity a Pandemonium. Market Square boasted its usual bon-fire, and the destructive element of the floating population had full sway. The police were powerless, the economy of democratic government being fully tested by the neglect to appoint a competent corps of specials to keep down disorder. Your true democrat when in power seldom has the foresight or inclination to apply an ounce of prevention if his constituents desire to show their disregard of all decency. So the mob had full sway. They decorated the residence of Alderman Sise with a sign taken from Richards Avenue, and removed from the residence of Alderman W. H. Y. Hackett a dozen or more blinds, which were either burned or hidden away. Awning frames and signs were torn from their fastenings and with the blinds from a house on Ladd street thrown on the bon-fire. Devilry incarnate seemed to possess the unchecked mob, who in many cases destroyed property from sheer "cussedness." Among those who suffered by their depredations were S. S. Frye & Son, Aaron Akerman and J. E. Ham & Co. Glass was smashed in many buildings and several lamp-posts—and a chain in front of Rider & Cotton's store was stretched across Market street. It is peculiarly pleasing to note that the individual who was putting Ham & Co.'s sign on the bon-fire went down under a blow from the fist of a young man who was personally interested.

It was a general cause of regret that the city authorities did not prevent the explosion of fire-crackers and fire-arms on Market Square, Monday evening. The Naval Band gave a fine concert, which was attended by thousands of people, many carriages being filled with ladies. The tax-payers paid for the enjoyment of the occasion, yet careless men and boys were allowed to explode every species of fireworks they chose, frightening horses and exposing to danger those in the teams as well as persons in the dense crowd. A shower finally sent the masses home, and the grand jubilee of disorder ended.

Picnics

Daily attract hundreds to the beautiful groves and beaches about Portsmouth and its environs. On Monday, a party of about fifty spent the "glorious" Fifth at the Laighton farm, (Stratham Hill,) to which place they were transported by Mr. Plaisted's teams. An excellent string band of five pieces, led by Mr. Ralph Reinwalt, furnished dance music. The party picnicked on the lawn and were furnished with strawberries by Mr. and Mrs. Foss, (who reside at the farm,) and are especially indebted to Messrs. John Laighton and Samuel Dodge for courteous attention. Singing, dancing, croquet and foot-ball were the principal amusements, a climb to the summit of the hill rewarding those who essayed it. A refreshing shower which fell in the afternoon by no means dampened the spirits of the party.

On Tuesday, Mr. Plaisted carried several hundred members of the "Sovereigns of Industry" to Wallis' Sands, where they had a grand picnic and spent the sultry day pleasantly and comfortably.

Those "Horribles."

One of the most ludicrous effects imaginable was the appearance of the Naval Band on Monday, escorting about town a meagre array of Fantastics. The band played finely, as it always does, and the burlesquers were especially happy in their hits, though few in number. A company of boys, masked and dressed in military style, with collar boxes for knapsacks, and bearing a banner with an inscription suggesting that with a few more offices and $500 more from the city they would manage to get along, drew general attention as a very successful burlesque on the "recent" Independent Battalion. The "oration" was delivered on Market Square to a crowd too large to hear it, and was pointed and witty. The first prize, for the worst looking team, was awarded to Delhi Spinney, who received $10 for putting pants on his horse and dressing the wagon with rags. Frank P. Hill received $5, the second prize, being the worst dressed person on horseback, costumed in rags, representing Beecher on the "ragged edge." Walter Brown was awarded the third prize, $2.50, being dressed as a negro wench.

Jottings.

The new band gave a very acceptable concert on Haymarket Square on the morning of the 5th.

The cruelty society are projecting a Shoals excursion for next week.

Dow's awning on Market street was set on fire on the 5th by fire crackers, and was partially consumed.

An adjourned meeting to consider the establishment of a military company was held on the afternoon of the 5th at the City Rooms. Col. William H. Sise, Major Daniel J. Vaughan, and Messrs. Chas. C. Guppy, Geo. E. Hodgdon and Chas. M. Laighton were appointed a committee to draft a constitution and by-laws.

An old house at Kittery Point was burned on the night of the 4th. Loss trifling.

At the second annual meeting of the Reunion Committee of 1875, on the 5th, a communication was read from Samuel J. Nowell, Esq., chairman of the New York association, and it was voted to appoint a committee of twenty-five to arrange the programme for 1876.

Hugh McCann has one finger less than he had previous to the 5th, having blown the right forefinger off by the premature discharge of a pistol.

A race at the Trotting Park, on the 5th, resulted in an award of first money ($60) to bay gelding Sam in 3.01 and 3.09. John S. Treat's Kitty won the first heat in three minutes and took the second prize, $25. The third prize, $15, went to Wood. Locke's bay mare Edith Knox. A race was then trotted between Mr. Duntley's horse from Greenland, and Chas. Smith's horse of Dover, for a purse of $10 in gold to the horse driven nearest to 2.55, and was won by Mr. Duntley, his horse crossing the score in 2.53.

The flag was flying at half-mast on the liberty pole at Liberty bridge, Tuesday, in memory of the late Jonathan M. Tredick. Mr. T. was the last survivor but one (William A. Vaughan, Esq.,) of the original donors to the flag staff, which was erected July 4th, 1824.

Does it occur to you that strawberries are exceedingly sour this year?

Chief Engineer Thom Williamson is detached from U. S. S. Lancaster and ordered to the Brooklyn as Fleet Engineer of the South Atlantic squadron.

Shaw, of the Aurora (Ill.) Herald, buys his strawberries at the rate of three boxes for a quarter.

"POPULAR RESORTS," a handsomely printed and bound volume of 360 pages, contains information that can be found in no other guide book published. Col. John B. Bachelder is the author. The contents are very attractive and include a railroad map, 152 illustrations and well written descriptions of watering places from Canada to California. It fills a place in illustrated literature heretofore unoccupied. While it gives clearly the information required by the tourist, it also forms a beautiful table-book, valuable either as a souvenir of travel, or a descriptive work on popular localities. The large demand last year proved most fully that such a publication was required and appreciated by the travelling public. The knowledge of this fact has determined Col. Bachelder to make this a standard work, and issue it annually, each year adding to the illustrated descriptions. It may be ordered at any bookstore. Price $2.

Michael O'Brien, while at work unloading a coal schooner at Railroad Wharf, was seriously injured Tuesday afternoon by the falling of a staging, fracturing his collar-bone in two places. His right cheek was cut entirely through, and he also received a cut on the right temple, and a severe contusion on the right hip. He was attended by Dr. Whittier, and is in a comfortable condition.

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH OF THE CITY OF PORTSMOUTH call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10 of the City Ordinances and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the city to aid them in the execution of their duty.

CHAPTER X.

Sec. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, &c. shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the health officers may direct.

Sec. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

Sec. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten days from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time above specified.

Sec. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offals or fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

Sec. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisances shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

Sec. 12. When any householder shall know that any person within his family is taken sick of the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 13. When any physician shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for each refusal or neglect forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the health officers in the name of the city.

Sec. 16. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy the nuisance or other thing deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier shall notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may, by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

Sec. 21. No person shall erect, keep or continue or permit to be erected, kept or continued, upon any land occupied by him, any pen for the keeping of swine, or privy, over either of the mill ponds in this city, or so placed that offensive substances therefrom shall be discharged or drained into either of said ponds, or into any creek, or cove or drain leading thereto. And no person shall construct, keep or continue any drain leading from any pen for the keeping of any swine, slaughter-house, privy vault, or other unwholesome or offensive place, into either of said ponds, or to any flat or marsh adjoining the same. And no person shall throw or suffer to be thrown from his land into either of said ponds, or upon any of said flats or marshes, any dead, decaying, unwholesome or offensive animal or vegetable substances.

Daily Chronicle.

—Governor Allen says that trouble in his old friend Potiphar's house made twice as much trouble as this scandal does, but the lady in that case was a different sort of person from this lady. He says she gave him a pretty tight race once, himself, and captured him on the home stretch. "But they managed things differently in those days," says he. "I was put at hard labor in the brickyards for 100 years that time, and I had to live on straw all the whole term. That's where I got my complexion—sunburnt." Here the old man shuts one eye and puts his finger beside his nose. "To tell the truth, I didn't run as fast as I ought-er."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

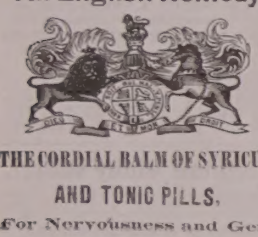
—Origin of the barber's poles: In ancient times the calling of the surgeon and barber were always united in one person. It was the custom of the barber and leach to hang a bloody bandage outside the door to denote that he also followed the profession of the surgeon. The bloody cloth was afterward wound about the door-post, then upon a post in front of the door, and at last the post was merely painted to represent the red-stained bandage.

—A Chicago man was recently captured by a band of marauding Indians near Fort Laramie, and as the only hope of saving his scalp he began talking about the greatness of Chicago, and with such singular effect that they immediately left him, one of the braves remarking as he did so, "Sheecago man heap much dam too big talker for Injun. Cheyenne lose um left ear stay listen longer."

—John Henry of the Cincinnati Times says: "Eye tooth the liberty of telling my wife she had no teeth toothpick of, and am now useing Smith's salve for the bruise over my ear."

—Why should the Beecher jury complain of confinement? Haven't they just had a week or more of the breezes of wry Beach? —Cinn. Times.

An English Remedy



THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM

AND TONIC PILLS.

For Nervousness and General Debility.

PREMATURE decay, mental and physical prostration, fear, despondency, over indulgence in the use of opium or alcoholic drinks, tobacco, &c., &c. Medicines unrivalled for their wonderful prop erties and remarkable cures of all Nervous Complaints. Their efficacy is equally great in the treatment and cure of Cancers, Nodes, Ulcers, Pustules, Pimples, Tetter, Fever Sores, Ringworm, Erysipelas, Scald-Head, Barbers' Itch, Scurvy, Salt Rheum, Copper Colored Blotches, Glandular Swelling, Worms and Black Spots in the flesh, Discolorations, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth and Nose, Sore Legs, and sores of every character, because the medicines are the very best Blood Medicine ever placed before the people, and are warranted to be the most Powerful Alterative ever originated by man. They impart Strength to the Body and Vigor to the Mind, removing Morbid Sensibility, Depression of Spirits, Dementia and Melancholia.

NERVOUS DEBILITY.

However obscure the causes may be which contribute to render nervous debility a disease so prevalent, affecting as it does, nearly one-half of our adult population, it is a melancholy fact that day by day, and year by year, we witness a most frightful increase of nervous affections from the slightest neuralgia to the more grave and extreme forms of Nervous Prostration.

It is of the highest importance, then, that individuals should be able to judge for themselves, by their own feelings, if and to what extent they are attacked by this insidious enemy to ill health, comfort, and even life itself if left to run its course unchecked by the early and prompt application of curative remedies.

DRUNKENNESS.

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS is the only remedy that has ever proved by practical experience a benefit to those who suffer from over-indulgence in alcoholic liquors; it completely destroys the taste for them, and restores the victim of intemperance to health and vigor. A single trial will prove it to be just what it is recommended to be.

Price $2.50. Large size, $5. Each package of the Cordial Balm contains one box of the Tonic Pills, which may also be had separately at 50 cents per box.

RECENT TESTIMONIALS.

FREWSBURGH, Nov. 12, 1874.

I have used the Cordial Balm and Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills as a preventive and cure for the use of ardent spirits and habitual intoxication, and find them actually specific in such cases. I regard them as most invaluable medicines, and nothing could induce me to be without them.

JACOB MESERVE.

TIPTON, Dec. 3, 1874.

We take great pleasure in informing you of the surprisingly beneficial results from the use of your English Remedy, The Cordial Balm of Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills, in a case of great Nervous Debility and Prostration, by a member of our family who had been under treatment by different doctors for nearly three years past without any apparent benefit therefrom; but your medicines have produced a most wonderful change for the better and the patient now enjoys comparatively excellent health. MRS. HARRIET STURGISS.

P. S.—We tell all with whom we are acquainte who are similarly afflicted to try your medicines.

Convincing and Satisfatory RESULTS.

OF

MR. SHEWELL,

The Popular Manager of the Boston Theater.

THE GREAT VALUE OF THE

DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

APRIL 4, 1873.

Prof. ATHONSE HILLER: Dear Sir—Many thanks for two bottles of "Diamond Rheumatic Cure" which you so kindly sent me through Mr. Marston, I used but one bottle, which relieved me of a severe attack, and better still, I have not had a twinge since, and I am in hopes that I shall never have another, as the last attack was in July, 1873. Should it, however, return, I still have the other bottle left and shall try it, and expect the same beneficial results. Gratefully yours,

L. R. SHEWELL.

The above testimony ought to convince the most skeptical rheumatic that a sure cure has been discovered in the

DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

It is from such results and every day proofs like these that physicians are now prescribing the DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE as an infallible specific for removing the cause of Gout, Chronic, Acute or Muscular Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Nervous Headache, Neuralgia of the Head, Heart, Stomach and Kidney; Tic Doloreaux, Nervousness, Flying Pains, Twisted Joints, Swollen Joints, Pain in the Back and Loins, Weakness of the Kidneys, Tired feeling, Languid, Weary Prostration, and all Nervous and Chronic Diseases.

Let any sufferer who reads this purchase a small bottle and take it according to the instructions around the package, and it will not take long to convince him that paying doctors' fees is money thrown away —liniments of all kinds are useless.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

s no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not know ing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, etc.,

—USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. A MEMORABLE MURDER.

Celia Thaxter's Narrative of Wagner's Terrible Crime.

[Atlantic Monthly.]

At the Isles of Shoals, on the 5th of March in the year 1873, occurred one of the most monstrous tragedies ever enacted on this planet. The sickening details of the double murder are well known; the newspapers teemed with them for months; but the pathos of the story is not realized; the world does not know how gentle a life these poor people led, how innocently happy were their quiet days. They were all Norwegians. The more I see of the natives of this far-off land, the more I admire the fine qualities which seem to characterize them as a race. Gentle, faithful, intelligent, God-fearing human beings, they daily use such courtesy toward each other and all who come in contact with them, as puts our ruder Yankee manners to shame. The men and women living on this lonely island were like the sweet, honest simple folks we read of in Bjornson's charming Norwegian stories, full of kindly thoughts and ways. The murdered Anethe might have been the Eli of Bjornson's beautiful Arne or the Ragnhild of Boyesen's lovely romance. They rejoiced to find a home just such as they desired in this peaceful place. The women took such pleasure in the little house which they kept so neat and bright, in their flock of hens, their little dog Ringe, and their humble belongings! The Norwegians are an exceptionally affectionate people; family ties are very strong and precious among them. Let me tell the story ot their sorrow as simply as may be:

Louis Wagner murdered Anethe and Karen Christensen at midnight on the 5th of March, two years ago last spring. The whole affair shows the calmness of a practical hand; there was no malice in the deed, no heat; it was one of the coolest instances of deliberation ever chronicled in the annals of crime. He admits that these people had shown him nothing but kindness. He says in so many words, "They were my best friends." They looked upon him as a brother. Yet he did not hesitate to murder them. The island called Smutty-Nose by human perversity (since in old times it bore the pleasanter title of Haley's Island) was selected to be the scene of this disaster. Long ago I lived two years upon it, and know well its whitened ledges and grassy slopes, its low thickets of wild-rose and bayberry, its sea-wall still intact, connecting it with the small island Malaga, opposite Appledore, and the ruined break-water which links it with Cedar Island on the other side. A lonely cairn, erected by some long ago forgotten fishermen or sailors, stands upon the highest rock at the southeastern extremity; at its western end a few houses are scattered, small, rude dwellings, with the square old Haley house near; two or three fish-houses are falling into decay about the water-side, and the ancient wharf drops stone by stone into the little cove, where every day the tide ebbs and flows and ebbs again with pleasant sound and freshness. Near the houses is a small grave-yard, where a few of the natives sleep, and not far, the graves of the fourteen Spaniards lost in the wreck of the ship Sagunto in the year 1813. I used to think it was a pleasant place, that low, rocky, and grassy island, though so wild and lonely.

From the little town of Laurvig, near Christiania, in Norway, came John and Maren Hontvet to this country, and five years ago took up their abode in this desolate spot, in one of the cottages facing the cove and Appledore. And there they lived through the long winters and the lovely summers, John making a comfortable living by fishing, Maren his wife, keeping as bright and tidy and sweet a little home for him as man could desire. The bit of a garden they cultivated in the summer was a pleasure to them; they made their house as pretty as they could with paint and paper and gay pictures, and Maren had a shelf for her plants at the window; and John was always so good to her, so kind and thoughtful of her comfort and of what would please her, she was entirely happy. Sometimes she was a little lonely, perhaps, when he was tossing afar off on the sea, setting or hauling his trawls, or had sailed to Portsmouth to sell his fish. So that she was doubly glad when the news came that some of her people were coming over from Norway to live with her. And first, in the month of May, 1871, came her sister Karen, who stayed only a short time with Maren, and then came to Appledore, where she lived at service two years, till within a fortnight of her death. The first time I saw Maren, she brought her sister to us, and I was charmed with the little woman's beautiful behavior; she was so gentle, courteous, decorous, she left on my mind a most delightful impression. Her face struck me as remarkably good and intelligent, and her gray eyes were full of light.

Karen was a rather sad-looking woman, about twenty-nine years old; she had lost a lover in Norway long since, and in her heart she fretted and mourned for this continually; she could not speak a word of English at first, but went patiently about her work and soon learned enough, and proved herself an excellent servant, doing faithfully and thoroughly everything she undertook, as is the way of her people generally. Her personal neatness was most attractive. She wore gowns made of cloth woven by herself in Norway, a coarse blue stuff, always neat and clean, and often I used to watch her as she sat by the fire spinning at a spinning-wheel brought from her own country; she made such a pretty picture, with her blue gown and fresh white apron, and the nice, clear white muslin bow with which she was in the habit of fastening her linen collar, that she was very agreeable to look upon. She had a pensive way of letting her head droop a little sideways as she spun, and while the low wheel hummed monotonously, she would sit crooning sweet, sad old Norwegian airs by the hour together, perfectly unconscious that she was affording such pleasure to a pair of appreciative eyes. On the 12th of October, in the second year of her stay with us, her brother, Ivan Christensen, and his wife, Anethe Mathea, came over from their Norseland in an evil day, and joined Maren and John at their island, living in the same house with them.

Ivan and Anethe had been married only since Christmas of the preceding year. Ivan was tall, light-haired, rather quiet and grave. Anethe was young, fair, and merry, with thick, bright sunny hair, which was so long it reached, when unbraided, nearly to her knees; blue-eyed, with brilliant teeth and clear, fresh complexion, beautiful, and beloved beyond expression by her young husband, Ivan. Matthew Hontvet, John's brother, had also joined the little circle a year before, and now Maren's happiness was complete. Delighted to welcome them all, she made all things pleasant for them, and she told me only a few days ago, "I never was so happy in my life as when we were all living there together." So they abode in peace and quiet, with not an evil thought in their minds, kind and considerate toward each other, the men devoted to their women and the women repaying them with interest, till out of the perfectly cloudless sky one day a bolt descended, without a whisper of warning, and brought ruin and desolation into that peaceful home.

Louis Wagner, who had been in this country seven years, appeared at the Shoals two years before the date of the murder. He lived about the islands during that time. He was born in Ueckermunde, a small town of lower Pomerania, in Northern Prussia. Very little is known about him, though there were vague rumors that his past life had not been without difficulties, and he had boasted foolishly among his mates that "not many had done what he had done and got off in safety;" but people did not trouble themselves about him or his past, all having enough to do to earn their bread and keep the wolf from the door. Maren describes him as tall, powerful, dark, with a peculiar quiet manner. She says she never saw him drunk—he seemed always anxious to keep his wits about him: he would linger on the outskirts of a drunken brawl, listening to and absorbing everything, but never mixing himself up in any disturbance. He was always lurking in corners, lingering, looking, listening, and he would look no man straight in the eyes. She spoke, however, of having once heard him disputing with some sailors, at the table, about some point of navigation; she did not understand it, but all were against Louis, and, waxing warm, all strove to show him he was in the wrong. As he rose and left, the table she heard him mutter to himself with an oath, "I know I'm wrong, but I'll never give in!" During the winter preceding the one in which his hideous deed was committed, he lived at Star Island and fished alone, in a wherry; but he made very little money, and came often over to the Hontvets, where Maren gave him food when he was suffering from want, and where he received always a welcome and the utmost kindness. In the following June he joined Hontvet in his business of fishing, and took up his abode as one of the family at Smutty-Nose. During the summer he was "crippled," as he said, by the rheumatism, and they were all very good to him, and sheltered, fed, nursed, and waited upon him the greater part of the season. He remained with them five weeks after Ivan and Anethe arrived, so that he grew to know Anethe as well as Maren, and was looked upon as a brother by all of them, as I have said before. Nothing occurred to show his true character, and in November he left the island and the kind people whose hospitality he was to repay so fearfully, and going to Portsmouth he took passage in another fishing schooner, the Addison Gilbert, which was presently wrecked off the coast, and he was again thrown out of employment. Very recklessly he said to Waldemar Ingebertsen, to Charles Jonsen, and even to John Hontvet himself, at different times, that "he must have money if he murdered for it." He loafed about Portsmouth eight weeks, doing nothing. Meanwhile Karen left our service in February, intending to go to Boston and work at a sewing machine, for she was not strong and thought she would like it better than housework, and before going she lingered awhile with her sister Maren—fatal delay for her! Maren told me that during this time Karen went to Portsmouth and had her teeth removed, meaning to provide herself with a new set. At the Jonsens', where Louis was staying, one day she spoke to Mrs. Jonsen of her mouth, that it was so sensitive since the teeth had been taken out; Mrs. Jonsen asked her how long she must wait before the new set could be put in. Karen replied that it would be three months. Louis Wagner was walking up and down at the other end of the room with his arms folded, his favorite attitude. Mrs. Jonsen's daughter passed near him and heard him mutter, "Three months! What is the use! In three months you will be dead!" He did not know the girl was so near, and turning, he confronted her. He knew she must have heard what he said, and he glared at her like a wild man.

On the fifth day of March, 1873, John Hontvet, his brother Matthew, and Ivan Christensen set sail in John's little schooner, the Clara Bella, to draw their trawls. At that time four of the islands were inhabited: one family on White Island, at the light-house; the workmen who were building the new hotel on Star Island, and one or two households beside; the Hontvet family at Smutty-Nose; and on Appledore, the household at the large house, and on the southern side, opposite Smutty-Nose, a little cottage, where lived Jorge Edvardt Ingebertsen, his wife and children, and several men who fished with him. Smutty-Nose is not in sight of the large house at Appledore, so we were in ignorance of all that happened on that dreadful night, longer than the other inhabitants of the Shoals.

John, Ivan and Matthew went to draw their trawls, which had been set some miles to the eastward of the islands. They intended to be back to dinner, and then go on to Portsmouth with their fish, and bait the trawls afresh, ready to bring back to set again next day. But the wind was strong and fair for Portsmouth and ahead for the islands; it would have been a long boat home against it; so they went on to Portsmouth, without touching at the island to leave one man to guard the women, as had been their custom. This was the first night in all the years Maren had lived there that the house was without a man to protect it. But John, always thoughtful for her, asked Emil Ingebertsen, whom he met on the fishing-grounds, to go over from Appledore and tell her that they had gone on to Portsmouth with the favoring wind, but that they hoped to be back that night. And he would have been back had the bait he expected from Boston arrived on the train in which it was due. How curiously everything adjusted itself to favor the bringing about of this horrible catastrophe! The bait did not arrive till the half-past twelve train, and they were obliged to work the whole night getting their trawls ready, thus leaving the way perfectly clear for Louis Wagner's awful work.

The three women left alone watched and waited in vain for the schooner to return, and kept the dinner hot for the men, and patiently wondered why they did not come. In vain they searched the wide horizon for that returning sail. Ah me, what pathos is in that longing look of women's eyes for far-off sails! that gaze so eager, so steadfast, that it would almost seem as if it must conjure up the ghostly shape of glimmering canvas from the mysterious distance of sea and sky, and draw it unerringly home by the mere force of intense wistfulness! And those gentle eyes, that were never to see the light of another sun, looked anxiously across the heaving sea till twilight fell, and then John's messenger Emil, arrived—Emil Ingebertsen, courteous and gentle as a youthful knight—and reassured them with his explanation, which having given, he departed, leaving them in a much more cheerful state of mind. So the three sisters, with only the little dog Ringe for a protector, sat by the fire chatting together cheerfully. They fully expected the schooner back again that night from Portsmouth, but they were not ill at ease while they waited. Of what should they be afraid? They had not an enemy in the world! No shadow crept to the fireside to warn them what was at hand; no portent of death chilled the air as they talked their pleasant talk and made their little plans in utter unconsciousness. Karen was to have gone to Portsmouth with the fishermen that day; she was already dressed to go. Various little commissions were given her, errands to do for the two sisters she was to leave behind. Maren wanted some buttons, and "I'll give you one for a pattern; I'll put it in your purse," she said to Karen, "and then when you open your purse you'll be sure to remember it." (That little button of a peculiar pattern, was found in Wagner's possession afterward.) They sat up till ten o'clock, talking together. The night was bright and calm; it was a comfort to miss the bitter winds that had raved about the little dwelling all the long, rough winter. Already it was Spring; this calm was the first token of its coming. It was the 5th of March; in a few weeks the weather would soften, the grass grown green, and Anethe would see the first flowers in this strange country, so far from her home where she had left father and mother, kith and kin, for love of Ivan. The delicious days of summer at hand would transform the work of the toiling fishermen to pleasure, and all things would bloom and smile about the poor people on the lonely rock! Alas, it was not to be.

At ten o'clock they went to bed. It was cold and "lonesome" up-stairs, so Maren put some chairs by the side of the lounge, laid a mattress upon it, and made up a bed for Karen in the kitchen, where she presently fell asleep. Maren and Anethe slept in the next room. So safe they felt themselves, they did not pull down a curtain, nor even try to fasten the house-door. They went to their rest in absolute security, and perfect trust. It was the first still night of the new year; a young moon stole softly down toward the west, a gentle wind breathed throrgh the quiet dark, and waves whispered gently about the island, helping to lull those innocent souls to yet more peaceful slumber. Ah, where were the gales of March that might have plowed that tranquil sea to foam, and cut off the fatal path of Louis Wagner to that happy home! But nature seemed to pause and wait for him. I remember looking abroad over the waves that night and rejoicing over "the first calm night of the year!" It was so still, so bright! The hope of all the light and beauty a few weeks would bring forth stirred me to sudden joy. There should be spring again after the long winter-weariness.

"Can trouble live in April days,
Or sadness in the summer moons?"

I thought, as I watched the clear sky, grown less hard than it had been for weeks, and sparkling with stars. But before another sunset it seemed to me that beauty had fled out of the world, and that goodness, innocence, mercy, gentleness, were a mere mockery of empty words.

Here let us leave the poor women, asleep on the lonely rock, with no help near them in heaven or upon earth, and follow the fishermen to Portsmouth, where they arrived about four o'clock that afternoon. One of the first men whom they saw as they neared the town was Louis Wagner; to him they threw the rope from the schooner, and he helped draw her in to the wharf. Greetings passed between them; he spoke to Matthew Hontvet, and as he looked at Ivan Christensen, the men noticed a flush pass over Louis' face. He asked were they going out again that night? Three times before they parted he asked that question; he saw that all the three men belonging to the island had come away together; he began to realize his opportunity. They answered him that if their bait came by the train in which they expected it, they hoped to get back that night, but if it was late they should be obliged to stay till morning, baiting their trawls; and they asked him to come and help them. It is a long and tedious business, the baiting of trawls; often more than a thousand hooks are to be manipulated, and lines and hooks coiled, clear of tangles, into tubs, all ready for throwing overboard when the fishing-grounds are reached. Louis gave them a half promise that he would help them, but they did not see him again after leaving the wharf. The three fishermen were hungry, not having touched at their island, where Maren always provided them with a supply of food to take with them; they asked each other if either had brought any money with which to buy bread, and it came out that every one had left his pocket-book at home. Louis, standing by, heard all this. He asked John, then, if he had made fishing pay. John answered that he had cleared about six hundred dollars.

The men parted, the honest three about their business; but Louis, what became of him with his evil thoughts? At about half past seven he went into a liquor shop and had a glass of something; not enough to make him unsteady,—he was too wise for that. He was not seen again in Portsmouth by any human creature that night. He must have gone, after that, directly down to the river, that beautiful broad river, the Piscataqua, upon whose southern bank the quaint old city of Portsmouth dreams its quiet days away; and there he found a boat ready to his hand, a dory belonging to a man named David Burke, who had that day furnished it with new thole-pins. When it was picked up afterward off the mouth of the river, Louis' anxious oars had eaten half-way thrugh the substance of these pins, which are always made of the hardest, toughest wood that can be found. A terrible piece of rowing must that have been, in one night! Twelve miles from the city to the Shoals,—three to the light-houses, where the river meets the open sea, nine more to the islands; nine back again to Newcastle next morning! He took that boat, and with the favoring tide dropped down the rapid river where the swift current is so strong that oars are scarcely needed, except to keep the boat steady. Truly all nature seemed to play into his hands; this first relenting night of earliest Spring favored him with its stillness; the tide was fair, the wind was fair, the little moon gave him just enough light, without betraying him to any curious eyes, as he glided down the three miles between the river banks, in haste to reach the sea. Doubtless the light west wind played about him as delicately as if he had been the most human of God's creatures; nothing breathed remonstrance in his ear, nothing whispered in the whispering water that rippled about his inexorable keel, steering straight for the Shoals through the quiet darkness. The snow lay thick and white upon the land in the moonlight; lamps twinkled here and there from dwellings on either side; in Eliot and Newcastle, in Portsmouth and Kittery, roofs, chimneys and gables showed faintly in the vague light; the leafless trees clustered dark in hollows or lifted their tracery of bare boughs in higher spaces against the wintry sky. His eyes must have looked on it, whether he saw the peaceful picture or not. Beneath many a humble roof honest folk were settling into their untroubled rest, as "this planned piece of deliberate wickedness" was stealing silently by with his heart full of darkness, blacker than the black tide that swirled beneath his boat and bore him fiercely on. At the river's mouth stood the sentinel light-houses, sending their great spokes of light afar into the night, like the arms of a wide humanity stretching into the darkness helping hands to bring all who needed succor safely home. He passed them, first the tower at Fort Point, then the taller one at Whale's Back, steadfastly holding aloft their warning fires. There was no signal from the warning bell as he rowed by, though a danger more subtle, more deadly, than fog, or hurricane, or pelting storm was passing swift beneath it. Unchallenged by anything in earth or heaven, he kept on his way, gained the great outer ocean, doubtless pulling strong and steadily, for he had no time to lose, and the longest night was all too short for an undertaking such as this. Nine miles from the light-houses to the islands! Slowly he makes his way; it seems to take an eternity of time. And now he is midway between the islands and the coast. That little toy of a boat with its one occupant in the midst of the awful, black, heaving sea! The vast dim ocean whispers with a thousand waves; against the boat's sides the ripples lightly tap, and pass and are lost; the air is full of fine mysterious voices of winds and waters. Has he no fear, alone there on the midnight sea with such a purpose in his heart? The moonlight sends a long, golden track across the waves; it touches his dark face and figure, it glitters on his dripping oars. On his right hand Boone Island light shows like a setting star on the horizon, low on his left the two beacons twinkle off Newburyport, at the mouth of the Merrimack river; all the light-houses stand watching along the coast, wheeling their long, slender shafts of radiance as if pointing at this black atom creeping over the face of the planet with such colossal evil in his heart. Before him glitters the Shoals' light at White Island, and helps to guide him to his prey. Alas, my friendly light-house, that you should serve so terrible a purpose! Steadily the oars click in the rowlocks; stroke after stroke of the broad blades draws him away from the lessening line of land, over the wavering floor of the ocean, nearer the lonely rocks. Slowly the coast-lights fade, and now the rote of the sea among the lonely ledges of the Shoals salutes his attentive ear. A little longer and he nears Appledore, the first island, and now he passes by the snow-covered, ice-bound rock, with the long buildings showing clear in the moonlight. He must have looked at them as he went past. I wonder we who slept beneath the roofs glimmered to his eyes in the uncertain light did not feel, through the thick veil of sleep, what fearful thing passed by! But we slumbered peacefully as the unhappy women whose doom every click of those oars in the rowlocks, like the ticking of some dreadful clock, was bringing nearer and nearer. Between the islands he passes; they are full of chilly gleams and glooms. There is no scene more weird than these snow-covered rocks in winter, more shudderful and strange; the moonlight touching them with mystic glimmer, the black water breaking about them, and the vast shadowy spaces of the sea stretching to the horizon on every side, full of vague sounds, of half lights and shadows, of fear, and of mystery. The island he seeks lies before him, lone and still; there is no gleam in any window, there is no help near, nothing upon which the women can call for succor. He does not land in the cove where all boats put in; he rows round to the south side and draws his boat up on the rocks. His red returning footsteps are found here next day, staining the snow. He makes his way to the house he knows so well.

All is silent; nothing moves, nothing sounds but the hushed voices of the sea. His hand is on the latch, he enters stealthily, there is nothing to resist him. The little dog, Ringe, begins to bark sharp and loud, and Karen rouses crying, "John, is that you?" thinking the expected fishermen had returned. Louis seizes a chair and strikes at her in the dark; the clock on the shelf above her head falls down with the jarring of the blow, and stops at exactly seven minutes to one. Maren in the next room, waked suddenly from her sound sleep, trying in vain to make out the meaning of it all, cries, "What's the matter?" Karen answers, "John scared me!" Maren springs from her bed and tries to open her chamber door; Louis has fastened it on the other side by pushing a stick through over the latch. With her heart leaping with terror the poor child shakes the door with all her might, in vain. Utterly confounded and bewildered, she hears Karen screaming "John kills me! John kills me!" She hears the sound of repeated blows and shrieks, till at last her sister falls heavily against the door, which gives way, and Maren rushes out. She catches dimly a glimpse of a tall figure outlined against the southern window; she seizes poor Karen and drags her with the strength of frenzy within the bedroom. This unknown terror, this fierce, dumb monster who never utters a sound to betray himself through the whole, pursues her with blows, strikes her three times with a chair, either blow with fury sufficient to kill her, had it been light enough for him to see how to direct it; but she gets her sister inside and the door shut, and holds it against him with all her might and Karen's failing strength. What a little heroine was this poor child, struggling with the force of desperation to save herself and her sisters!

All this time Anethe lay dumb, not daring to move or breathe, roused from the deep sleep of youth and health by this nameless, formless terror. Maren, while she strives to hold the door at which Louis rattles again and again, calls to her in anguish, "Anethe, Anethe! Get out of the window! run! hide!" The poor girl almost paralyzed with fear, tries to obey, puts her bare feet out of the low window, and stands outside in the freezing snow, with one light garment over her cowering figure, shrinking in the cold wintry wind, the clear moonlight touching her white face and bright hair and fair young shoulders. "Scream! scream!" shouts frantic Maren. "Somebody at Star Island may hear!" but Anethe answers with the calmness of despair, "I cannot make a sound." Maren screams, herself, but the feeble sound avails nothing. "Run! run!" she cries to Anethe; but again Anethe answers, "I cannot move."

Louis has left off trying to force the door; he listens. Are the women trying to escape? He goes out-of-doors. Maren flies to the window; he comes round the corner of the house and confronts Anethe where she stands in the snow. The moonlight shines full in his face; she shrieks loudly and distinctly, "Louis, Louis!" Ah, he is discovered, he is recognized! Quick as thought he goes back to the front door, at the side of which stands an ax, left there by Maren, who had used it the day before to cut the ice from the well. He returns to Anethe standing shuddering there. It is no matter that she is beautiful, young and helpless to resist, that she had been kind to him, that she never did a human creature harm, that she stretches her gentle hands out to him in agonized entreaty, crying piteously, "Oh, Louis, Louis, Louis!" He raises the ax and brings it down on her bright head in one tremendous blow, and she sinks without a sound and lies in a heap, with her warm blood reddening the snow. Then he deals her blow after blow, almost within reach of Maren's hands, as she stands at the window. Distracted, Maren strives to rouse poor Karen, who kneels with her head on the side of the bed; with desperate entreaty she tries to get her up and away, but Karen mourns, "I cannot, I cannot." She is too far gone; and then Maren knows she cannot save her, and that she must flee herself or die. So, while Louis again enters the house, she seizes a skirt and wraps round her shoulders, and makes her way out of the open window, over Anethe's murdered body, barefooted, flying away, anywhere, breathless, shaking with terror.

Where can she go? Her little dog, frightened into silence, follows her,—pressing so close to her feet that she falls over him more than once. Looking back she sees Louis has lit a lamp and is seeking for her. She flies to the cove; if she can but find his boat and row away in it and get help! It is not there; there is no boat in which she can get away. She hears Karen's wild screams, —he is killing her! Oh where can she go? Is there any place on that little island where he will not find her? She thinks she will creep into one of the empty old houses by the water; but no, she reflects, if I hide there, Ringe will bark and betray me the moment Louis comes to look for me. And Ringe saved her life, for next day Louis' bloody tracks were found all about those old buildings, where he had sought her. She flies, with Karen's awful cries in her ears, away over rocks and snow to the farthest limit she can gain. The moon has set; it is about two o'clock in the morning, and oh, so cold! She shivers and shudders from head to foot, but her agony of terror is so great she is hardly conscious of bodily sensation. And welcome is the freezing snow, the jagged ice and iron rocks that tear her unprotected feet, the bitter brine that beats against the shore, the wintry winds that make her shrink and tremble; "they are not so unkind as man's ingratitude!" Falling often, rising, struggling on with feverish haste, she makes her way to the very edge of the water; down almost into the sea she creeps, between two rocks, upon her hands and knees, and crouches, face downward, with Ringe nestled close beneath her breast, not daring to move through the long hours that must pass before the sun will rise again. She is so near the ocean she can almost reach the water with her hand. Had the wind breathed the least roughly the waves must have washed over her. There let us leave her and go back to Louis Wagner. Maren heard her sister's shrieks as she fled. The poor girl had crept into an unoccupied room in a distant part of the house, striving to hide herself. He could not kill her with blows, blundering in the darkness, so he wound a handkerchief about her throat and strangled her. But now he seeks anxiously for Maren. Has she escaped? What terror is in the thought! Escaped, to tell the tale, to accuse him as the murderer of her sisters. Hurriedly, with desperate anxiety, he seeks for her. His time was growing short; it was not in his programme that this brave little creature should give him so much trouble; he had not calculated resistance from those weak and helpless women. Already it was morning; soon it would be daylight. He could not find her in or near the house; he went down to the empty and dilapidated houses about the cove, and sought her everywhere. What a picture! That blood-stained butcher, with his dark face, crawling about those cellars, peering for that woman! He dared not spend any more time; he must go back for the money he hoped to find, his reward for this! All about the house he searches, in bureau drawers, in trunks and boxes; he finds fifteen dollars for his night's work! Several hundreds were lying between some sheets folded at the bottom of a drawer in which he looked. But he cannot stop for more thorough investigation; a dreadful haste pursues him like a thousand fiends. He drags Anethe's stiffening body into the house, and leaves it on the kitchen floor. If the thought crosses his mind to set fire to the house and burn up his two victims, he dares not do it; it will make a fatal bonfire to light his homeward way; besides, it is useless, for Maren has escaped to accuse him, and the time presses so terribly! But how cool a monster is he! After all this hard work he must have refreshment to support him in the long row back to the land; knife and fork, cup and plate, were found next morning on the table near where Anethe lay; fragments of food which was not cooked in the house, but brought from Portsmouth, were scattered about. Tidy Maren had left neither dishes nor food when they went to bed. The handle of the teapot which she had left on the stove was stained and smeared with blood. Can the human mind conceive of such hideous nonchalance? Wagner sat down in that room and ate and drank! It is almost beyond belief! Then he went to the well with a basin and towels, tried to wash off the blood, and left towels and basin in the well. He knows he must be gone! It is certain death to linger. He takes his boat and rows away toward the dark coast and the twinkling lights; it is for dear life, now! What powerful strokes send the small skiff rushing over the water!

A Revengeful Organ.

The stomach is a revengeful organ. If we assign it indigestible food, it not only refuses to perform its office, but inflicts upon us unspeakable tortures, such as those of indigestion, colic, cholera morbus, &c. Not content with giving us pain, it frequently inaugurates an excessive and wasting diarrhœa, called dysentery, which carries us to our graves. With a view to prevent these consequences, as soon as the stomach gives notice by premonitory twinges that its cargo is not to its liking, a wineglassful or two of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters should be swallowed. This admirable digestive cordial will promptly reconcile the refractory organ to its contents, and prevent any of those annoying and possibly fatal results which the presence of indigestible food in the stomach is liable to produce. The Bitters are also a superb tonic, restorative and appetizer.

An oriental traveller describes this busy scene, witnessed on historic shores: "Our steamer landed on a beach which was the port of Antioch, where the disciples were first called Christians. There was no town at the water's edge, no people, no wharf. The passengers and the merchandise were put ashore in lighters, which ran up into the sand. A troop of camels, with their drivers, lay on the beach, ready to transport the goods into the interior. Among the articles landed were boxes marked 'DR. J. C. AYER & CO., LOWELL, MASS, U. S. A.,' showing that they contained medicines and whence they came. These with other goods were hoisted on the backs of camels, for transportation to Antioch. Thus the skill of the West sends back its remedies to heal the maladies of populations that inhabit those eastern shores, whence our spiritual manna came."—Windsor (Vt.) Chronicle.

News and Notes.

It is a noticeable and gratifying fact that James A. Weston, who was twice Governor of this State, did not receive a majority of votes cast at any of the four elections in which he was a candidate. And it is safe to say he never will receive the endorsement of a majority of the voters of New Hampshire.

The cashier of the Barr (Vt.) National Bank and his family were bound and gagged, Tuesday night, the 6th, by burglars, who made the cashier go to the bank with them. They were unable, however to get into the vault, which would not open until nine o'clock of the next day. They secured $1300 in unsigned bills and left.

A Newburyport man was the victim of a singular coincidence. While passing along the street, a boy exploded a common cracker just behind him, while at the same instant a rotten banana, thrown from a neighboring fruit store, struck him on the back of the head. He at once screamed, "I'm shot! I'm shot!" and taking a handful of the decayed fruit from his herd, exhibited it to a horror-stricken bystander as a specimen of his brains. A great crowd assembled and a doctor was called, who soon explained the matter to the satisfaction of all.

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH OF THE CITY OF PORTSMOUTH call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10 of the City Ordinances and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the city to aid them in the execution of their duty.

CHAPTER X.

Sec. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, &c. shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the health officers may direct.

Sec. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

Sec. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten days from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time above specified.

Sec. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offals of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

Sec. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisances shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

Sec. 12. When any householder shall know that any person within his family is taken sick of the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 13. When any physician shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for each refusal or neglect forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the health officers in the name of the city.

Sec. 16. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other thing deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier —the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may, by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

Sec. 21. No person shall erect, keep or continue or permit to be erected, kept or continued, upon any land occupied by him, any pen for the keeping of swine, or privy, over either of the mill ponds in this city, or so placed that offensive substances therefrom shall be discharged or drained into either of said ponds, or into any creek, or cove or drain leading thereto. And no person shall construct, keep or continue any drain leading from any pen for the keeping of any swine, slaughter-house, privy vault, or other unwholesome or offensive place, into either of said ponds, or to any flat or marsh adjoining the same. And no person shall throw or suffer to be thrown from his land into either of said ponds, or upon any of said flats or marshes, any dead, decaying, unwholesome or offensive animal or vegetable substances.

PULMOCINE

An English Remedy

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS,

For Nervousness and General Debility,

PREMATURE decay, mental and physical prostration, fear, despondency, over indulgence in the use of opium or alcoholic drinks, tobacco, &c., &c. Medicines unrivalled for their wonderful properties and remarkable cures of all Nervous Complaints. Their efficacy is equally great in the treatment and cure of Cancers, Noduse, Ulcers, Pustules, Pimples, Tetter, Fever Sores, Ringworm, Erysipelas, Scald-Head, Barbers' Itch, Scurvy, Salt Rheum, Copper Colored Blotches, Glandular Swelling, Worms and Black Spots in the flesh, Discoloration, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth and Nose, Sore Legs, and sores of every character, because the medicines are the very best Blood Medicine ever placed before the people, and are warranted to be the most Powerful Alterative ever created by man. They impart Strength to the Body and Vigor to the Mind, removing Morbid Sensibility, Depression of Spirits, Dementia and Melancholia.

NERVOUS DEBILITY.

However obscure the causes may be which contribute to render nervous debility a disease so prevalent, affecting as it does, nearly one-half of our adult population, it is a melancholy fact that day by day, and year by year, we witness a most frightful increase of nervous affections from the slightest neuralgia to the more grave and extreme forms of Nervous Prostration.

It is on the highest importance, then, that individuals should be able to judge for themselves, by their own feelings, if and to what extent they are attacked by this insidious enemy to ill health, comfort, and even life itself if left to run its course unchecked by the early and prompt application of curative remedies.

DRUNKENNESS.

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS is the only remedy that has ever proved by practical experience a benefit to those who suffer from over-indulgence in alcoholic liquors; it completely destroys the taste for them, and restores the victim of intemperance to health and vigor. A single trial will prove it to be just what it is recommended to be.

Price $2.50. Large size, $5. Each package of the Cordial Balm contains one box of the Tonic Pills, which may also be had separately at 50 cents per box.

RECENT TESTIMONIALS.

FREWSBURGH, Nov. 12, 1874.

I have used the Cordial Balm and Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills as a preventive and cure for the use of ardent spirits and habitual intoxication, and find them actually specific in such cases. I regard them as most invaluable medicines, and nothing could induce me to be without them.

JACOB MESERVE.

TIPTON, Dec. 3, 1874.

We take great pleasure in informing you of the surprisingly beneficial results from the use of your English Remedy, The Cordial Balm of Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills, in a case of great Nervous Debility and Prostration, by a member of our family who had been under treatment by different doctors for nearly three years past without any apparent benefit therefrom; but your medicines have produced a most wonderful change for the better and the patient now enjoys comparatively excellent health. MRS. HARRIET STURGISS.

P. S.—We tell all with whom we are acquainte who are similarly afflicted to try your medicines.

Convincing and Satisfatory RESULTS.

THE ONLY TRUE TEST —OF— MERIT.

OF

MR. SHEWELL,

The Popular Manager of the Boston Theater.

THE GREAT VALUE OF THE

DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

APRIL 4, 1875.

Prof. ATTHONSE HILLER: Dear Sir—Many thanks for two bottles of "Diamond Rheumatic Cure" which you so kindly sent me through Mr. Marston, I used but one bottle, which relieved me of a severe attack, and better still, I have not had a twinge since, and I am in hopes that I shall never have another, as the last attack was in July, 1873. Should it, however, return, I still have the other bottle left and shall try it, and expect the same beneficial results. Gratefully yours, L. R. SHEWELL.

The above testimony ought to convince the most skeptical rheumatic that a sure cure has been discovered in the

DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

It is from such results and every day proofs like these that physicians are now prescribing the DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE as an infallible specific for removing the cause of Gout, Chronic, Acute or Muscular Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Nervous Headache, Neuralgia of the Head, Heart, Stomach and Kidney; Tic Doloreaux, Nervousness, Flying Pains, Twisted Joints, Swollen Joints, Pain in the Back and Loins, Weakness of the Kidneys, Tired feeling, Languid, Weary Prostration, and all Nervous and Chronic Diseases.

Let any sufferer who reads this purchase a small bottle and take it according to the instructions around the package, and it will not take long to convince him that paying doctors' fees is money thrown away and liniments of all kinds are useless.

This medicine is for sale at all Druggists' throughout the United States and Canada. If it happens that your Druggist has not got it in stock, ask him to send for it to the Wholesale Agents, GEORGE C. GOODWIN & CO; SMITH, DOLITTLE & SMITH; CARTER, HARRIS, & HAWLEY; RUST BROS. & BIRD, and GILMAN BROTHERS, Boston, C. H. MARTIN & Co., Concord. J. W. PERKINS & CO., Portland.

BOOK AGENTS wanted to sell "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser." It is the cheapest book ever published; 383 pages, over 200 illustrations, $1.50. Thousands buy it at sight, who could not be induced to purchase the high-priced books treating of Domestic Medicine. Unlike other books sold through agents this work is thoroughly advertised throughout North America. This fact, together with the large size, elegant appearance, and many new features of the book, causes it to sell more rapidly than any work ever published in this country. Those of my agents who have had experience in selling books, say that in all their previous canvassing they never met with such success or made so large wages, as since commencing the sale of my work. For terms and territory, address (inclosing two postage stamps and stating experience) R. V. Pierce, M. D., World's Dispensary, Buffalo, N. Y. Note.—Mark envelope "For Publishing Dep't."

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, etc.,

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

A MEMORABLE MURDER.

Celia Thaxter's Narrative of Wagner's Terrible Crime.

[Atlantic Monthly.]

Concluded.

There is no longer any moon, the night is far spent; already the east changes, the stars fade; he rows like a madman to reach the land, but a blush of morning is stealing up the sky and sunrise is rosy over shore and sea, when panting, trembling, weary, a creature accursed, a blot on the face of the day, he lands at Newcastle—too late! Too late! In vain he casts the dory adrift; she will not float away; the flood tide bears her back to give her testimony against him, and afterward she is found at Jaffrey's Point, near the "Devil's Den," and the fact of her worn thole-pins noted. Wet, covered with ice from the spray which has flown from his eager oars, utterly exhausted, he creeps to a knoll and reconnoitres; he thinks he is unobserved, and crawls on toward Portsmouth, but he is seen and recognized by many persons, and his identity established beyond a doubt. He goes to the house of Matthew Jonsen, where he has been living, steals up stairs, changes his clothes, and appears before the family, anxious, frightened, agitated, telling Jonsen he never felt so badly in his life: that he has got into trouble and is afraid he shall be taken. He cannot eat at breakfast, says "farewell forever," goes away and is shaved, and takes the train to Boston, where he provides himself with new clothes, shoes, a complete outfit, but lingering, held by fate, he cannot fly, and before night the officer's hand is on his shoulder and he is arrested.

Meanwhile poor shuddering Maren on the lonely island, by the water-side, waits till the sun is high in heaven before she dares come forth. She thinks he may be still on the island. She said to me: "I thought he must be there, dead or alive. I thought he might be crazy and kill himself after having done all that." At last she steals out. The little dog frisks before her; it is so cold her feet cling to the rocks and snow at every step, till the skin is fairly torn off. Still and frosty is the bright morning, and the water lies smiling and sparkling, the hammers of the workmen building the new hotel on Star Island sound through the quiet air. Being on the side of Smutty-Nose opposite Star, she waves her skirt, and screams to attract their attention; they hear her, turn and look, see a woman waving a signal of distress, and surprising to relate, turn tranquilly to their work again. She realizes at last there is no hope in that direction; she must go round toward Appledore in sight of the dreadful house. Passing it afar off she gives one swift glance toward it, terrified lest in the broad sunshine she may see some horrid token of last night's work; but all is still and peaceful. She notices the curtains the three had left up when they went to bed; they are now drawn; she knows whose hand has done this, and what it hides from the light of day. Sick at heart, she makes her painful way to the northern edge of Malaga, which is connected with Smutty-Nose by the old sea-wall. She is directly opposite Appledore and the little cottage where abide her friend and countryman, Jorge Edvardt Ingebertsen, and his wife and children. Only a quarter of a mile of the still ocean separates her from safety and comfort. She sees the children playing about the door; she calls and calls. Will no one hear her? Her torn feet torment her; she is sore with blows and perishing with cold. At last her voice reaches the ears of the children, who run and tell their father that some one is crying and calling; looking across, he sees the poor little figure waving her arms, takes his dory and paddles over, and with amazement recognizes Maren in her night-dress, with bare feet and streaming hair, with a cruel bruise upon her face, with wild eyes, distracted, half senseless with the cold and terror. He cries "Maren, Maren, who has done this? what is it? who is it?" and her only answer is "Louis, Louis, Louis!" as he takes her on board his boat and rows home with her as fast as he can. From her incoherent statement he learns what has happened. Leaving her in the care of his family, he comes over across the hill to the great house on Appledore. As I sit at my desk I see him pass the window, and wonder why the old man comes so fast and anxiously through the heavy snow.

Presently I see him going back again, accompanied by several of his own countrymen and others of our workmen, carrying guns. They are going to Smutty-Nose, and take arms, thinking it possible Wagner may yet be there. I call down stairs, "What has happened?" and am answered, "Some trouble at Smutty-Nose: we hardly understand." "Probably a drunken brawl of the reckless fishermen who may have landed there," I say to myself, and go on with my work. In another half-hour I see the men returning, reinforced by others, coming fast, confusedly; and suddenly a wail of anguish comes up from the women below. I cannot believe it when I hear them crying, "Karen is dead!" "Anethe is dead!" "Louis Wagner has murdered them both!" I run out into the servants' quarters; there are all the men assembled, an awe-stricken crowd. Old Ingebertsen comes forward and tells me the bare facts, and how Maren lies at his house, half crazy, suffering with her torn and frozen feet. Then the men are dispatched to search Appledore, to find if by any chance the murderer might be concealed about the place, and I go over to Maren to see if I can do anything for her. I find the women and children with frightened faces at the little cottage; as I go into the room where Maren lies, she catches my hands, crying, "Oh, I so glad to see you! I so glad I save my life!" and with her dry lips she tells me all the story as I have told it here. Poor little creature, holding me with those wild, glittering, dilated eyes, she cannot tell me rapidly enough the whole horrible tale. Upon her cheek is yet the blood-stain from the blow he struck her with a chair, and she shows me two more upon her shoulder, and her torn feet. I go back for arnica with which to bathe them. What a mockery seems to me the "jocund day" as I emerge into the sunshine, and looking across the space of blue, sparkling water, see the house wherein all that horror lies!

Oh, brightly shines the morning sun and glitters on the white sails of the little vessel that comes dancing back from Portsmouth before the favoring wind, with the two husbands on board! How glad they are for the sweet morning and the fair wind that brings them home again! And Ivan sees in fancy Anethe's face all beautiful with welcoming smiles, and John knows how happy his good and faithful Maren will be to see him back again. Alas, how little they dream what lies before them! From Appledore they are signaled to come ashore, and Ivan and Matthew, landing, hear a confused rumor of trouble from tongues that hardly can frame the words that must tell the dreadful truth. Ivan only understands that something is wrong. His one thought is for Anethe; he flies to Ingebertsen's cottage; she may be there; he rushes in like a maniac, crying, "Anethe, Anethe! Where is Anethe?" and broken-hearted Maren answers her brother, "Anethe is—at home." He does not wait for another word, but seizes the little boat and lands at the same time with John on Smutty-Nose; with headlong haste they reach the house, other men accompanying them; ah, there are blood-stains all about the snow! Ivan is the first to burst open the door and enter. What words can tell it! There upon the floor, naked, stiff, and stark, is the woman he idolizes, for whose dear feet he could not make life's ways smooth and pleasant enough—stone dead! Dead—horribly butchered! her bright hair stiff with blood, the fair head that had so often rested on his breast crushed, cloven, mangled with the brutal ax! Their eyes are blasted by the intolerable sight; both John and Ivan stagger out and fall, senseless, in the snow. Poor Ivan! his wife a thousand times adored, the dear girl he had brought from Norway, the good, sweet girl who loved him so, whom he could not cherish tenderly enough! And he was not there to protect her! There was no one there to save her!

"Did Heaven look on And would not take their part!"

Poor fellow, what had he done that fate should deal him such a blow as this! Dumb, blind with anguish, he made no sign.

"What says the body when they spring
Some monstrous torture-engine's whole
Strength on it? No more says the soul,"

Some of his pitying comrades lead him away, like one stupefied, and take him back to Appledore. John knows his wife is safe. Though stricken with horror and consumed with wrath, he is not paralyzed like poor Ivan, who has been smitten with worse than death. They find Karen's body in another part of the house, covered with blows and black in the face, strangled. They find Louis' tracks,—all the tokens of trunks and drawers scattered about in hasty search for the money, and, all within the house and without, blood everywhere.

When I reach the cottage with the arnica for Maren, they have returned from Smutty-Nose. John, her husband, is there. He is a young man of the true Norse type, blue-eyed, fair-haired, tall and well-made, with handsome teeth and bronzed beard. Perhaps he is a little quiet and undemonstrative generally, but at this moment he is superb, kindled from head to feet, a fire-brand of woe and wrath, with eyes that flash and cheeks that burn. I speak a few words to him,—what words can meet such an occasion as this!—and having given directions about the use of arnica, for Maren, I go away, for nothing more can be done for her, and every comfort she needs is hers. The outer room is full of men; they make way for me, and as I pass through I catch a glimpse of Ivan crouched with his arms thrown round his knees and his head bowed down between them, motionless, his attitude expressing such abandonment of despair as cannot be described. His whole person seems to shrink, as if deprecating the blow that has fallen upon him.

All day the slaughtered women lie as they were found, for nothing can be touched till the officers of the law have seen the whole. And John goes back to Portsmouth to tell his tale to the proper authorities. What a different voyage from the one he had just taken, when happy and careless he was returning to the home he had left so full of peace and comfort! What a load he bears back with him, as he makes his tedious way across the miles that separate him from the means of vengeance he burns to reach! But at last he arrives, tells his story, the police at other cities are at once telegraphed, and the city marshal follows Wagner to Boston. At eight o'clock that evening comes the steamer Mayflower to the Shoals, with all the officers on board. They land and make investigations at Smutty-Nose, then come here to Appledore and examine Maren, and, when everything is done, steam back to Portsmouth, which they reach at three o'clock in the morning. After all are gone and this awful day's work is finished at last, poor John comes back to Maren, and kneeling by the side of her bed, he is utterly overpowered with what he has passed through; he is shaken with sobs as he cries, "Oh, Maren, Maren, it is too much, too much! I cannot bear it!" And Maren throws her arms about his neck, crying, "Oh, John, John, don't! I shall be crazy, I shall die, if you go on like that." Poor innocent, unhappy people, who never wronged a fellow-creature in their lives!

But Ivan—what is their anguish to his! They dare not leave him alone lest he do himself an injury. He is perfectly mute and listless; he cannot weep, he can neither eat nor sleep. He sits like one in a horrid dream. "Oh, my poor, poor brother!" Maren cries in tones of deepest grief, when I speak his name to her next day. She herself cannot rest a moment till she hears that Louis is taken; at every sound her crazed imagination fancies that he is coming back for her; she is fairly beside herself with terror and anxiety; but the night following that of the catastrophe brings us news that he is arrested, and there is stern rejoicing at the Shoals; but no vengeance taken on him can bring back those unoffending lives, or restore that gentle home. The dead are properly cared for; blood is washed from Anethe's beautiful bright hair; she is clothed in her wedding dress, the blue dress in which she was married, poor child, that happy Christmas time in Norway, a little more than a year ago. They are carried across the sea to Portsmouth, the burial service is read over them, and they are hidden in the earth. After poor Ivan has seen the faces of his wife and sister still and pale in their coffins, their ghastly wounds concealed as much as possible, flowers upon them and the priest praying over them, his trance of misery is broken, the grasp of despair is loosened a little about his heart. Yet hardly does he notice whether the sun shines or no, or care whether he lives or dies. Slowly his senses steady themselves from the effects of a shock that nearly destroyed him, and merciful time, with imperceptible touch, softens day by day the outlines of that picture at the memory of which he will never cease to shudder while he lives.

Louis Wagner was captured in Boston on the evening of the next day after his atrocious deed, and Friday morning, followed by a hooting mob, he was taken to the Eastern depot. At every station along the route crowds were assembled, and there were cries for vengeance. At the depot in Portsmouth a dense crowd of thousands of both sexes had gathered, who assailed him with yells, and curses and cries of "Tear him to pieces!" It was with difficulty he was at last safely imprisoned. Poor Maren was taken to Portsmouth from Appledore on that day. The story of Wagner's day in Boston, like every other detail of the affair, has been told by every newspaper in the country; his agitation and restlessness, noted by all who saw him; his curious, reckless talk. To one he says, "I have just killed two sailors;" to another, Jacob Toldman, into whose shop he goes to buy shoes, "I have seen a woman lie as still as that boot," and so on. When he is caught he puts on a bold face and determines to brave it out; denies everything with tears and virtuous indignation. The men whom he has so fearfully wronged are confronted with him; his attitude is one of injured innocence; he surveys them more in sorrow than in anger, while John is on fire with wrath and indignation, and hurls maledictions at him; but Ivan, poor Ivan, hurt beyond all hope or help, is utterly mute; he does not utter one word. Of what use is it to curse the murderer of his wife? It will not bring her back; he has no heart for cursing, he is too completely broken. Maren told me the first time she was brought into Louis' presence, her heart leaped so fast she could hardly breathe. She entered the room softly with her husband and Matthew Jonsen's daughter. Louis was whittling a stick. He looked up and saw her face, and the color ebbed out of his, and rushed back and stood in one burning spot in his cheek, as he looked at her and she looked at him for a space, in silence. Then he drew about his evil mind the detestable garment of sanctimoniousness, and in sentimental accents he murmured, "I'm glad Jesus loves me!" "The devil loves you!" cried John, with uncompromising veracity. "I know it was't nice," said decorous Maren, "but John couldn't help it; it was too much to bear!"

The next Sunday afternoon, when he was to been taken to Saco, hundreds of fishermen came to Portsmouth from all parts of the coast, determined on his destruction, and there was a fearful scene in the quiet streets of that peaceful city when he was being escorted to the train by the police and various officers of justice. Two thousand people had assembled, and such a furious, yelling crowd was never seen or heard in Portsmouth. The air was rent with cries for vengeance; showers of bricks and stones were thrown from all directions, and wounded several of the officers who surrounded Wagner. His knees trembled under him, he shook like an aspen, and the officers found it necessary to drag him along, telling him he must keep up if he would save his life. Except that they feared to injure the innocent as well as the guilty, those men would have literally torn him to pieces. But at last he was put on board the cars in safety and carried away to prison. His demeanor throughout the term of his confinement, and during his trial and subsequent imprisonment, was a wonderful piece of acting. He really inspired people with doubt as to his guilt. I make an extract from the Portsmouth CHRONICLE, dated March 13, 1873: "Wagner still retains his amazing sang froid, which is wonderful, even in a strong-nerved German. The sympathy of most of the visitors at his jail has certainly been won by his calmness and his general appearance, which is quite possessing." The little instance of his method of proceeding I must subjoin: A lady who had come to converse with him on the subject of his eternal salvation said, as she left him, "I hope you put your trust in the Lord," to which he sweetly answered, "I always did, ma'am, and I always shall."

A few weeks after all this had happened, I sat by the window one afternoon, and, looking up from my work, I saw some one passing slowly,—a young man who seemed so thin, so pale, so bent and ill, that I said, "Here is some stranger who is so very sick, he is probably come to try the effect of the air, even thus early." It was Ivan Christensen. I did not recognize him. He dragged one foot after the other wearily, and walked with the feeble motion of an old man. He entered the house; his errand was to ask for work. He could not bear to go away from the neighborhood of the place where Anethe had lived and where they had been so happy, and he could not bear to work at fishing on the south side of the island, within sight of that house. There was work enough for him here; a kind voice told him so, a kind hand was laid on his shoulder, and he was bidden come and welcome. The tears rushed into the poor fellow's eyes, he went hastily away, and that night sent over his chest of tools,—he was a carpenter by trade. Next day he took up his abode here and worked all Summer. Every day I observed him as I passed him by, regarding him with an inexpressible pity, of which he was perfectly unconscious, as he seemed to be of everything and everybody. He never raised his head when he answered my "Good morning," or "Good evening, Ivan." Though I often wished to speak, I never said more to him, for he seemed to me to be hurt too sorely to be touched by human hand. With his head sunk on his breast, and wearily dragging his limbs, he pushed the plane or drove the saw to and fro with a kind of dogged persistence, looking neither to the left nor right. Well might the weight of woe he carried bow him to the earth! By and by he spoke, himself, to other members of the household, saying, with a patient sorrow, he believed it was to have been, it had been so ordered, else why did all things so play into Louis' hands? All things furnished him: the knowledge of the unprotected state of the women, a perfectly clear field in which to carry out his plans, just the right boat he wanted in which to make his voyage, fair tide, fair wind, calm sea, just moonlight enough; even the axe with which to kill Anethe stood ready to his hand at the house door. Alas, it was to have been! Last Summer Ivan went back to Norway—alone. Hardly is it probable that he will ever return to a land whose welcome to him fate made so horrible. His sister Maren and her husband still live blameless lives, with the little dog Ringe, in a new home they have made for themselves in Portsmouth, not far from the river-side; the merciful lapse of days and years takes them gently but surely away from the thought of that season of anguish; and though they can never forget it all they have grown resigned and quiet again. And on the island other Norwegians have settled, voices of charming children sound sweetly in the solitude that echoed so awfully to the shrieks of Karen and Maren. But to the weirdness of the winter midnight something is added, a vision of two dim, reproachful shades who watch while an agonized ghost prowls eternally about the dilapidated houses at the beach's edge, close by the black, whispering water, seeking for the woman who has escaped him—escaped to bring upon him the death he deserves, whom he never, never, never can find, though his distracted spirit may search till man shall vanish from off the face of the earth, and time shall be no more.

Daily Chronicle.

FRIDAY, JULY 9, 1875.

News and Notes.

The Lynn Reporter makes two very singular errors in reviewing the late acts of Ex-Gov. Weston and the Superior Court. It says that two of the Judges are republicans, which is untrue; and that the Court decided that Weston & Co. "did only what they were bound to do under the Constitution and the laws." The Court, on the contrary, decided that it was not their province to criticise the action of the Governor and Council, thus admitting that they did not sustain the usurping officials.

Three independent papers in Ohio have within a week inserted the names of the republican candidates at the head of their editorial columns.

The Concord Patriot says: Speaker Sanborn was fair and impartial in his rulings and has left no sting behind on the part of the minority; while it is admitted on all hands that it is not in the recollection of the oldest inhabitants when so graceful and so good looking a gentleman has filled the Speaker's chair, as during the last session.

Gen. Joseph Hooker is still quite lame from the paralytic stroke which he had some time ago, but otherwise he is in excellent health.

James Thompson, a lad about ten years of age, was arrested at Concord, on the 7th, for breaking and entering the house of Bishop Niles. The boy confesses that he got into the house, and implicates another youth of about the same age in the affair. He wore a suit of clothes belonging to one of the children of the family.

Algernon Sartoris, son-in-law of President Grant, amuses himself by boxing. Having vanquished Washington's best man, he vaunted of his prowess and put on airs. Mr. Goicouria, a Wall street broker, accommodated him at Long Branch with a most magnificent whipping.

Mr. Deland, father of the cashier of the Great Barrington, Mass., bank, has died of the shock and exposure consequent upon being gagged by the persons who endeavored to rob the bank a few weeks since.

The Executive Council of Maine have, by a vote of four to three, commuted the sentence of Lowell, the Auburn wife murderer, now under sentence of death, to imprisonment for life.

One of the most prominent young members of the House of Representatives is E. J. Randall, Esq., who was at work early and late during the recent session of the legislature. Mr. Randall's constituents may well feel a great degree of pride in his efforts to forward the business of the session in the committees of which he was a member, and on the floor of the House. Always alert, prompt and active, he impressed his fellow members of both parties with general favor and won their esteem and respect. When men of character and ability accept the onerous and in many cases disagreeable duties of legislators they deserve commendation and praise. Were the interests of many other towns we might name as well conserved as were those of Great Falls in the hands of Mr. Randall and his associates, schemes of doubtful utility would have less opportunity of success.

Mr. C. S. Weeks was found drowned at Northfield on the 7th. Supposed suicide.

Thomas Fernald, of Loudon, drowned himself in a well, at Pittsfield. He was thirty years old. He left a note saying he had broken his pledge.

Reports of houses struck by lightning come from all parts of the country. In Shrewsbury, Mass., Thomas Kelly, 19 years old, was killed while at work in the field. In Holden, Mrs. Collyer was killed, andher two daughters were rendered unconscious.

The Lynn Reporter says of Mrs. Elizabeth Tilton: "The weight of evidence is in favor of the conclusion that her attachment for Mr. Beecher outweighed her regard for her husband, her children or her home."

Mr. Howard F. Hill, son of John M. Hill, Esq., of Concord, has taken orders, and succeeds Rev. James Le Roy as rector of the Episcopal Church at Ashland.

There appears to be no doubt of the insanity of Robert Dale Owen.

The Baltimore Gazette, a leading democratic paper, argues that the democratic party ought to be defeated in Ohio this Fall.

Speaker McGuire laughs at Governor Tilden's pretensions as a reformer and statesman, and he declares in a speech to his constituents that all the Governor's vetoes have not saved the State one dollar.

An honest democrat has written an obituary of his party for the Cincinnati Gazette. He says the democratic party of Ohio has ceased to exist, and in its place has come an organization, two-thirds of which is made up of Catholics and one-third of saloon keepers.

The Late Col. Stocking.

Colonel Wilbur F. Stocking, of Indiana, died on the steamer Providence, on the Fall River line, on the night of June 30th, from a complication of local disorders which culminated in heart disease. The basis of his illness was his sufferings as a prisoner of war in Libby Prison and Castle Thunder. He kept a range and heater warehouse in Washington and New York in 1862, and had the contract for heating all public buildings of Indiana, and made large sums of money. He subsequently undertook to supply the army with ice, and in taking a vessel load up the James River was caught by a detachment of Confederate soldiers. The captain of the vessel was an old man of large family and their only support. Colonel Stocking appealed to the soldiers to let the old man go as a non-combatant, and take him because he was a single man with no one to support but himself. About this time the war was getting hot, and every guard or other person who could be spared from Libby Prison was sent to the front. He was then made clerk, and in this position spent nearly $50,000 of his private means to purchase delicacies and medicine for the Union prisoners. Many a poor boy remembers with gratitude these touching acts of kindness. Finally, after several months' imprisonment, some misunderstanding arose about a Confederate prisoner who was killed in New York harbor, and Col. Stocking was selected as a hostage, placed in a solitary cell in Castle Thunder, and condemned to be shot. But two days before he was to have been executed his friends secured his release.

His experience in Libby Prison was a fearful one. Three times he escaped and was captured before reaching the Union lines. The last time, being in a half-famished condition, he was placed in an apartment where all attempts at escape would be fruitless. A comrade, seeing his distress, provided him a rare treat, and at night dug out from a beam a large piece of cheese that he had hidden there some two years before, half of which he gave the suffering man. Col. Stocking informed us, in narrating his experience in the prison, that nothing he ever tasted appeared so nice as that cheese.

He came home a mere skeleton, afflicted with chronic diarrhœa, and this ailment has since necessitated several painful surgical operations. When an exchange was about to be effected, a prisoner informed his comrades that he had a regimental color which the rebels had not been able to find. For nearly three years it had been buried. This man was selected to lead the prisoners toward the Union lines, but few of them being able to walk. By agreement he was to wave the flag on coming in sight of the army, but "as he did so," said the Colonel with tears in his voice, "not one man was able to raise his voice to a cheer, their emotions were so great and their joy so excessive."

In 1866 he was appointed Colonel on the staff of the Mexican General Carrajal, which position he held some two years, but never became a naturalized citizen of Mexico. Later he joined Colonel George K. Leet in the firm of Leet & Stocking, New York, and conducted the general-order warehouse business. About three years ago he left that firm to represent the National Bank Note Engraving Company of New York in Washington, which position he held till he died. He was a handsome man, of iron constitution, strong will, dignified bearing, generous disposition, and admirable social qualities. His friends knew him to be the soul of honor. He was only thirty-three years of age.

Three years ago he married Miss Pattie Miller, daughter of Justice Miller, of the United States Supreme Court. His funeral took place from Judge Miller's house in Washington, and a large number of distinguished persons followed his remains to Oak Hill Cemetery. Mrs. Stocking, through her unremitting attentions during six weeks of illness, has been seized with a severe nervous prostration, but her condition is not dangerous.

Jottings.

The Assessors will hold a meeting at the Aldermen's room this evening at 7 1-2 o'clock.

The New Hampshire Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals have perfected arrangements for an excursion to the Isles of Shoals, next Tuesday. All persons friendly to the cause in which the society is engaged are invited to go with them and enjoy a day's recreation among the Isles of the sea and a moonlight sail on the water. Those who wish to return before dark can come home on the regular afternoon trip of the boat. Persons not wishing to leave their business all day, can go out at six o'clock and return at nine P. M. The fare for the round trip is 75 cts. Dinner $1.00.

Mr. G. H. Jenness has been appointed postmaster at Rye Beach.

Gup announces that there are still unsettled claims arising from the rowdyism of some of his political associates who were kicked into the street from the CHRONICLE doorway on the night of the 9th of March, because they were spoiling for a fight and smote at something stronger than the whiskey they had been fed on during the day. But we thought that physician's bill paid.

The State Prison.

The report of the Warden and Inspectors of the State Prison for the current year, is replete with interesting facts. On May 1, 1874, the whole number of prisoners was 95; received between May 1, 1874, and April 30, 1875, 56, making whole number during the year, 151.

Whole number discharged, 24, as follows: 5 pardon, 4 by death, and fifteen by expiration of term. Whole number in prison April 30, 1875, 127—white males 118, black 3, females 6. Of this number 28 are under 20 years of age, 52 between 20 and 30, 29 between 30 and; 40, 11 between 40 and 50, and 7 over 50. As regards their social relations, habits of life and education, the classification is respectively as follows: married 39, single, 88; claim to be temperate, 40; admit themselves to be intemperate, 87; can read and write, 111; read only, 4; cannot read, 12.

These convicts are serving sentences for the following crimes: Murder 2; murder second degree, 6; manslaughter, 3; attempt to kill, 4; rape, 2; attempt at rape, 3; arson, 11; burglary, 26; highway robbery, 3; stealing horse, 10; breaking, entering and stealing, 17; stealing, 26; forgery, 2; adultery, 2; obtaining goods by false pretence, 4; obstructing railroad track, 3; passing counterfeit money, embezzlement, and breaking seal on railroad car, 1 each.

There are three sentenced for 30 year s, 1 for 25, 1 for 21, 3 for 20, 14 for from 10 to 18 years inclusive; 23 more than 4 years and less than 10, 13 for 4 years, 46 for 3 years, 14 for 2 years and 4 for 1 year.

These 127 convicts are of the following countries: United States, 97, Ireland, 9, Nova Scotia, 2, Sweden, 2. Since the establishment of the prison in 1812, 1,652 prisoners have been committed. Of this 837 have served their sentences and been discharged, 546 have been pardoned, 9 sent to the asylum for the insane, 118 have died, and 20 escaped.

Fifty-six have been committed during the year—the largest number for one year, with a single exception, which was 1866, when 60 new comers arrived; 4 have died during the year. The earnings of the prison for the year have been $14,971.57, leaving a gain over every expense of $15,692-46. Discount allowed contractor from October 1, 1873, to April 30, 1875, inclusive, $11,268.96.

Motherless.

[Albany Sunday Press.]

Three little golden heads at an upper window and a long line of carriages in the street below. Nurse holds baby up, who laughs and claps his little dimpled hands as his eye is caught by the nodding plumes on the hearse; and presently the procession moves down the street, and mother has gone away forever. The men from the undertaker's remove the traces of the funeral; the parlors are in their wonted order, except perhaps the curtains are not looped as gracefully, the furniture is not disposed as tastefully, and the little ornaments and bijouterie are not in their accustomed places. In mother's room there's a chill and prim air about everything, so different from its usual look of cosey comfort. A bright June sunlight is gleaming through the half-opened blinds, but it does not seem to give warmth or cheer. The toys are brought out, but the children soon tire of them. There's something gone—they scarce realize what. By and by baby begins to fret, and nurse gets cross. Poor little darling! mamma's pet! how tenderly she would have soothed him with soft lullabys. And then papa comes home and gathers the little flock around his knee, and tries to tell them something of the beautiful home to which mamma has gone; but they want her sadly here; they cannot think why the Good Father should want her so much more.

A Revengeful Organ.

The stomach is a revengeful organ. If we assign it indigestible food, it not only refuses to perform its office, but inflicts upon us unspeakable tortures, such as those of indigestion, colic, cholera morbus, &c. Not content with giving us pain, it frequently inaugurates an excessive and wasting diarrhœa, called dysentery, which carries us to our graves. With a view to prevent these consequences, as soon as the stomach gives notice by premonitory twinges that its cargo is not to its liking, a wineglassful or two of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters should be swallowed. This admirable digestive cordial will promptly reconcile the refractory organ to its contents, and prevent any of those annoying and possibly fatal results which the presence of indigestible food in the stomach is liable to produce. The Bitters are also a superb tonic, restorative and appetizer.

An oriental traveller describes this busy scene, witnessed on historic shores: "Our steamer landed on a beach which was the port of Antioch, where the disciples were first called Christians. There was no town at the water's edge, no people, no wharf. The passengers and the merchandise were put ashore in lighters, which ran up into the sand. A troop of camels, with their drivers, lay on the beach, ready to transport the goods into the interior. Among the articles landed were boxes marked 'DR. J. C. AYER & CO., LOWELL, MASS, U. S. A.,' showing that they contained medicines and whence they came. These with other goods were hoisted on the backs of camels, for transportation to Antioch. Thus the skill of the West sends back its remedies to heal the maladies of populations that inhabit those eastern shores, whence our spiritual manna came."—Windsor (Vt.) Chronicle.

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH OF THE CITY OF PORTSMOUTH call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10 of the City Ordinances and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the city to aid them in the execution of their duty.

CHAPTER X.

Sec. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, &c. shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the health officers may direct.

Sec. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

Sec. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten days from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time above specified.

Sec. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offals of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

Sec. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisances shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

Sec. 12. When any householder shall know that any person within his family is taken sick of the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 13. When any physician shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for each refusal or neglect forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the health officers in the name of the city.

Sec. 16. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other thing declared by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier—the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may, by direction of the mayor and accompanied by a police officer, forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

Sec. 21. No person shall erect, keep or continue or permit to be erected, kept or continued, upon any land occupied by him, any pen for the keeping of swine, or privy, over either of the mill ponds in this city, or so placed that offensive substances therefrom shall be discharged or drained into either of said ponds, or into any creek, or cove or drain leading thereto. And no person shall construct, keep or continue any drain leading from any pen for the keeping of any swine, slaughter-house, privy vault, or other unwholesome or offensive place, into either of said ponds, or to any flat or marsh adjoining the same. And no person shall throw or suffer to be thrown from his land into either of said ponds, or upon any of said flats or marshes, any dead, decaying, unwholesome or offensive animal or vegetable substances.

Daily Chronicle.

—A "tramp" writes to the Providence Journal of his profession as composed "of men who go from place to place through the country, gathering and disseminating, of course, a great amount of useful information, relying mainly upon the public hospitality for their temporary maintenance, never wearing out their welcome by a long sojourn in one place, never interfering in politics, carefully and conscientiously abstaining from all agitation of the labor question in any of its phases."

—At a circus, while the rope-walker was going through his performance, a boy about twelve years old turned to an acquaintance of the same age and remarked: "Tom, don't you wish you could do that?" "Yes I do," sadly replied Tom, "but my folks make me go to school and are determined that I shan't be nobody?"

PULMOCINE

An English Remedy

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS.

For Nervousness and General Debility,

PREMATURE decay, mental and physical prostration, fear, despondency, over indulgence in the use of opium or alcoholic drinks, tobacco, &c., &c. Medicines unrivalled for their wonderful properties and remarkable cures of all Nervous Complaints. Their efficacy is equally great in the treatment and cure of Cancers, Nodes, Ulcers, Pustules, Pimples, Tetter, Fever Sores, Ringworm, Erysipelas, Scald-Head, Barbers' Itch, Scurvy, Salt Rheum, Copper Colored Blotches, Glandular Swelling, Worms and Black Spots in the flesh, Discoloration, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth and Nose, Sore Legs, and sores of every character, because the medicines are the very best Blood Medicine ever placed before the people, and are warranted to be the most Powerful Alterative ever originated by man. They impart Strength to the Body and Vigor to the Mind, removing Morbid Sensibility, Depression of Spirits, Dementia and Melancholia.

NERVOUS DEBILITY.

However obscure the causes may be which contribute to render nervous debility a disease so prevalent, affecting as it does, nearly one-half of our adult population, it is a melancholy fact that day by day, and year by year, we witness a most frightful increase of nervous affections from the slightest neuralgia to the more grave and extreme forms of Nervous Prostration.

It is of the highest importance, then, that individuals should be able to judge for themselves, by their own feelings, if and to what extent they are attacked by this insidious enemy to ill health, comfort, and even life itself if left to run its course unchecked by the early and prompt application of curative remedies.

DRUNKENNESS.

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS is the only remedy that has ever proved by practical experience a benefit to those who suffer from over-indulgence in alcoholic liquors; it completely destroys the taste for them, and restores the victim of intemperance to health and vigor. A single trial will prove it to be just what it is recommended to be.

Price $2.50. Large size, $5. Each package of the Cordial Balm contains one box of the Tonic Pills, which may also be had separately at 50 cents per box.

RECENT TESTIMONIALS.

FREWSBURGH, Nov. 12, 1874.

I have used the Cordial Balm and Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills as a preventive and cure for the use of ardent spirits and habitual intoxication, and find them actually specific in such cases. I regard them as most invaluable medicines, and nothing could induce me to be without them.

JACOB MESERVE.

TIPTON, Dec. 3, 1874.

We take great pleasure in informing you of the surprisingly beneficial results from the use of your English Remedy, The Cordial Balm of Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills, in a case of great Nervous Debility and Prostration, by a member of our family who had been under treatment by different doctors for nearly three years past without any apparent benefit therefrom; but your medicines have produced a most wonderful change for the better and the patient now enjoys comparatively excellent health.

MRS. HARRIET STURGISS.

P. S.—We tell all with whom we are acquainted who are similarly afflicted to try your medicines.

Convincing and Satisfatory RESULTS.

OF

MR. SHEWELL,

The Popular Manager of the Boston Theater.

THE GREAT VALUE OF THE

DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

APRIL 4, 1875.

Prof. ATTHONSE HILLER: Dear Sir—Many thanks for two bottles of "Diamond Rheumatic Cure" which you so kindly sent me through Mr. Marston, I used but one bottle, which relieved me of a severe attack, and better still, I have not had a twinge since, and I am in hopes that I shall never have another, as the last attack was in July, 1875. Should it, however, return, I still have the other bottle left and shall try it, and expect the same beneficial results. Gratefully yours, L. R. SHEWELL.

The above testimony ought to convince the most skeptical rheumatic that a sure cure has been discovered in the

DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

It is from such results and every day proofs like these that physicians are now prescribing the DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE as an infallible specific for removing the cause of Gout, Chronic, Acute or Muscular Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Nervous Headache, Neuralgia of the Head, Heart, Stomach and Kidney; Tic Doloreaux, Nervousness, Flying Pains, Twisted Joints, Swollen Joints, Pain in the Back and Loins, Weakness of the Kidneys, Tired feeling, Languid, Weary Prostration, and all Nervous and Chronic Diseases.

Let any sufferer who reads this purchase a small bottle and take it according to the instructions around the package, and it will not take long to convince him that paying doctors' fees is money thrown away —liniments of all kinds are useless.

This medicine is for sale at all Druggists' throughout the United States and Canada. If it happens that your Druggist has not got it in stock, ask him to send for it to the Wholesale Agents, GEORGE C. GOODWIN & CO. BOOK AGENTS wanted to sell "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser." It is the cheapest book ever published; 885 pages, over 250 illustrations, $1.50. Thousands buy it at sight, who could not be induced to purchase the high-priced books treating of Domestic Medicine. Unlike other books sold through agents this work is thoroughly advertised throughout North America. This fact, together with the large size, elegant appearance, and many new features of the book, causes it to sell more rapidly than any work ever published in this country. Those of my agents who have had experience in selling books, say that in all their previous canvassing they never met with such success or made so large wages, as since commencing the sale of my work. Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or Inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not know ing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,
Croup,
Diphtheria,
Asthma, etc.,
—USE—
Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents.'

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

A New Canal Boat Motor.

Max Adler writes as follows: Captain Binns has an inventive turn of mind, and some time ago as he had a pair of particularly stubborn mules to haul his canal boat, it occurred to him that he might devise some scientific method of inducing the said mules to move on whenever they were inclined to become baulky. Both mules had phlegmatic temperaments, and when they made up their minds to stop and stand still, they would do so and refuse to move, no matter with what vigor the boy used the whip. Captain Binns therefore bought a tow-line made of three strands of galvanized wire, and placing iron collars upon the necks of the mules he fastened the wires to them, and then he got a very strong galvanic battery and put it in the cabin of the boat, attaching it to the other end of the line.

The first time the mules stopped to reflect, the Captain sent a strong current through the wire. The near mule gave a little start of astonishment, and then it looked around at the boy upon the tow-path with a mournful smile, that seemed to say: "Sonny, I would like to know how you worked that." But the mules stood still. Then the Captain turned a stronger current on, and the near mule shied a little, and looked hard at the boy who was standing by whittling a stick. The Captain sent another shock through the line, and then the mule convinced that that boy was somehow responsible for the mysterious occurrence, reached over, seized the boy's jacket with his teeth, shook him up and passed him to the front mule, who kicked him carefully over the bank into the river.

The mules were about to turn the matter over in their minds when Captain Binns sent the full force of the current through the wire, and kept it going steadily. Thereupon the animals became panic stricken. They began to rear and plunge; they turned around and dashed down the tow-path toward the boat; then the line became taut; it jerked the boat around suddenly with such force that the stern of it broke through a weak place in the bank, and before the Captain could turn off his battery the mules had dashed around the other side of the toll collector's cabin, and then, making a lurch to the left, they fell over the bank themselves, the line scraping the cabin, the collector and three children, and a colored man, over with them. By the time the line was cut and the sufferers rescued, the mules were drowned, and all the water in the canal had gone out through the break. It cost Captain Binns three hundred dollars for damages, and he is now trying to invent a steam engine which will do for canal boats and enable them to dispense with mules.

SATURDAY, JULY 10, 1875.

Democratic Rascality.

As might have been expected, the democratic Senate killed all the bills (which passed the House before the final adjournment) tending to reform the iniquitous abuses that characterized the last election. The House unanimously passed a bill repealing the ratable poll law by which tramps are entitled to representation. This law was placed upon the statute book by the democratic legislature of 1871, its evident intention being to increase the representation in cities and small towns where the democracy are in the ascendency. This law was made the excuse for the fraudulent election of two Representatives from Hart's Location and for an increase of representation in Manchester and elsewhere. The Senate defeated the repeal of the law, and there remains no doubt that it is the intention of the democracy in the campaign of 1876 to disgrace the State with a repetition of the extensive frauds of 1875. The proposed repeal if carried would have made a six months' residence in the State a necessary qualification for a ratable poll. A few days' temporary residence of irresponsible persons may result in such an increase of representation as to deprive the republicans of a majority in the next House of Representatives although they may carry their State ticket by a majority amounting to thousands. The House will be the key to the situation in the U. S. Senatorial contest, and its possession under such circumstances would be but the signal for the opening of a controversy fraught with dangerous consequences.

Foster's Democrat speaks out openly in the matter, saying: "What that Senate could have been thinking about is more than we can tell. And now the same infamous farce of packing the next House is to be enacted again next March. The way this thing is going on, the House will by and by be nothing but a great mass meeting, or a mob. It is not much better than that now. The tendency is from bad to worse all the time. It has been demonstrated that any board of selectmen under the present law may put as many names as they please upon the back of a check list, no matter who they are or where they come from, or where they may go after the election. They have accomplished their work in securing spurious representatives in the General Court, representatives who go to Concord, take their seats, get their pay and go home again. The expenses of the State are enormously increased and not a cent's worth of benefit is derived by anybody except the interlopers themselves. They pocket what they can get and the tax-payers suffer accordingly. It is a most miserable system, and we repeat our surprise that the Senate should have defeated the bill requiring a six months' residence for a ratable poll. We have seen no reason for this course, and we don't believe there is any."

There was a law under which the election of 1874 was held, closing the polls in Portsmouth at half-past six o'clock. The democrats repealed it last year because it interfered with their little games,—on the plea that if not applied generally throughout the State it should not be made applicable to Portsmouth. They had counted out republicans in Manchester and Portsmouth, and wanted to repeat it. Its repeal gave them the Mayorship of Portsmouth, and their experience at Manchester last March showed that with no law compelling a closing of the polls they had counted in a democratic Senator and democratic city government. Mr. Albert Jackson, a democratic member of the House, testified that at seven o'clock on the day of election last March, the republicans of Manchester had the city by 71 majority. Between that time and midnight that majority was overcome by Ward Five alone.

A bill was introduced closing the polls hereafter in all the cities at seven o'clock. The House passed it, and the Senate refused to. Each Senator who voted to kill the bill virtually confessed that the democratic party cannot hold an equal contest in open daylight with any chance of success. The party wants time to get those on whom it relies for its majorities drunk enough to be led to the polls and forced to vote the democratic ticket. It wants time enough and darkness sufficient to enable the rascals whom it puts in charge of the ballot box, to manipulate the votes and count out legally chosen republicans. This has been done in Portsmouth repeatedly, and that it may be done again here and elsewhere, four democratic Senators elected last March, one democrat declared elected by the Manchester frauds, and two others appointed by that other Manchester fraud, Ex-Governor Weston, join hands in defeating a bill that no honest man could have any objections against. It is an open declaration that the democracy in the next campaign intend to be as unscrupulous as they dare—and to what extent they dare depends largely on the determination of republicans to have a fair election and an honest count.

News and Notes.

Mr. Frank D. Moulton has written a letter to District Attorney Britton of Brooklyn, demanding a speedy disposition of the indictment for libel found against him by the grand jury for charging Beecher with adultery with Mrs. Tilton. Britton replied sarcastically, declining to push the case at present, in such a manner as to show that he lacks certain essential elements common to gentlemen.

As an instance of what one check accomplished, and how its meanderings terminated, it is stated that one was drawn by a prominent gentleman in New Haven about two weeks ago for about $800, and was passed by the endorser to a lumber firm in New Haven. From thence it went to seven other concerns, and finally found its way to the original drawer of it. The last indorser happened to be one who was in arrears to the drawer, and, seeing his name to the check and the rounds the check had gone and the good it had done, concluded he would "do something handsome," to the drawer, and paid it over. That check liquidated several thousand dollars' worth of accounts.

The Black Hills bonanza has been exploded by Prof. Janney, who was sent out by the Interior Department to test the stories told about the fabulous, gold mines of that far off country. He reports that gold does not exist in sufficient quantities to make mining profitable.

Hon. D. W. Voorhees of Indiana is expected to take the stump in Ohio for rag money. He is as wild on the subject as Mr. Pendleton is.

There is an excursion of Ohio editors out West just at this time. According to the correspondence of the Cleveland Leader, they took a vote, a few days since, on the guilt or innocence of Mr. Beecher. Eighty-one voted him guilty, forty-four innocent, and eight doubtful.

The Manchester Mirror says; The republican members have gone away well satisfied with the record they have made and with the prospect ahead. They understand better than ever before what an unscrupulous foe they have to contend with, and that in order to carry the next election they must not only poll more votes than their opponents, but must meet and defeat fraudulent voting and naturalization, double representation and a whole catalogue of desperate frauds; and this they believe they can do. They have the Governor, who will issue the summons to the Senators elect next May; they have the Clerk, who will make up the roll of the House next year: and they have the control of forty checklists which were in the hands of their enemies a year ago. All these are substantial gains from last year.

At Farmington on the 24th of June, a Mrs. Wentworth set a clothes-horse full of ironed clothes near the stove to dry, and while in another part of the house, a gust of wind blew them on to the stove; they were not only burned but a bed and some furniture, causing a loss of some $150.

Boston Post: "It belonged to the self-respect of the New Hampshire Senate to resent the intrusive and distatorial action of the republican majority of the House in condemning that body for Constitutionally filling its disputed seats." The idea of the usurping majority of the Senate having any self-respect is perfectly ludicrous. Three of them held seats to which each knew he was not entitled, and the other four helped retain them in those seats. "Self-respect"—indeed!

The session of the legislature was a week shorter than the session of last year, and consequently it cost the State some $8,000 less. But for the determination of the republican House to bring the session to a close, the democratic Senate would have added another week.

Senator Sargent, in his recent speech in San Francisco, gave his auditors the following practical reminder: "Have you thought, fellow-citizens, that the reduction of the national debt has been $120 a minute since you have sat here and I commenced talking? Taking the average of the whole time, the reduction of the debt has gone on at that rate. Why, take your watch and look at it. See the second-hand as it flies; at each tick of the second-hand two dollars, during the whole time since Grant's inauguration, by day and by night, upon week day and upon Sunday—two dollars per second in gold has gone off the national debt."

Plymouth Church offers a high premium for—Beecherism! It pays its pastor a salary of $100,000 this year.

A field trial of mowers was held on the grounds of the Agricultural College, at Hanover, June 29th. The committee was appointed one each by the Senate and House Committee on Agriculture of the New Hampshire legislature, one by the State Board of Agriculture, one by the N. H. Agricultural Society, and one by the Connecticut Valley Farmers' Club. The first and only prize of $75 was awarded to the New Model Buckeye entered by the Richardson Manufacturing Co., of Worcester, Mass., which showed forty pounds' lighter draft than any other, over the Walter A. Wood, Clipper, Granite State, Eastern Star, and People's mowers, and the Buckeye was retained for use on the College farm. In one very severe test, that of drawing the machine into heavy standing grass while thrown out of gear, and then throwing it into gear and starting without backing, the Buckeye succeeded in doing it three successive times. Only one other machine succeeded in doing it at all, and that only once. At the field trial of mowers, held under the auspices of the Essex County Agricultural Society, at Danvers, June 22, and which was an unusually hot contest, the New Model Buckeye was awarded the first premium over the Walter A. Wood, Wood's Eagle, Warrior and Garfield mowers.

Col. Hart, of Palatka, Fla., paid Mrs. Eliza Thigben for 4300 oranges picked from a twenty-five years old tree last Winter, $107.50, or two and a half cents each.

The Governor and Council have appointed as Commissioners of Pharmacy under the new drug law, Elias S. Russell, of Nashua, for one year, Charles S. Eastman of Concord, for two years, and Charles A. Tufts, of Dover, for three years.

Conductor Hibbard seems to be responsible for the Rockaway accident.

One of the Barre, Vt., bank robbers was arrested at Rumney, and is in jail at Montpelier.

Three men have been arrested at Northfield on the charge of piling cord wood and sleepers on the railroad track one mile from Tilton for the purpose of throwing a freight train from the track.

There have been further inundations in France and great loss of property.

Loeder and Price have been indicated for perjury on the testimony of Beecher and Mrs. Tilton.

While boating in Little Bay on the 17th Wm. H. Simpson of Newmarket picked up a row-boat about twenty-five feet in length, bottom side up. The boat was painted red, had a hole stove in her side, and the appearance of having met with an accident. He also picked up a common straw hat, and a demijohn (3 gal.) corked tight and filled with water. J. M. R. Adams, who lives near the same locality, picked up a portion of a sail boat painted white, which had evidently seen hard usage. A lady's white skirt floated out from under the big boat at the time she was taken in tow; but having nothing but an oar to work with the strong tide floated it out of reach, and it was lost. Earlier in the day several other pieces of clothing were seen floating in the tide; but as portions of old rags are frequently seen in the river, nothing was thought about this until the finding of the boats, hat and demijohn.

There was a meeting of prominent democrats at Manchester on Thursday for the purpose of devising way and means to divert if possible the sound drubbing they are likely to get at the polls next March. No more feasible plan than polling illegal votes and counting in non-elected candidates was talked or thought of, and all went home determined to do their level worst toward defeating the will of the people.

Gen. Francis P. Blair, Jr, died in St. Louis on Friday, aged 54 years.

Fifty boys in Great Falls have signed a pledge to drink nothing stronger than coffee or tea, and to abstain from vulgarity in every form. They have named themselves the Boys' Reform Club. Some of them had been in the habit of using intoxicating drinks, though we are told that the oldest member is only 14 years of age.

Saved A Train.

The Indianapolis Sentinel of Saturday, 3d inst., has this interesting story: "Last Tuesday the Cincinnati day express, going east, left Connersville on time, and was flying on its way at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour, when approaching a bridge over a river a few miles from Connersville the engineer noticed a small boy in the middle of the track motioning wildly with his arms. The heavy rains for several days before had caused the man at the throttle no little anxiety, and in a moment it flashed over his mind that the bridge, but a very short distance ahead, was at least damaged by the freshet. With one hand he reached for the whistle and with the other he reversed the engine. The train employes heard no ordinary stopping signal in the keen, short whistle, and in moment, conductor, baggageman, and all the train employes were helping the regular brakemen wind the chains that were perhaps the only hopes of saving the lives of all on board. The train was stopped within but a few steps of where the bridge once rested on the abutment. The structure had been washed entirely away, and had it not been for the boy the entire train would have gone into the river, as the bridge was just at the end of a curve and so hidden by trees that its disappearance would not have been noticed until too late. As soon as the passengers had gotten over the shock the full realization of their danger had caused, a search was made for the boy. He was found sitting down off to one side of the track, shaking as if he had a chill, so badly was he frightened. Everyone on the train flocked around the brave little fellow, who said he was eleven years old, and almost crushed him in their joyful anxiety to even touch his body. He innocently said he did not begin shaking until he sat down, thereby showing that not until he had seen the train stop in safety did his nerves give way. He said his name was Davis, and that he lived near by, pointing to a farmhouse. He was on his way home from a neighbor's when he discovered that the bridge had been washed away since passing an hour previous. He remembered the down passenger train, and knowing that it was about time it came along, hurried up the track to give warning. He had only arrived at the spot where he was noticed by the engineer when the train came along. One of the passengers, an elderly Quaker lady, gave him $5, which he was reluctant to accept, although the conductor informed her that the officers of the road would reward the boy. The following Superintendent Williams arrived at the scene, and hunting out the hero gave him what money he had about him, some $20, with the promise that whenever he wanted anything at all that he should apply to him.

Constitutional Convention.

Three propositions for a Constitutional Convention were laid before the late session of the legislature. One of them was adopted, the full text of which is as follows;

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court convened:

That the selectmen of the different towns and places in this State be directed to insert in their several warrants calling town meetings for the election of governor on the second Tuesday of March next, an article which shall require the sense of the qualified voters to be taken on the following question, to wit:

Is it expedient that a convention be called to revise the constitution?

Be it further resolved, that the Secretary of State furnish the town clerks of the several towns and wards in this State, at least ten days before said second Tuesday of March, a number of tickets equal to twice the number of votes cast for Governor at the annual March election of 1875; upon which tickets shall be printed the aforesaid question with the answer "yes," and an equal number of tickets upon which shall be printed the aforesaid question with the answer "No," all of which tickets said town clerk shall have at the several places of voting in the State, for the use of voters on the second Tuesday of March, 1876.

It will be seen by the above that the expediency of calling such a convention is to be submitted to the people of the State at our annual election in March next. If a majority of the voters vote "no," that is the end of it, of course; if they vote "yes," then it will be the duty of the next legislature to call a convention for that purpose, the delegates to which to be chosen in the same manner and proportioned the same as the representatives to the General Court. After the delegates complete their labors and frame a new constitution this will then be submitted to the people of the State and will not be adopted as the constitution of the State unless it receives the approving votes of two thirds of all the qualified voters who are present at the polls and voting on the subject. These are the facts and constitutional provisions relating to this matter.

The Gentle Alligator.

Col. Pratt, of the Palatka (Fla.) Herald, is unwinding some more of those yarns about the alligator. Hear him:

Our neighbor, Capt. Osteen, is responsible for the following incident: He says that while working in his corn field he sent his little boy for a pitcher of water; the boy had not been absent more than ten minutes when he heard his cry of terror—he hastened to the spot, when to his astonishment he found the boy on top of a fence, and an alligator eight feet long, rearing up and trying to get at him. Of course he dispatched the 'gator and relieved the trembling boy.

Our friend Mr. Camp, U. S. Mail Superintendent for this District, came near losing his identity on the Homasassee river in Hernando county. While down there he took a boat and went fishing. The twilight had faded and it was too dark to discover distinctly the outline of shore objects. Camp ordered the rowers to back up to a large log and anchor; as the boat neared the landing, out leaped Camp, when lo! and behold, the log became instinct with life, tossing Camp over into the marsh. The terror stricken crew hardly recovered from their surprise, when it was found that the alligator, as it proved to be, had got entangled in the hawser and made off with the boat. In the mean time one of the crew harpooned the 'gator; this made the animal furious, but the party secured him. He measured twelve feet in length. Mr. Camp has the head, all cleaned and polished as bright as ivory, and intends to keep it as a memento of his Homosassee excursion.

—The story I will tell as it was told me, without a guarantee of truth. Early last Spring an old woman dug up a pailful of dirt in which to plant flower seed. She put the pan under the stove, not once thinking of grasshopper eggs, and went out to see a neighbor. Upon her return, after an hour's absence, she found thousands of millions of grasshoppers, generated from the eggs by the heat, literally eating her out of house and home. They first attacked the green shades on the windows, and then a green dust-pan. A green Irish servant girl, asleep in one of the rooms, was the next victim, and not a vestige of her was left. The stove and stove-pipe were next eaten, and then the house was torn down so that they could get at the chimney. Boards, joists, beams, clothing, nails, hinges, door-knobs, plates, tin-ware—everything, in fact, the house contained was eaten up, and the last the good woman saw of the place, two of the largest 'hoppers were sitting up on end playing mumble-pegs with a carving-knife for which should have the cellar.

—Sheridan once told a story of the exquisite good breeding of a banker's clerk, of whom the wit had borrowed some money, and to whom he actually repaid it. "Didn't he look astonished?" asked a discourteous friend. "No," said Sheridan, "he was just going to look astonished when he remembered his manners, and swept away the money as unconcernedly as if he had not given up any idea of seeing it again."

—A young lady of Brooklyn Heights woke up from a terrible dream one night last week. She dreamt that a young man with a soft beard was pressing his face against hers. When she awoke she found it was only the cat. She was mad then.

—There is no Henry Ward Beecher or Theodore Tilton in the Chicago directory, but there are Kiss, Kissing, and Letzkiss, and two Mormons.

—A Cape May belle says the baths there are as "exhilarating as the clasp of a lover." She has tried both.

THE WM. ANSON WOOD'S

EAGLE MOWER.

THE NYE BAY STATE

HORSE RAKE.

Farmers are respectfully requested to inspect these Machines before purchasing elsewhere.

They are believed to be the best Mower and Rake in the Market.

The Mower is strong, durable and of the lightest draft.

IT HAS TAKEN ONE HUNDRED PREMIUMS.

The demand has increased from 200 in 1873 to over 7000 in 1875 which is ample proof of their superiority.

The rake for 1875 is perfected so that by a simple centre-trip attachment, three pounds' pressure with the foot will DUMP THE RAKE.

These Machines can be seen at Hayes Farm and will be cheerfully shown to parties whether they purchase or not. We are ready to compare notes with any other machines in a field trial.

A Revengeful Organ.

The stomach is a revengeful organ. If we assign it indigestible food, it not only refuses to perform its office, but inflicts upon us unspeakable tortures, such as those of indigestion, colic, cholera morbus, &c. Not content with giving us pain, it frequently inaugurates an excessive and wasting diarrhœa, called dysentery, which carries us to our graves. With a view to prevent these consequences, as soon as the stomach gives notice by premonitory twinges that its cargo is not to its liking, a wineglassful or two of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters should be swallowed. This admirable digestive cordial will promptly reconcile the refractory organ to its contents, and prevent any of those annoying and possibly fatal results which the presence of indigestible food in the stomach is liable to produce. The Bitters are also a superb tonic, restorative and appetizer.

An oriental traveller describes this busy scene, witnessed on historic shores: "Our steamer landed on a beach which was the port of Antioch, where the disciples were first called Christians. There was no town at the water's edge, no people, no wharf. The passengers and the merchandise were put ashore in lighters, which ran up into the sand. A troop of camels, with their drivers, lay on the beach, ready to transport the goods into the interior. Among the articles landed were boxes marked 'DR. J. C. AYER & Co., LOWELL, MASS, U. S. A.,' showing that they contained medicines and whence they came. These with other goods were hoisted on the backs of camels, for transportation to Antioch. Thus the skill of the West sends back its remedies to heal the maladies of populations that inhabit those eastern shores, whence our spiritual manna came."—Windsor (Vt.) Chronicle.

Local Matters.

Jottings.

The Eastern Railroad has begun well for the season. The number of passengers thus far taken east and north is somewhat in advance of last year's figures.

Rev. John A. Goss will conduct the services on Haymarket Square to-morrow afternoon at four o'clock.

The select hop at the Wentworth on Wednesday evening next will be a recherche, full dress affair, about twenty-five couple from this and other cities participating. The ball and dining rooms will be decorated, and supper served by the light of the moon. Harlow's orchestra furnishes the music.

The proprietors of the Wentworth have put on a new coach, which for convenience and comfort is ahead of most of the 'buses run in this vicinity.

The new ship "Cold Stream," owned in part by Capt. John S. Pray of this city, now loading at New York for Australia, is to be commanded by Capt. Harry Salter of this city, with John Yeaton, (son of Moses Yeaton) as mate.

Capt. Albert Salter has resumed the command of the ship Simla, and will shortly sail from New York on a voyage to Europe and the East Indies.

The annual graduation exercises of the High Schools take place on the 15th. The graduation class will number ten young ladies, and six young men. A reception will be held in the evening at the school room to former graduates and invited guests, Harlow's orchestra furnishing the music.

Mr. Jeff C. Rowe is running on the Eastern Railroad as Agent for the Appledore House.

The yacht races at the Shoals will occupy two days. On the 23d the "Oceanic" prizes will be contested for, and on the following day there will be a grand sweep-stake regatta, the first yacht making the course to be awarded a mammoth punch-bowl, sixteen inches high, twenty-five inches wide and valued at $300. The "Oceanic" prizes are, for the first prize, first class, an elegant, large, silver berry bowl, standing eight inches high, diameter ten inches, enclosed in Turkey morocco case; value, $125; second prize, first class, one pair, sterling silver, satin and cashmere engraved and gold lined drinking goblets, in Turkey morocco case; value, $70 each; first prize, second class; Neptune ice set of five pieces; value at $60; second prize, second class: Argonaut fruit dish; value $33.

Brown & Barri are bound to lay the dust and lay it well. They have purchased a new sprinkler.

Daniel A. Soule, engineer on the Eastern freight, fell into a culvert, Thursday night, at North Berwick, and fractured his jaw in two places. He was taken to the office of Dr. Whittier, where his wounds were dressed.

There is to be a clam-bake at Cushing's grove on Tuesday.

It is reported on good authority that the Sheriff's officers had a hard time in handcuffing Wagner, who had sworn that he would kill any man who dared enter his cell to bind him before taking him to the scaffold. It is said the officers used two boat hooks, with which they drew and held him fast to the grate of the door, while the Sheriff pinioned him. Reporters were rigorously excluded from the vicinity at the time, which is accounted for by this strange though not improbable story.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Eastern Railroad in New Hampshire will be held in this city next Tuesday, and it is probable that many visitors will join the S. P. C. A. excursion to the Shoals.

The exhibition by Mr. Lamprey's juvenile dancing class comes off this evening.

Steamship Faraday was spoken on the 15th in lat. 49, lon. 43 30, east of all ice and engaged on the cable, which was buoyed in two places.

Gup forgets that the chap who was kicked out of doors was a brawling democrat and the kicker was an ex-policeman. No cards!

City Council.

In Board of Mayor and Aldermen, Thursday evening, the following petitions were referred: John Stokell for a sidewalk in front of his house, Islington street; Mary C. Salter for relaying sidewalk at 96 State street; Meshach Bell for leave to locate a post in front of his house, Deer street; and John Stavers for a walk across Middle street, opposite B. F. Webster's.

The claim of S. S. Frye and others for articles destroyed July 5th, was received and it was voted that they have leave to withdraw the same.

The following petitions were granted under the usual restrictions: Jas. E. Dennett to relay sidewalk and drain on Vaughan street; Wiggin & Hayes for the continuation of their sidewalk on Vaughan street; John D. Swain to encumber Austin and Cabot streets, and W. J. Frazer to encumber Pleasant and Washington streets, for building purposes.

Horace W. Waldron, Oliver W. Locke, Chas. R. Green, James C. Locke and Simon H. Mills were appointed special police without pay.

The petition of H. F. Wendell and others that Chas. H. Broughton be permitted to raise a volunteer fire company to be located at the arsenal, was referred.

The committee to whom was referred the petition of Col. Jerome C. Butler and others for the straightening of Lafayette Road near the junction of South and Middle roads recommended that the prayer of the petitioners be granted, and that the sum of $50 is a sufficient award for damages and land to be taken. They also reported that the road at that point had been encroached on by parties to them unknown. The report was accepted and a hearing ordered on the petition.

The committee on city lands and buildings reported a plan of lots at the City Farm, and also a joint resolution relating to the sale of the same.

Voted, That the matter be recommitted to the same committee and that they be requested to recommend appropriate names for the streets.

Voted—That the proposal of the New Hampshire National Bank to pay the city at the rate of three and a half per cent. per annum upon the city deposits and charge five per cent. for loans for current expenses of the ensuing year be accepted.

The Mayor, Ald. Hatch and Sise were appointed o committee to represent the city at the annual meeting of the Portsmouth and Dover Railroad.

Adjourned for two weeks.

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH OF THE CITY OF PORTSMOUTH call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10 of the City Ordinances and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the city to aid them in the execution of their duty.

CHAPTER X.

Sec. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, &c. shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the health officers may direct.

Sec. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

Sec. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten days from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time above specified.

Sec. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offals of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

Sec. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisances shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

Sec. 12. When any householder shall know that any person within his family is taken sick of the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 13. When any physician shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for each refusal or neglect forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the health officers in the name of the city.

Sec. 16. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other thing deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier —the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may, by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

Sec. 21. No person shall erect, keep or continue or permit to be erected, kept or continued, upon any land occupied by him, any pen for the keeping of swine, or privy, over either of the mill ponds in this city, or so place that offensive substances therefrom shall be discharged or drained into either of said ponds, or into any creek, or cove or drain leading thereinto. And no person shall construct, keep or continue any drain leading from any pen for the keeping of any swine, slaughter-house, privy vault, or other unwholesome or offensive place, into either of said ponds, or so any flat or marsh adjoining the same. And no person shall throw or suffer to be thrown from his land into either of said ponds, or upon any of said flats or marshes, any dead, decaying, unwholesome or offensive animal or vegetable substances.

Daily Chronicle.

—A wedding was lately postponed in Kansas under circumstances of a somewhat thrilling sort. The bride was the only daughter of a family of early settlers named Falconer, and the day of the wedding had arrived, when it was discovered that Miss Falconer was missing. Her parents, supposing she was in her room, went to the door to warn her that the time for the ceremony had arrived, when they found the room empty. It was early evening, so they walked to the window to discover the truant. Their horror may be imagined when they saw, rapidly disappearing through the woods near by, a man carrying in his arms the form of a young girl, which, from the dress, they immediately recognized as that of their daughter. In an instant the alarm was given, and the whole party, well armed, started in pursuit. Within a few minutes they were within gunshot of the fugitive, but were unable to use their weapons in consequence of his shielding his body with the loved form of the bride elect. The young bridegroom was almost frantic, and overtaking the almost breathless abductor, he seized him, and after a brief struggle wrested the girl from him, at the same time discovering that the abductor was a Cheyenne Indian. At the same time that the lover regained his sweetheart, the savage, with an eel-like wriggle, escaped from his hold, but the pursuers were too much for him, and one of their number brought him to the ground by means of a well-aimed bullet. The wedding is said to have been indefinitely postponed in consequence of an attack of brain fever, the result of the fright the bride received.

An English Remedy

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM

AND TONIC PILLS,

For Nervousness and General Debility,

PREMATURE decay, mental and physical prostration, fear, despondency, over indulgence in the use of opium or alcoholic drinks, tobacco, &c., &c. Medicines unrivalled for their wonderful properties and remarkable cures of all Nervous Complaints. Their efficacy is equally great in the treatment and cure of Cancers, Scalds, Ulcers, Pustules, Pimples, Tetter, Fever Sores, Ringworm, Erysipelas, Scald-Head, Barbers' Itch, Scurvy, Salt Rheum, Copper Colored Blotches, Glandular Swelling, Worms and Black Spots in the flesh, Discoloration, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth and Nose, Sore Legs, and sores of every character, because the medicines are the very best Blood Medicine ever placed before the people, and are warranted to be the most Powerful Alterative ever originated by man. They impart Strength to the Body and Vigor to the Mind, removing Morbid Sensibility, Depression of Spirits, Dementia and Melancholia.

NERVOUS DEBILITY.

However obscure the causes may be which contribute to render nervous debility a disease so prevalent, affecting as it does, nearly one-half of our adult population, it is a melancholy fact that day by day, and year by year, we witness a most frightful increase of nervous affections from the slightest neuralgia to the more grave and extreme forms of Nervous Prostration.

It is of the highest importance, then, that individuals should be able to judge for themselves, by their own feelings, if and to what extent they are attacked by this insidious enemy to ill health, comfort, and even life itself if left to run its course unchecked by the early and prompt application of curative remedies.

DRUNKENNESS.

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS is the only remedy that has ever proved by practical experience a benefit to those who suffer from over indulgence in alcoholic liquors; it completely destroys the taste for them, and restores the victim of intemperance to health and vigor. A single trial will prove it to be just what it is recommended to be.

Price $2.50. Large size, $5. Each package of the Cordial Balm contains one box of the Tonic Pills, which may also be had separately at 50 cents per box.

RECENT TESTIMONIALS.

FREWSBURGH, Nov. 12, 1874.

I have used the Cordial Balm and Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills as a preventive and cure for the use of ardent spirits and habitual intoxication, and find them actually specific in such cases. I regard them as most invaluable medicines, and nothing could induce me to be without them.

JACOB MESERVE.

TIPTON, Dec. 3, 1874.

We take great pleasure in informing you of the surprisingly beneficial results from the use of your English Remedy, The Cordial Balm of Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills, in a case of great Nervous Debility and Prostration, by a member of our family who had been under treatment by different doctors for nearly three years past without any apparent benefit therefrom; but your medicines have produced a most wonderful change for the better and the patient now enjoys comparatively excellent health. MRS. HARRIET STURGISS.

P. S.—We tell all with whom we become acquainte who are similarly afflicted to try your medicines.

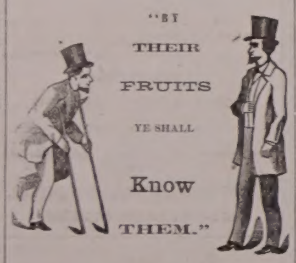
FACTS PROVEN

BY THE

TEST OF EXPERIENCE.



APRIL 4, 1875.

Prof. AFFRONSE HILLER: Dear Sir—Many thanks for two bottles of "Diamond Rheumatic Cure" which you so kindly sent me through Mr. Marston, I used but one bottle, which relieved me of a severe attack, and better still, I have not had a twinge since, and I am in hopes that I shall never have another, as the last attack was in July, 1875. Should it, however, return, I still have the other bottle left and shall try it, and expect the same beneficial results. Gratefully yours, L. R. SHEWELL.

The above testimony ought to convince the most skeptical rheumatic that a sure cure has been discovered in the

DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

It is from such results and every day proofs like these that physicians are now prescribing the DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE as an infallible specific for removing the cause of Gout, Chronic, Acute or Muscular Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Nervous Headache, Neuralgia of the Head, Heart, Stomach and Kidney; The Dolorosaux, Nervousness, Flying Pains, Twisted Joints, Swollen Joints, Pain in the Back and Loins, Weakness of the Kidneys, Tired Feeling, Languid, Weary Prostration, and all Nervous and Chronic Diseases.

Let any sufferer who reads this purchase a small bottle and take it according to the instructions around the package, and it will not take long to convince him that paying doctors' fees is money thrown away —liniments of all kinds are useless.

This medicine is for sale at all Druggists' throughout the United States and Canada. If it happens that your Druggist has not got it in stock, ask him to send for it to the Wholesale Agents, GEORGE C. GOODWIN & CO. SMITH, DOLITTLE & SMITH, CARTER, HARRIS & HAWLEY, RICE & KIMBALL, BIRD, and GILMAN BROTHERS, Boston, H. MARTIN & Co., Concord. J. W. PERKINS & CO. Portland.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

and Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents.'

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

Theatrical Gossip.

[Missouri Republican.]

Clara Morris has a passion for dogs and birds. The day before she sailed for Europe, I dropped in upon her at her handsome home on Fourteenth street. A friend who has seen her in the agonies of the Sphynx and clutching and clawing through Jane Shore was wild to meet her in private life, and thinking to enjoy her complete surprise, I took her to see Clara Morris at home. In the large parlors below are some gorgeous pictures, collected by the Havemeyer family. There were the magnificent life-size portrait of Humboldt from which the engravings are taken, and some perfect gems of pictures by foreign artists, so all very proper and stiff below stairs. My friend evidently pleased considered this style befitting the emotional character of the lady of the house and expected to see her glide in with a green calcium light on her countenance. But a ringing voice cried out from the head of the stairs. "Come up; we've got winds and breezes and cool things up here." And so entering the suite of rooms on the second floor there was jolly, unaffected "Jack" Morris in dressing sack, a short skirt and her husband's slippers. The windows were full of birds—bullfinches, love birds and canaries—dogs were under the sofa, an invalid canine in a box, and a ball of a pup rolling about on the floor. We began talking of stage affairs and her trip to Europe, and the fashions. "Well," said Morris, "I'll be glad to be at sea, where I can lounge about anyway. I've been dressed up too much lately. I've spent too much time trying to tie my skirt back tight enough. I've had an awful struggle with clothes, and I'm to-day a happy woman. I've got a gown in two pieces, a skirt and jacket and no overdress, and no woman knows true peace and complete bliss with overskirt on. The loopings up and tyings back cast a gloom on the face of nature."

And here she showed her blessed dress, which was a grenadine flounced silk skirt and a basque.

"It's got one fault," said Morris; "there's strings to tie it back. I sit and dream of the days when my untrammelled nether limbs dwelt like free things, within the mighty enclosure of a big hoop. That was a Summer style. If my country wishes to receive my blessing, let it abolish these awful candle-mould skirts before I come back."

Clara sailed away in the party composed of Mr. and Mrs. Donn Piatt and Mrs. Worthington, Piatt's sister. On the same vessel went Kate Field, who has rushed over to Europe for a piece, as nothing in America is calculated to air her peculiar fitness for the stage. In the Fall, Morris will do "Rose Michel" at Daly's, and Rose Etynge will do the same at Union Square. The play was a failure in London, but the managers here are fighting over it.

Attempted Train Robbery.

On Tuesday night, a desperate attempt was made to rob an Adams Express car on the Vandalia, Ill., Railroad, at Long Point. The train stopped for water, the station being in the middle of a dense wood. Two men boarded the engine, one from each side, and ordered the engineer to start the train. After a moment's hesitation he did so, and one of the robbers said: "We will run the thing ourselves." The engineer was then shot by both and killed. The fireman, who had been standing on the tender, jumped off and ran to the rear and alarmed the train men. While this was going on another robber had detached the engine and express car from the train, which were driven on two miles. Then they called on express messenger Burke to open the door. He refused, telling them he was ready for them. They then commenced firing, the shots entering the car from all sides. He threatened to shoot them if they attempted to get in. The car was a close one with side doors and they were unable to get in. The conductor, train men and two soldiers, armed with two carbines and a revolver, followed on, and on coming up with the engine and express car found that the robbers had fled. Express Messenger Burke was exceedingly glad to see them and is warmly praised for his conduct. He thinks there were a dozen of the robbers. Had they detached the American Express car, which was immediately in the rear of the Adams Express car, they might have accomplished their purpose, as it is an open car with windows.

The dead body of the engineer was found on the floor of the cab. A freight train engineer happened to be on the train, and he and the fireman ran the engine back to the train and carried it in. There is intense excitement over the death of engineer Ames and the train men are anxious for a chance to lynch the assassins. The notorious James brothers are supposed to be the ring leaders.

News and Notes.

The Philadelphia Bulletin thinks the hanging of Pomeroy will be a "centennial shame." Not to hang him would be an eternal disgrace.

A fearful storm has visited the Swiss Canton of Geneva and the French frontier. It was accompanied with hail, and the stones were of enormous size. The glass in all the windows in the district where the storm raged was demolished, and many persons were killed and injured.

Mrs. William Granefield, of Chicopee, Mass., an old lady who attempted to commit suicide by cutting her throat, was getting along finely until Thursday morning, when she again attempted suicide with two rusty knives. She is not expected to live.

Since 1859 it has been a problem with every one of the shifting administrations at the Mexican capital how to rid the section of the notorious freebooter, Cortina, whose catalogue of crimes probably surpasses that of any living man. He is a murderer, an incendiary, and a thief. Sometimes he has called himself an American citizen; at other times he has worn the uniform of a Mexican general; but whatever has been his ostensible calling, the purpose of his existence has been plunder. To attain that he has never hesitated to slay and burn. Indictments for horse-stealing and murder, found in Texas, have hung over him for years, but these have not deterred him from visiting Brownsville at his pleasure. He has been the head and front of the cattle raids into Texas, and has been as much feared on the one side of the river as the other. He has kept up a bitter, unrelenting war upon the persons and property of American citizens, hundreds of whom he has caused to be shot or hung on a tree. Secure amid the ranches and small villages of Northern Tamaulipas, he has defied the power of both the National and State Governments. Nothing short of hanging will satisfy the requirements of his case.

The Concord Monitor and the Boston Herald are sparring on the financial question, the former having a decided advantage thus far. The Herald seems to think that inorder to be independent it must be alternately on each side of the political fence. There are times when its editorials have a manly tone, which is quite sure however to be succeeded the next day by qualifications that tend to make its best sayings ridiculous. The differences are as plain to a regular reader as the conduct of a man in and out of his "cups."

Henry M. Pratt, a child two years of age, died in Boston, Thursday, from the effects of swallowing an iron screw.

The wonderful mineral springs of this country are continually being added to by new discoveries, and while the public throng to the older and better known resorts of invalids, many of the newly discovered springs are neglected on account of a lack of knowledge concerning them. The Hathorn Spring was discovered in 1868, and its waters have steadily improved in popularity since that time and are now acknowledged as taking a leading place for their prompt and certain curative properties. In taste and general character the water resembles that of the celebrated Congress Spring. It is somewhat stronger, however, in a few of its constituents, more brompt and sure in its action, and contains, also, a bicarbonate of tithia which renders its diuretic properties of great value. When taken in the morning, it is agreeable to the taste, grateful to the stomach, and acts efficiently as an evacuant. The immediate effect upon the digestive organs, whether impaired by disease or exhausted from any cause, is to increase their powers of assimilation and nutrition, the appetite being increased at once. That oppression which is often felt, that sense of fulness, in which the liver, spleen, and mesentery are usually filled with blood, slowly moving, and when hæmorrhoids are troublesome, is quickly relieved by it. The abdominal circulation is increased and the engorgement of the blood vessels is diminished with a gratifying sease of relief. The waters are bottled at Saratoga Springs at the rate of $8 per case of four dozen pints, and $6 per case of two dozen quarts. The Hathorn Springs are controlled by H. H. Hathorn, proprietor of the famous Congress Hall Hotel at Saratoga, and the waters are recommended by many eminent medical practitioners.

Beecher and Britton hasten to convict the poor devil, Loeder, of perjury, in less than a month after he comes to the front, but do not care to press the indictment for libel against Frank D. Moulton, a responsible man of property, who for a year has been declaring Beecher a confessed adulterer. How eagerly they batter a man who has no friends!

Plymouth Church would have voted that $100,000 to Beecher if he had proved his innocence.

The two-headed child—or the one-bodied children—is—that is to say, are—dead. It lived in Boston, and at the time of their birth it created quite an excitement. But a child like those could not be expected successfully to buffet the storms of this tumultuous world.

William H. Davis, one of the Beecher jury says that Thyer voted in favor of Beecher, not because he thought Beecher innocent, but because he thought Tilton a scoundrel.

The recent capture in North Carolina of Geo. Applewhite, who has the reputation of being the last of the notorious Lowery gang, occasions general rejoicing throughout the district formerly infected by them.

George Alfred Townsend writes the New York Graphic that the greatest of all improvements this year at Saratoga is the extinction of Moon, the potato-shaving man. Conkling, the principal real estate agent, has built a new road around the rear of the old Moon, raised a nice new hotel at the water's edge, and across the lake has spent $50,000 in building the White Sulphur Springs and baths. Moon is Gibbons. He has had his flush and his full, and, it is to be hoped, his last quarter.

The count of moneys in the cash vault of the Treasury, which is completed, tallies exactly with the books of General Spinner and completely disposes of the rumor of a ten million deficit.

While workmen were engaged, lately, in cleaning the main sewer under the Dannamora Prison, Albany, N. Y., they came upon a skeleton of a man lying at the bottom of the sewer and submerged in the filth. An examination, after it had been removed, revealed the fact almost beyond doubt, that the remains were those of Filkins, the Albany express robber, who had died there after escaping from the corridors of the prison down through one of the water-closets in the vain hope of regaining his liberty by passing through the sewer and out at its mouth, which is strongly closed with bars of iron secured on either side in walls of heavy masonry.

The Nation thinks the disagreement of the Brooklyn jury is something very like a defeat for Mr. Beecher.

The defeat of Gov. Allen of Ohio means the nomination of Gov. Tilden as the democratic candidate for President. Tilden's nomination might help Ex-Gov. Morgan or Senator Conkling to the republican nomination. Allen's re-election would mean a republican victory in 1876.

There was a terrific thunder storm at Portland, Saturday morning, during which several churches were struck by lightning.

Beecherism.

[Saturday Review.]

It does not appear that anybody takes what he [Beecher] says very seriously, but his smartness is irresistible. Since the scandal arose the attendance at Plymouth Church on Sundays and on lecture nights has immensely increased, and the preacher is almost buried in gifts of flowers for his platform. Whenever there has been any particularly suggestive evidence in court there has been a rush to church to see how the pastor took it. After Mrs. Moulton's disclosures, for instance, Mr. Beecher preached on meekness, and the crowd not only filled the church, but blocked the surrounding streets. He read, we are told, the thirty-seventh Psalm, investing it with all the charms of studied elocution, and placing a significant inflection upon every sentence that seemed to relate to his own troubles, and then he went on to improve the occasion with greasy unction, arguing of course that chastening was a sign of Divine love. Among his illustrations of the advantages of meekness, he recommended the policy of a creditor who takes his debtor to Delmonico's and gives him the best dinner that money can buy, telling him he means to stand by him and see him through, though, of course, without meaning anything of the kind, and then persuades him to give him an advantage over other creditors; and this seems to have been much enjoyed, by the audience. All these lectures and sermons are now reported at full length in the papers, along with the proceedings of the trial; and, in fact, Mr. Beecher has never filled the stage to the same degree as during the last few months.

The general drift of Mr. Beecher's gospel seems to be that it does not much matter what a man does as long as he is full of spiritual fervor and love for his fellow creatures; and, in his own case, he certainly appears to have carried charity to its extreme limits in his intercourse with the persons whom he accuses of conspiring to ruin him. It was at the end of 1870 that Tilton wrote to him requiring, "for reasons of which he was explicity aware," to resign the pastorship of Plymouth Church; but down to just before the recent explosion he remained on not only friendly, but even affectionate terms with his accusers, Tilton and Moulton. He calls Moulton's conduct "god-like," and Tilton "one of the most delicate and generous of men," and there is not the slightest trace in his interviews with them of any indignation at the imputation of infamous conduct, or even any attempt to deny it. All he asks is that the story shall be kept secret; and it is only after he finds that Tilton and others have been tattling, and that there is no longer any chance of its being suppressed, that he assumes the high moral tone. No adequate explanation has been given of the tone of hopeless despair in which he pleaded for hushing up the scandal; but of still more significance is his fondling of his traducers. One day he embraced Tilton and kissed him on the mouth; another time they "fell into an easy and unbusiness-like chat," and Beecher says he sat down on Tilton's knees "to make the appeal closer," and, Mrs. Tilton coming in, they kissed all round. It is difficult to imagine anything more revolting to a healthy mind than such endearments between people in such peculiar relations to each other; but the same sickly and unnatural emotionalism characterizes their whole intercourse. Mr. and Mrs. Tilton, it should be remembered, were both pet pupils of Mr. Beecher, and appropriate fruits of his teaching and example.

A writer in the Times lately spoke with hopeful expectancy of "the strange upheaving of American thought," and of the advantage which our benighted country would be likely to gain from a system of "moral telegraphy" with the other side; but the disclosures of this case may, perhaps, suggest some doubts on the subject. The sort of sickly sentimentality and morbid excitement which has been manifested by the whole of the set under the influence of the Plymouth pulpit demonstrates clearly enough the baneful results of an artificial system of religion which has for its object rather the titillations of the emotions than the steady pursuit of sober piety. The freaks of erotic fervor under religious disguises are by no means novel, and require to be guarded against at the outset. "Do men," asked Wesley, in dealing with a similar epidemic in his own day, "gather from this amorous way of praying, or this luscious way of preaching righteousness, any real holiness?" Any one who studied the revelations of this trial can have no difficulty in answering the question.

She Wasn't A Candidate.

[N. Y. Weekly.]

Some of our worthy colored brethren of the Baptist persuasion had a baptism down at the creek last Sunday, and the ceremony attracted a very large crowd of persons. Mrs. Pitman's colored servant girl was very anxious to be present, and, as it was not her Sunday out, she slipped away from the house while the dinner was cooking, and went around in her working clothes. Her interest was so intense that she stood close to the minister, who was in the water, while the ceremony proceeded. After six or seven had been dipped, the clergyman, filled with enthusiasm, seized her and pulled her into the water. She resisted, but the minister imagined that she was merely afraid of the coldness of the water, so before she could explain the situation he soused her. She came up spluttering, and exclaimed:

"What you doin'? Lemme go, I tell you!"

But he exerted his strength, and sent her "ker-chuck" below the surface again. She emerged clawing the air wildly and shouting:

"G'way from here! Don't you chuck me under agin, you nigger!"

But the clergyman was inexorable, and he plunged her under a third time, and held her there for a minute, so as to let it soak in and do her good. Then she came up and struck for the shore, and standing there, looking like a draggled mermaid cut in ebony, she shook her fist at the astonished pastor, and shrieked:

"Oh, I'll fix you! I'll bust de head offen you, you or'nary trash! sousing me in dat dare creek and nearly drownded me, when you knowed well enough all de time dat I'se a Methodist, and bin christened by dem dat's yer betters, and knows more about religion dan all de Baptisses dat ever shouted, you mis'able black scum! and me got de rheumatiz enough to set me crazy! O, I'll see what de law kin do for you! I'll have you 'rested dis very day, or my name's not Johanna Johnson, you woolly-headed herrin'! You hear me?"

Then Johanna went home to re-dress, and the ceremony proceeded. Miss Johnson is now persuaded that the Baptists are not any better than Pagans.

The Brush-Fiend.

[Laertes in N. Y. Graphic.]

Will you oblige me by notifying the brush-fiend that he must disperse? He lays in wait for you at stair-elbows, in the lawn, on the front porch, at the cashier's office, down in the bootblack's room, and all out of doors. He switches you off, holds out his paw, and flies off for another victim. Meantime another darky, in form and gesture precisely like first, has seized you by the coat-collar. He brushes you off down in the muscles and small of your back, up the inside of the breeches' legs and under the lapels. He holds out his paw and vanishes. But there is a No. 3. He boldly swoops down upon your hat and wildly trounces that tightsome offender, looking inside the band for theatre tickets and affecting to shake clouds of dust from the interior. No. 4 sees that paw No. 3 has been tipped, and he rushes for your boots. You awaken in the morning and hear a gentle rap upon your door. You say to yourself, "'Tis she," or "'Tis he"—as the case may be—and lo! it is the brush-fiend. He has a way of putting out your eyes with the points of the wisp, unless you stand perfectly still and keep your eye on his paw—that sentimental paw, like the end of an elephant's trunk, every wrinkle of which has the multiple of but one meaning—"Ornament me." My friend, Judge Smythers, aged thirty-two—they make them young now, so that they can have good, long terms—knew no way to evade the brush-fiend but by becoming one. He bought a small wisp. As soon as he saw a nigger of any race, color, or previous condition of paw he took that small wisp out and shook it at him. The nigger recoiled as if he had beheld the judgment day. But there were so many occasions to produce that wisp that Smythers grew melancholy and absent-minded. He drew it on his wife. He saw the collection-box coming toward him in church, and thinking of nothing save the brushfiend he raised his wisp against the unoffending vestryman. He was introduced to strange and genteel people, and surprised them by gritting his teeth, producing a straw wisp, and saying, "No, you don't." So at last he yielded, and now they brush him all day up and down the piazzas, and keep him active as the dancing professor. It was quite otherwise with pert young Alkali, the Western soap manufacturer. He permitted everybody to brush him into the greatest cheerfulness, indicated invisible spots that might be improved, exhausted the incredulity of the brush-fiend, and went right off to the next darky to be brushed. They did their best to sweat him down and make him tractable, but next morning he sounded his bell and asked for a brush-fiend. Then they relinquished him and said he was fooling.

Moulton and Beecher.

[Brooklyn Review.]

A representative of the Review had an interview last night with Frank Moulton, as he was en route to Narragansett.

"What do you think about the result?" quoth the journalist.

"I think this," he said, "that there's a pretty square issue between Henry Ward Beecher and myself. One or the other of us is a perjurer, and ought to be in a perjurer's cell in State Prison."

"That's a question you think insufficiently decided by the late disagreement?" queried the interviewer.

"It is a question I intend to have decided before I die," replied Moulton, with a dark frown. "I have been to the District Attorney's office to challenge an indictment, and, I'm afraid, without any prospect of it. Last night Beecher stood in the only pulpit he can occupy in America. He will stand in it again to-morrow. But, if I live and he lives another year, one of us will be a convicted perjurer, and occupy a perjurer's cell. Tilton's struggle with Beecher was his own—not mine. He had to contend with great obstacles. He had condoned his wife's fault, and in this world such magnanimity is shameful. The consequence was that all his witnesses suffered. But this is now my battle, and I mean to fight it to the end. I say again that either Beecher or I will fill a perjurer's cell before this is finished."

Starving Herself to Death.

[Owen (Ky.) News.]

Mrs. Kemper, wife of Jasper Kemper, died Sunday morning, June 27, under peculiar circumstances, which are as follows: About three months since her babe was taken sick and lingered for some time. A few minutes before it died she gave it a dose of medicine by direction of the attending physician, and after it died she took up an idea that she had killed it. Her friends tried to persuade her that the idea was erroneous, but all to no avail. The idea worked upon her mind until she became frantic. The only desire was to die, and she tried on several occasions to destroy her life, but was prevented by her faithful husband, who kept strict watch over her. She refused to eat from the beginning, and had not taken a mouthful of food for forty-five days before she was relieved by death.

A Revengeful Organ.

The stomach is a revengeful organ. If we assign it indigestible food, it not only refuses to perform its office, but inflicts upon us unspeakable tortures, such as those of indigestion, colic, cholera morbus, &c. Not content with giving us pain, it frequently inaugurates an excessive and wasting diarrhœa, called dysentery, which carries us to our graves. With a view to prevent these consequences, as soon as the stomach gives notice by premonitory twinges that its cargo is not to its liking, a wineglassful or two of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters should be swallowed. This admirable digestive cordial will promptly reconcile the refractory organ to its contents, and prevent any of those annoying and possibly fatal results which the presence of indigestible food in the stomach is liable to produce. The Bitters are also a superb tonic, restorative and appetizer.

An oriental traveller describes this busy scene, witnessed on historic shores: "Our steamer landed on a beach which was the port of Antioch, where the disciples were first called Christians. There was no town at the water's edge, no people, no wharf. The passengers and the merchandise were put ashore in lighters, which ran up into the sand. A troop of camels, with their drivers, lay on the beach, ready to transport the goods into the interior. Among the articles landed were boxes marked 'DR. J. C. AYER & Co., LOWELL, MASS, U. S. A.,' showing that they contained medicines and whence they came. These with other goods were hoisted on the backs of camels, for transportation to Antioch. Thus the skill of the West sends back its remedies to heal the maladies of populations that inhabit those eastern shores, whence our spiritual manna came."—Windsor (Vt.) Chronicle.

The annual meeting of the Portsmouth, Great Falls & Conway railroad will be holden at North Conway next Wednesday

The exhibition by Mr. Samuel Lamprey's juvenile dancing class at Congress Hall, Saturday evening, was one of the most delightful of these annual festivals. The little misses in their fairy-like costumes never showed to greater advantage, and their proficiency in the more difficult changes and in the modern style of waltzes, etc., won the admiration of a large audience, limited in number only by the capacity of the gallery. The lads who gallantly led forth the little ladies were the very embodiment of politeness and gallantry, and the beautiful scene lingers in the mind's eye as one most enjoyable to pupils, teacher, parents and friends.

The second game of base ball between the Granite State and Atlantic clubs came off at the Plains on Saturday. Score, Granite State 31, Atlantics 20.

A "Sampler" of the Olden Time.

Among the effects of the late Miss Eliza beth Gooch was a "sampler" on which was worked the letters of the alphabet and the following inscription:

Miss Gooch was the daughter of Mary Whidden, the worker of the "sampler," whose father formerly "kept tavern" at the Assembly House, of which Raitt's Court is now the site, the houses there being made from it. The "sampler" may be seen in the window of Wm. B. Lowd's store, under the CHRONICLE office.

A Musician Succeeds Sometimes.

Some forty years since, there came to the city of Philadelphia, a young German musician. In company with his wife he had left his home to seek a fortune in free America. The story of their privations, their utter failure, is but a repetition of the experience of thousands. But the young couple were full of determination, and would accept no defeat as final, and each temporary defeat was followed by a renewed endeavor.

Learning one day of the opening of a new theatre, in the city of Salem, Mass., they abandoned Philadelphia, hoping that the new enterprise in the northern city might furnish employment for the young musician's violin. The journey was performed on foot, and disappointment awaited them at its completion.

Friendless, unknown! merit to succeed, must have its herald with blazoned escutcheon, its pompous forerunner and announcement.

They settled down, as became their modest fortunes, in an humble quarter of the city, their friends and neighbors consisting mainly of poor but industrious and respectable colored people, who were employed mostly as table attendants at the hotels, or upon festival occasions.

One evening their services being required at the mansion of one of the merchant princes of Salem, they obtained permission to bring with them the young immigrant in order that he might earn an honest penny in the capacity of doortender.

Matters went on swimmingly until the party had been some time seated at the the banquet when there came from the drawing-room, a flood of melody, such as could be drawn from the piano only by a master hand.

Surprised that a single guest should have been overlooked in the appointments for the table, the host hurried to the apartment from whence proceeded the music, intent upon the most ample apology. His surprise was turned to astonishment, upon finding a stranger, humbly clad, seated at the instrument, with bent figure, and flying hands, wrapt in the beauty of his own performance. Hastily summoning a few friends, he returned to the drawing-room door, and remained until the performer paused. A touch upon the shoulder restored the young musician to a sense of his position. Overwhelmed at his own boldness, and expecting to be ordered from the house, as a proper punishment for his temerity, he implored to be forgiven, saying it had been so long since he had seen a piano, he could not withstand the temptation. Of course, he was desired to play again and again. When remarking that he did not propose to be a pianist, but made a speciality of the violin, that instrument was procured. His performance held the company in rapt attention for the remainder of the evening.

The host being also a fine violinist, a second violin was brought, and solo and duett followed in quick succession to the great delight of all.

The young musician at last realized his ambition; patronage came in without stint; patrons became friends, and the little wife who had accompanied and solaced her husband through past privations, was rewarded for all her care and solicitude.

But for her, we might never have sung Keller's American Hymn. But for her, J. A. Keller might never have become famous. Who knows?

E. A. T.

—Mrs. Fawcett, in her new novel, tells of a precocious infant who developed a marvellous originality in extemporaneous prayer. When she said her prayers at her mother's knee, having been told that she was not to learn any form of prayer, but to ask from her heart for whatever she most desired, she prayed for "A red cloak wiv velvets buttons, 'cactly like Amy Grey's. Vere is anover at ve shop." Then, when instructed not to ask for material, but for spiritual blessings, her interpretation of a spiritual blessing was that there might always be short sermons in church. When she had scarletina, and her mother had begged her to pray for her recovery, she having been told that when she was beginning to get better her skin would peel off, and then when it was all off she would be quite well, she joined her little hands in bed and said in a soft voice, "O God peel me quick."

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH OF THE CITY OF PORTSMOUTH call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10 of the City Ordinances and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the city to aid them in the execution of their duty.

CHAPTER X.

Sec. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, &c. shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the health officers may direct.

Sec. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

Sec. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten days from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time above specified.

Sec. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

Sec. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisances shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

Sec. 12. When any householder shall know that any person within his family is taken sick of the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 13. When any physician shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for each refusal or neglect forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the health officers in the name of the city.

Sec. 16. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other thing deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier of the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may, by direction of the mayor or one of the aldermen of the city, cause to forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

Sec. 21. No person shall erect, keep or continue or permit to be erected, kept or continued, upon any land occupied by him, any pen for the keeping of swine, or privy, over either of the mill ponds in this city, or so placed that offensive substances therefrom shall be discharged or drained into either of said ponds, or into any creek, or cove or drain leading thereto. And no person shall construct, keep or continue any drain leading from any pen for the keeping of any swine, slaughter-house, privy vault, or other unwholesome or offensive place, into either of said ponds, or to any flat or marsh adjoining the same. And no person shall throw or suffer to be thrown from his land into either of said ponds, or upon any of said flats or marshes, any dead, decaying, unwholesome or offensive animal or vegetable substances.

An English Remedy

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS,

For Nervousness and General Debility,

PREMATURE decay, mental and physical prostration, fear, despondency, over indulgence in the use of opium or alcoholic drinks, tobacco, &c., &c. Medicines unrivalled for their wonderful properties and remarkable cures of all Nervous Complaints. Their efficacy is equally great in the treatment and cure of Cancers, Nodes, Ulcers, Pustules, Pimples, Tetter, Fever Sores, Ringworm, Erysipelas, Scald-Head, Barbers' Itch, Scurvy, Salt Rheum, Copper Colored Blotches, Glandular Swelling, Worms and Black Spots in the flesh, Discoloration, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth and Nose, Sore Legs, and sores of every character, because the medicines are the very best Blood Medicine ever placed before the people, and are warranted to be the most Powerful Alterative ever originated by man. They impart Strength to the Body and Vigor to the Mind, removing Morbid Sensibility, Depression of Spirits, Dementia and Melancholia.

NERVOUS DEBILITY.

However obscure the causes may be which contribute to render nervous debility a disease so prevalent, affecting as it does, nearly one-half of our adult population, it is a melancholy fact that day by day, and year by year, we witness a most frightful increase of nervous affections from the slightest neuralgia to the more grave and extreme forms of Nervous Prostration.

It is on the highest importance, then, that individuals should be able to judge for themselves, by their own feelings, if and to what extent they are attacked by this insidious enemy to all health, comfort, and even life itself if left to run its course unchecked by the early and prompt application of curative remedies.

DRUNKENNESS.

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS is the only remedy that has ever proved by practical experience a benefit to those who suffer from over-indulgence in alcoholic liquors; it completely destroys the taste for them, and restores the victim of intemperance to health and vigor. A single trial will prove it to be just what it is recommended to be.

Price $2.50. Large size, $5. Each package of the Cordial Balm contains one box of the Tonic Pills, which may also be had separately at 50 cents per box.

RECENT TESTIMONIALS.

FREWSBURGH, Nov. 12, 1874.

I have used the Cordial Balm and Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills as a preventive and cure for the use of ardent spirits and habitual intoxication, and find them actually specific in such cases. As regard them as most invaluable medicines, and nothing could induce me to be without them.

JACOB MESERVE.

TIPTON, Dec. 3, 1874.

We take great pleasure in informing you of the surprisingly beneficial results from the use of your English Remedy, The Cordial Balm of Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills, in a case of great Nervous Debility and Prostration of a member of our family who had been under treatment by different doctors for nearly three years past without any apparent benefit therefrom; but your medicines have produced a most wonderful change for the better and the patient now enjoys comparatively excellent health. MRS. HARRIET STURGISS.

P. S.—We tell all with whom we are acquainte who are similarly afflicted to try your medicines.

PULMOCINE

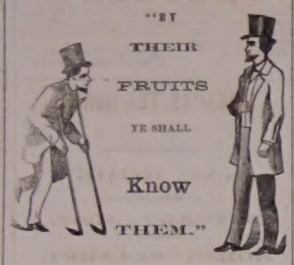
BY THE

TEST OF EXPERIENCE.

"BY THEIR FRUITS YE SHALL Know THEM."



THE CAUSE OF GOUT.

It proceeds from a deficiency of, or an alteration in the cutaneous, urinary or intestinal secretions. This definition leads us to the solution of a second and not less important question:

HOW TO CURE THE GOUT.

This can only be accomplished by a course of treatment capable of establishing the perspiration, if suppressed, of inducing a proper flow of urine, and of destroying the obstinate constipation when it exists. But it is not sufficient that these three functions act properly as respect quantity, but above all, and before all, their quality must have our attention. Indeed, we have mentioned not only a deficiency but also an alteration of secretion. For the perspiration, the urine, and the evacuations should be not only sufficiently abundant, but should carry off certain principles whose stay would produce the most serious disorders.

This is precisely what we see in the Gout. Does it not often happen that after an attack, the joints become deformed by chalky concretions? These gouty deposits have been analyzed by the Chemists Wallaston, Fourcroy, Vanquilin and Barruel.—Every first-class physician should know their composition, then there would remain to find a means to prevent these salts spreading, and, as it were, condensing of themselves throughout the system. The receipt from which is compounded the will produce this desirable result, because it gives to the products of the body the quantity and quality necessary.

CHRONIC GOUT having been engendered insensibly during the course of time, time is necessary for its removal. Its elimination must take place atom by atom. It is, therefore, not surprising that patience should be required for a complete cure. We must be careful not to confound the acute with the chronic condition; if the latter, it requires weeks to remove it; in the former, a few doses only are necessary to effect a complete cure.

By persevering a longer or a shorter time, according to the severity of the case, the joints will gradually recover their suppleness, and the nodes will be seen to soften and diminish insensibly. This last is an infallible test of the wonderful properties of the

DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

To this unerring proof we can, by the aid of Chemistry, add another, equally palpable and convincing:

The articular concretions are composed principally of uric acid, waters of ammonia, of soda, and of phosphate of lime. These are precisely the salts which we find in the various excreta, particularly in the urine; so that chemical reagents which showed scarcely a trace of these before taking the DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE, will demonstrate an enormous proportion after its use.

Thus the concretions, the principal components of which analysis has shown can be again reproduced, and will thus furnish the most convincing proof and incontestable evidence. This, then, is the most rational plan of proceeding, and which enabled us to answer the question of a certain English M. P., "WHAT HAS BECOME OF MY GOUT?" We told him that "it followed the course of the evacuations," since chemical analysis, as has been said, finds in them all the principles which produce it. Henceforth it is clear that this medicine is and ought to banish not only all ideas of retrocessions, but should inspire the most perfect confidence. It cannot too often repeated, those are no hypothesis, no theories, but positive facts, material, physical facts, confirmed over and over again by twenty-five years' practical experience in the leading hospitals of England and France, as well as by thousands of testimonials held by every one of our agents, freely offered by sufferers restored to sound health and continued use furnished through the means of the world-renowned DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

It is styled as above for the reason that its great efficacy in rheumatic complaints is just as apparent as in gout, and thousands of sufferers in Massachusetts to-day, cured of rheumatism by its use, mention the Proprietor's name with benedictions of praise.

This medicine is for sale at all Druggists throughout the United States and Canada. If it happens that your Druggist has not got it in stock, ask him to send for it to any of the Wholesale Druggists in Boston. Price $1 a bottle.

BOOK AGENTS wanted to sell "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser." It is the cheapest book ever published; 883 pages, over 350 illustrations, $1.50. Thousands buy it at sight, who could not be induced to purchase the high-priced books treating of Domestic Medicine. Unlike other books sold through agents this work is thoroughly advertised throughout North America. This fact, together with the large size, elegant appearance, and many new features of the book, causes it to sell more rapidly than any work ever published in this country. Those of my agents who have had experience in selling books, say that in all their previous canvassing they never met with such success or made so large wages, as since commencing the sale of my work. For terms and territory, address (inclosing two postage stamps and stating experience) R. V. Pierce, M. D., World's Dispensary, Buffalo, N. Y. Note.—Mark envelope "For Publishing Dep't."

PULMOCINE.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

—USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

Hard Up, Yet Rich in Eloquence.

[Detroit Free Press.]

He walked out of the depot with a sachel in his hand—a good-looking sachel, yet terribly gaunt and thin. If sachels had ribs, one could have seen that sachel's ribs and noted how thin in flesh it was. When a professor of hack driving asked the stranger if he would have a carriage, he smiled blandly and replied:

"Not this time, Colonel—not just now, although I warn thee that it is plebian-like for a duke to walk around with his baggage in his hand. I am in search of a hostelry—a caravansary where I can recuperate and refresh."

When he stood before the hotel clerk the clerk noted that the stranger's hat was full of dents and caves; that his shirt-front was badly soiled; that his garments were becoming threadbeare, and that there was need of thorough repair.

"I desire a seat at the banquet-board without delay," said the stranger. "I have traveled far and feel the need of refreshment."

The clerk smiled as the sachel was lifted over the counter. He "hefted" it and smiled again.

"I carry the ducats here in my wallet," said the stranger, "and after I have sipped the amber mocha and carved the Spring poultry I shall cheerfully requite thee."

He might have seventy-five cents about him—the clerk would chance it. Victory lurked in the stranger's eye as he turned to one of the bell boys and said:

"Youthful slave, conduct me to a place where I can lave my fevered brow."

He was conducted, and after he had laved he looked a little better. Even a boot-black is improved by a liberal application of soap and water. Still, there was that lank sachel behind the counter, those thread-bare garments and that hungry voice.

"Now, serf, proceed to the banquet hall and I will follow thee," said the stranger, as he ran a coarse comb over his head for the last time.

Seated at the table and approached by a waiter, he remarked:

"Thou canst bring me rare viands of any kind and I shall not quarrel with thee about the cookery."

"Beefsteak—fried ham—mutton chops or liver?" queried the girl.

"Fair lady, to thine own good judgment do I leave it," he replied; "only let wings be added to thy speed, for my castle is leagues away and I hunger."

She brought him a well-selected stock of groceries and provisions, and he got away with them as a steam ditcher goes down through sandy soil. He ate his fill and then he crammed another meal down on the top of that. He emptied his coffee cup again and again, and when he finally rose from the table he could hardly lift himself. Turning to the fatigued waiter, he gently said:

"Fair maiden of the valley, thou hast done thy culinary work in a manner which speaks volumes for thee. Permit me to offer thee my heartfelt thanks."

He strolled into the office, put some matches in one pocket and some toothpicks in the other, and then leaning his elbow on the counter said to the clerk:

"Thou knowest thy duties well, and when I am far away I will gladly sound thy praise."

"Come, no fooling now—out with that seventy-five cents."

"As soon as my retainers arrive I shall give thee a weighty purse, and thou can'st keep every ducat in it."

"Ducats be hanged! I want script—nickels—stamps! I want pay for your breakfast!"

"Gently, my friend with the Roman nose," continued the stranger; "thou can't not say I am not a lord or a duke in disguise."

"And I don't care a cent! Are you going to pay?"

"Am I going to turn these fragments of wood into gold?" queried the stranger, as he held up a number of pine toothpicks.

The clerk came out of the office, having the lean sachel in his hand, and he took the stranger to the door, kicked him with great good will and pointed up the street.

"I go," said the man in a solemn voice, "but when my retainers arrive I shall seek revenge—human gore shall be shed to satisfy me!"

He went. His face was clouded for a moment, but then a grand smile covered it, and he stopped a newsboy and asked:

"My faithful minion, canst thou direct me to an office over the door of which hangs the traditionary golden balls of the base money lender—a place where I may exchange a few precious heirlooms for some vile dross?"

And the boy did.

—The Taunton Gazette tells of a young man who recently conceived the brilliant idea of popping the question by postal card. Accordingly he dispatched one to the idol of his heart, bearing simply his name and his character: "?" His feelings can be imagined on receiving by return mail a card inscribed most energetically: "!" When last seen he had checked his collar box for Chicago, and was inquiring the price of through tickets to the West.

Daily Chronicle.

TUESDAY, JULY 13, 1875.

News and Notes.

Reviewing the situation in Ohio, the Brooklyn Eagle says that Governor Allen is better than the platform, and his victory would be a personal one. "He brings to oratory the volume of the fog horn, the humor of Tom Marshall and the indomitableness of Tom Benton. He has governed honestly, firmly and with originality. He has a gorgeous conceit which matches his facilities, his port and his lungs. Standing in Cincinnati, he can address a meeting in Cleveland. He is a good man to elect, and we think he will be elected."

The population of Minneapolis, Minn., has increased 80 per cent. in five years.

The hypocrite of the Prohibition Herald complains that "grain and fruit wasted in making malt liquors" costs the country $50,000,000, but neglects to say that it takes not a hundred thousandth part of that sum to buy body and soul such specimens of the genus homo as the Herald staggers under in its editorial department. This assassin in politics will denounce fiercely the business of brewing, and then act the lackey to the brewer, help elect him to Congress, if possible, and do any dirty work his owner requires.

The laying of the rails from the Fabyan House to the Crawford House, at the White Mountains, was completed Wednesday, and Thursday a passenger train passed over the road to the Crawford, carrying a large excursion party.

Lieutenant-Colonel James W. Carr, formerly of Manchester, died July 6, at Grand Rapids, Mich., suddenly, of the effects of a rupture. He raised a company which went in the Second regiment, and was commissioned its captain. He afterwards rose to be major and lieutenant-colonel, and a little after the close of the war went to Grand Rapids, where he has been a lumber-dealer and broker. He was about 50 years of age and leaves a widow, a son and daughter.

The Connecticut legislature has voted $25,000 in aid of the centennial.

A report just compiled by Third Assistant Postmaster-General Barber shows that 107,616,000 postal cards were sold during the fiscal year which ended June 30th last, against 91,079,000 issued for the year which ended June 30th, 1874. The increase, which is equival ent to about 18 1-6 per cent. seems to indicate that the postal cards are growing in popular favor. The value of the issue of ordinary postage stamps during the year was $18,271,479, an increase of $996,237 over the previous year. The issue of newspaper and periodical postage stamps amounted to $815,902-47; of ordinary stamped envelopes and wrappers to $4,124,477 34 an increase of $242,284 58; of postal cards, $1,076,160. The total issues for sale to the public was $24,288,018 81, an increase of $2,219,794 05 over the last fiscal year. The sale of official postage stamps for the fiscal year amounted to $334,970 25, a decrease of $580,874 95 since June 30, 1874; official envelopes, $354,522 18, an increase of $1,065 52 over the year 1874.

The Massachusetts democratic leaders are uneasy. They allow that if this business of prosecuting Boston liquor dealers continues, the Gaston party in Boston will be conveniently small before election day.

The Christian Union says it has absolute faith in Beecher; the Independent thinks the cloud has not been lifted from him by the trial; the Liberal Christian speaks of his departed usefulness; the Observer says clergymen are divided as to his guilt; the Evangelist observes that his eccentricities are his supports, and over those wonderful letters many discriminating minds halt; the Watchman cannot but affirm its profound sense and conviction that he is guiltless; and the Pilot deems it an absurdity to think a verdict could be reached,—and that twelve men and a dozen lawyers may work ten years, but they can't put a capstone on a pillar of soft-soap.

Mrs. Algernon Sartoris has a young son, born Sunday morning, weight ten and a half pounds, place Long Branch, New Jersey. What a pity he couldn't have been born in the United States, says Quiz!

The difficulties that remain as a legacy of the railroad war are not entirely settled. The three competing lines out of Chicago are selling tickets to New York for $15, while the Baltimore and Ohio is adhering to the $18 rate, fixed upon after the agreement of peace between Presidents Garrett and Scott. It is said that if the Pennsylvania Company does not advance the rate on the Fort Wayne route in accordance with the terms of the treaty, the Baltimore and Ohio will also commence cutting under again.

New York pays her Supreme Court judges $17,500 per year each. Massachusetts gives each of hers $6000 per year, while New Hampshire thinks $2200 per year is all hers can earn. But then it takes more of a judge to decide than to dodge a law question.—Mirror.

Aaron Shute of 470 Tompkins avenue, Brooklyn, who was thought to have been fatally shot by a burglar nearly a month ago, is recovering. One of the bullets entered three inches under the left ear, another on the right side of the neck, and a third close to the lobe of the left ear. Soon after the burglars escaped from the house Mr. Shute vomited large quantities of blood, and the physicians pronounced the case fatal, and refused to do anything. But through Mrs. Shute's entreaties one of them gave her husband a dose of ice water, and the bleeding was stopped. The wounds were not dressed until seven the next morning, the physicians declining to give useless pain to, as they thought a dying man. On Saturday Mr. Shute's right eye was taken out. Exactly in the centre of the eye-ball was a small bullet. The bullet that entered under the left ear broke off and carried before it a splinter from the spinal column about the size of a pea. This bone was afterward found by the side of the bed. The second bullet, that grazed the lobe of the left ear, went obliquely under the left eye, and lodged behind the pupil of the right eye. Since the removal of the right eye, Mr. Shute has almost recovered his health, and has been able to see much better with his left eye, which had long been near-sighted.

Legislatures are beginning to awaken to the character of the tramp nuisance. By a recent act of the Connecticut legislature, whenever any tramp shall apply for bounty the person to whom such application shall be made in return may require the applicant to perform a seasonable amount of labor, and on refusal may call on the authorities for assistance, who if necessary, shall commit the tramp to jail. The last legislature of Ohio also passed a law, under the terms of which any tramp refusing work when offered may be fined or committed to jail.

A correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette tried to "converse" with Gov. Hendricks about the democratic party in Ohio, and found to his amazement that the Governor did not know that a Convention had been held, and an inflation platform adopted. It takes a long time for news to mount the fence the Governor is sitting on.

The people of Nebraska are engaged in canvassing and criticising the draft of a new constitution, upon which they will be called to vote in the coming Fall. The instrument is based upon the constitution of Illinois, which has generally been taken as a guide in suggesting changes or amendments in the organic law of States, and resembles in many points the new constitution of Pennsylvania. Among other things, special laws of all kinds are prohibited, and citizens are referred to the local courts when extraordinary powers are deeded for special purposes, all State and county officers are to have fixed salaries, and are not to pocket any portion of the fees attached to their offices.

A correspondent of the Reading (Pa.) Eagle at Bernville mentions the following instance of the remarkable success in the life of two enterprising brothers: Samuel Long and brother may be noted as model farmers of this section. They own seven large farms, with magnificent Mansard buildings, with all the latest improvements. They are at present building a fine Mansard building, which is hardly excelled in the country. They have two large ice houses to preserve eggs. One was lately built along the Lebanon Valley Railroad; it has iron floors, and holds thousands of barrels of eggs, and cost over $1800. Those two brothers are commission agents speculating in eggs. They have a western trade. When eggs are dear they are sold on commissions, and when low they are stored in those houses until they fetch a good price. These two brothers were raised in the vicinity of Newmanstown, and were poor, but industrious, for twenty years ago they went to New York city with $80 cash in their possession, went in business, and were successful, and to-day they are conducting and ruling the New York egg market.

Over the Falls.

[Niagara Falls Register.]

The dog on Robinson's Island continues monarch of all (the land) he surveys, and the pedestrinal surveys were quite vigorously prosecuted yesterday. His only chance for life would seem to be to take to the water and go over the Falls. Holley's Niagara contains several interesting reminiscences of a similar nature. Mr. Holley says: Previous to the war of 1812, the Niagara abounded in swans, wild geese and ducks. Since that war none of the former have been here, except two pairs which came at different times. One of each pair went over the Falls and was taken out alive but stunned. The other two, faithful until death, were shot watching and waiting for the return of their mates. In two instances dogs have been sent over the Falls and survived the plunge. In November, 1836, a troublesome female bull terrier was put in a coffee sack, by a couple of men who had determined to get rid of her, and thrown from the middle of Goat Island bridge. In the following Spring she was found alive and well about sixty rods below the ferry, having lived through the Winter on a deceased cow that was thrown over the bank the previous Fall. In 1858 another dog, a male of the same breed, was thrown into the rapids, also near the middle of the bridge. In less than an hour he came up the ferry stairs very wet and not at all easy. He was ever after a sadder if not a better dog. The reason why the animals are not killed is that the water pours down so rapidly and in such quantities that the water below, so to speak, cannot run off fast enough, and it piles up in large water cones which are constantly forming and breaking. If any strong animal should fall on to one of these cones as on to a soft cushion, it might slide softly into the current below. The dogs were doubtless fortunate enough to fall in this way, aided also by the repulsion of the water from the rocks in the swift channel through which they passed. It is not impossible that some strong man in a light, strong boat may thus, at some future time, go over the Horse-Shoe fall and not be killed.

Florida Birds.

[Cor. Lebanon Free Press.]

In a previous letter I promised to give some account of the birds, insects, snakes and alligators, found here in the Summer time. I would if I could, give your readers an adequate idea of the animated nature here as seen and heard of a Summer just as the sun begins to show his smiling visage through the tops of the pines—the crickets, tree toads, black birds, jackdaws and above all, the mocking birds, seem to be in most tremendous state of agitation, and all striving to see who can make the most noise, until the air is completely filled with the bird and insect music to an extent almost deafening. Here I must give his majesty, the alligator, his due, for, instead of being voiceless, as some naturalists would make you believe, he adds his voice to the general din, by giving vent to long drawn, deep guttural roars that can be heard for miles. The poor snakes and lizards seem to be the only truly voiceless things, and even they are not wholly so, as there is one variety of snake that is capable of giving a disagreeable hiss, and the rattlesnake gives warning, by the agitation of his rattles, of his deadly intent. The mocking bird is our principal songster for the Summer, and well he attends to his duty. They seem to prefer the vicinity of human habitations, to more solitary locations, as they build their nests and rear their young on the small trees about our places—their voices are almost ceaseless day or night during the breeding time, which extends through the Summer, and as their song consists of all the voices they ever heard, affords an endless diversion. The jackdaw is a smaller variety of crow with all his mischievous habits—differing from him only in size and voice, his voice being like what a crow's might be had he weak lungs and a bad cold. The mourning dove is of the size and appearance of a common pigeon and is named for his peculiar plaintive and mournful note. The quail—resembling the partridge but does not attain but about half its size—are very numerous. They are found in flocks during the fall and winter but separate into pairs in the Spring or during the breeding time. And it is then that the snail emits a peculiar sharp energetic cry of jack white—the female goes through all the cackling and clucking as though she was a good deal larger than an ordinary fist. The fish hawk or fish eagle will assuredly attract your attention—balancing himself in the air one hundred feet above the water, his claws dropped down from his body, his head thrust forward, till of a sudden he dives straight down like a bullet into the water and for an instant is lost to view, then he comes to the surface, steadies himself for a moment and then rises out of the water with his prey—sometimes an old bald eagle has been a silent witness of this, and when the hawk rises from the water gives swift and furious chase; the hawk tries to avoid him by a circular and upward flight, but soon the eagle attains the greater height, when the hawk drops his fish and in the twinkling of an eye the eagle has swooped down and caught the poor fish before he has fallen ten feet. The fish hawk is quite large, measuring from five to six feet from tip to tip of wing—lives entirely upon fish caught in the manner I have described. The bald eagle is quite common—is a general depredator upon flesh and fish, and even goes a fishing for himself, when he fails to rob the hawk. I saw one dive into the water for a fish and I concluded he caught one. He came to the surface of the water and attempted to rise out of it but failed and went under; came up the second time with no better success, but disappeared forever. I suppose he had been too avaricious and had hooked a fish large enough to drown him. They seem to be attached to localities and will occupy one nest for years, building to it every year until the nest attains truly marvelous proportions. I have seem them fully ten feet high, built up in a tree top. The red winged black bird and a few other small birds so nearly resemble what you see in New Hampshire that any description would not be interesting.

There are many varieties of herons, white, blue, large and small, all of the same characteristics—solitary and sedately standing about in shallow water, picking up any small fish or frog that may choose to pass that way. The ibis, or as it is called here, the water turkey, is quite numerous and peculiar in its habits; his food is entirely of fish, but unlike the fish hawk or crane, he makes common cause with his prey and seeks him in his native haunts. He seems to be able to remain under water a long time and when he comes to the surface for a breathing spell, nothing but his head and neck appear, presenting the appearance of an old black stick floating on end and swaying about in the current. After his wants are supplied he comes out of the water on to a stake or limb of a tree and spreading his wings to their full extent waits till the action of sun and air have dried him up to his satisfaction, when he utters a coarse, shakey cry and seeks his nest in some swamp tree. He is about the size of an ordinary wild duck, but longer bodied with a long neck and long sharp beak. The turkey buzzard is one of our peculiar friends, acting as a universal scavenger, his food consisting of carrion entirely. In size and color he resembles the ordinary brown turkey, only he has the peculiar hooked bill and immense talons peculiar to birds of prey. His instinct in detecting the whereabouts of his food is truly wonderful; many is the time that I have killed a squirrel or other small game, and taking particular notice that not a buzzard was in sight, have covered up my game and waited events, when directly I see a buzzard coming, perhaps a mere speck in the distance; but surely approaching my game, he comes as straight for it as an arrow. They are of peculiarly graceful flight, being able to rise in their flight without any perceptible motion of the wings. Another bird of prey called by us the snake hawk, is brown and white in color and about the size of an ordinary chicken hawk, has a long swallow tail and is very active and graceful in its motions. He preys upon snakes, though I have seen them eating frogs held in their talons while on the wing.

While returning from a day's hunt and becoming separated from my companions, I found the shades of night fast deepening around me, and I, there in the forest, fully three miles from any habitation; but being familiar with the tortuous trail I was following, I gave myself up to the meditations induced by the cool breeze and the monotonous hum of many insects, and the faint "thum tum" of the distant frogs. My mind had wandered back to New Hampshire and boyhood days, and the scenes of boyish indiscretions and diabolical pranks had just illumed my sun burned visage with a smile, when within five feet from the top of my head came forth the most awful screech and scream! I instantly found myself twenty feet hence, faced about with hunting knife drawn and every hair on my head squirming to get a look out of the top of my hat. There I stood squared for action—scared! did you say? No sir, it was not the voice of a friend, but an owl, who had swooped down on noiseless wings to look me over, and not fancying my intrusion upon his domains had given due warning of his displeasure. I am not scared by owls.

A Revengeful Organ.

The stomach is a revengeful organ. If we assign it indigestible food, it not only refuses to perform its office, but inflicts upon us unspeakable tortures, such as those of indigestion, colic, cholera morbus, &c. Not content with giving us pain, it frequently inaugurates an excessive and wasting diarrhœa, called dysentery, which carries us to our graves. With a view to prevent these consequences, as soon as the stomach gives notice by premonitory twinges that its cargo is not to its liking, a wineglassful or two of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters should be swallowed. This admirable digestive cordial will promptly reconcile the refractory organ to its contents, and prevent any of those annoying and possibly fatal results which the presence of indigestible food in the stomach is liable to produce. The Bitters are also a superb tonic, restorative and appetizer.

Local Matters.

Jottings.

The S. P. C. A. excursion to the Shoals comes off to-day. Tickets for the round trip seventy-five cents each—dinner ticket one dollar. The Appledore leaves her wharf at eleven o'clock and six.

They say the new keeper of White island light has his lamp wick so well trimmed and the reflectors so brilliantly polished that steamer Faraday's crew were enabled to see the bottom of the ocean, five hundred miles away, on dark nights, and hear the bubbling of the water where there was a break in the cable and the electric fluid escaped into the sea. Fishermen off the banks are obliged to wear green glasses when they look toward White island,—and passengers from Europe report that they have seen the light from mid ocean by the help of an opera glass.

There were 275 guests at the Appledore on Sunday.

The annual meeting of the Portsmouth, Great Falls & Conway Railroad will be held in this city at the Elm Street ward room this forenoon at half-past ten o'clock.

Rev. Joshua R. Pierce will officiate on Sunday next at St. John's church.

The Appledore House possesses a new sensation, in the person of Herr Julius Jordan, now playing first violin in the new string band attached to the house. Herr Jordan is a graduate of the finest schools in Vienna, and exhibits remarkable skill in the use of his favorite instrument. At the beginning of the Fall term, he takes a prominent position as teacher of the violin at the New England Conservatory in Boston.

U. S. Steamer Lancaster arrived at quarantine on Monday. There are no cases of yellow fever on board.

The U. S. Steamer Dispatch, which arrived here on Monday, is a fine craft and has been put in thorough repair since her purchase by the government at the time of the Cuban troubles. Uncle Sam paid $200,000 for her and intended using her for a dispatch boat—but the Spaniards paid the indemnity, apologised, and promised not to assassinate any more American citizens until a fair opportunity may offer,—and so the Dispatch is cruising about waiting for hostilities to commence somewhere. She is a $200,000 waiter. Her officers are: Commander, Frederick Rodgers; Master, E. D. Hughes; Master, M. Fisher Wright; Ensign, Ed. F. Omaltrough; P. A. Surgeon, John C. Wise; P. A. Engineer, Wm. H. Harris; P. A. Paymaster, L. G. Boggs; Captain's Clerk, Virginius Harleston.

Strawberries are sweeter, but smaller, and have been plenty of late at fifteen cents per box.

The Newington town debt is $3850; valuation $181,000; polls 107. There are said to be eleven voters named Hoyt and twenty-one named Pickering.

The pay of navy yard watchmen has been raised from $2 to $2.26 per diem.

The much needed improvements of Richards Avenue have been commenced under the supervision of Mr. William A. Hoyt.

The Maine editors are reuning at the Marshall House, York, this week.

Messrs Editors: Is it anybody's business or can anything be done to protect the residents of Pleasant, (a sad misnomer at present) Court and Middle streets from the intolerable effluvia arising day and night from that cesspool called the South Mill Pond? Cannot the city protect us from pestilence which threatens it, by keeping the water shut in during this hot weather? Neither windows or doors can be kept open because of it, unless we are blessed with some other than a southerly wind. This evil has been brought upon us by the numerous drains and privies which empty into it, and have accumulated such a quantity of filth that the water cannot cover it, except at full tides, which we rarely have at this season. This evil has been felt for years, is rapidly increasing, and demands attention at once. If nothing can be done, those of us who can, will have to seek elsewhere for pure air, comfort and HEALTH.

Hatch as a Purifier.

The Exeter News-Letter administers a caustic lesson to Ex-Speaker Hatch for bringing forward three successive years, a bill ostensibly for the purpose of purifying elections, with the intention of stifling action of that kind on the part of honest men who would like to see elections fairly conducted. It charges him with loading it with so much trash as to make it impossible to become a law. As usual, this year, he pretended that he wanted a law enacted providing that all ballots be printed on white paper. The News-Letter pertinently asks which of the many shades of white paper he desired. "One white paper is only white by comparison, and may become anything from pink to chocolate when compared with one whiter. There are yellow whites and blue whites. He certainly would not compel all his democratic supporters to wash their hands election day, lest they stain their ballots." His pathetic "mooning" over the woes of navy yard influence seem ridiculous when compared with Eastern Railroad ostracism. He was grieved at the gross outrage that Exeter people displayed in keeping open the polls until eight o'clock, while his own ward kept the polls open three hours longer. The News-Letter says his cant about the honest and intimidated navy yard gentlemen was hypocritical drivel, and that about the frauds in Exeter arrant nonsense, and he was perfectly aware of both facts. His observations in the repeating line might have been profitably confined to his own ward, the returns from Exeter having been kept from democratic sight so that the requisite amount of repeating by his frauds to secure a democratic Senator in this district, might not be accomplished. The News-Letter suggests that he drop a tear over the fact that his ward cast 150 more votes than there were legal voters; or over the two hundred names on the Portsmouth check list of persons utterly unknown, and of more than doubtful existence; or over the names of fishermen and transient persons who had no more right to vote in Portsmouth than the Khan of Tartary had? It also suggests that, if he does not wish to make himself utterly ridiculous he will do well to wait before charging fraud on the republicans of Exeter, at least until there is a prospect of some of his democratic friends there believing him in it.

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH OF THE CITY OF PORTSMOUTH call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10 of the City Ordinances and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the city to aid them in the execution of their duty.

CHAPTER X.

Sec. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, &c. shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the health officers may direct.

Sec. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

Sec. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten days from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time above specified.

Sec. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offals or fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

Sec. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisances shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

Sec. 12. When any householder shall know that any person within his family is taken sick of the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 13. When any physician shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for each refusal or neglect forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the health officers in the name of the city.

Sec. 16. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other thing deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier—the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may, by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

Sec. 21. No person shall erect, keep or continue or permit to be erected, kept or continued, upon any land occupied or by him, any pen for the keeping of swine, or privy, over either of the mill ponds in this city, or so placed that offensive substances therefrom shall be discharged or drained into either of said ponds, or into any creek, or cove or drain leading thereto. And no person shall construct, keep or continue any drain leading from any pen for the keeping of any swine, slaughter-house, privy vault, or other unwholesome or offensive place, into either of said ponds, or to any flat or marsh adjoining the same. And no person shall throw or suffer to be thrown from his land into either of said ponds, or upon any of said flats or marshes, any dead, decaying, unwholesome or offensive animal or vegetable substances.

Daily Chronicle.

—A young couple were occupying a rustic seat in Union Park one evening last week, and from the expression of the masculine representative's face it was evident that he was a "goner"—drifted, as it were, over the great psychological Niagara of affection, and was even being dizzily whirled about in the frothy whirlpool of sentiment. The swimming swans had no charms for him; the eagles were as nothing, and he did not even notice the big white bear. "Oh, do be mine," he said, attempting to draw her a little nearer his end of the seat. She made herself rigid and heaved a sigh. "I'll be a good man and give up all my bad habits," he urged. No reply. "I'll never drink another drop," he continued. Still unrelenting sat the object of his adoration. "And give up chewing—" No response. "And smoking—" Cold as ever. "And join the church—" She only shook her head. "And—and give you a diamond engagement ring," he added in desperation. Then the maiden lifted her drooping eyes to his, and, leaning her frizzles on his shoulder, tremblingly murmured into his ravished ear: "Oh, Edward, you—you are so good!" And there they sat and sat until the soft arms of Night—that dusky nurse of the world—had folded them from sight, pondering, planning, thinking—she of the diamond ring, and he of how on earth he was to get it.—Chicago Journal.

—A man was hanged at Atlanta, Ga., last month. A few days before his execution, a Catholic priest, two Baptist ministers, and a Methodist called on him at the same time. They commenced discussing religion, and who had the surest means of saving him, and they became so noisy and violent toward each other that the jailer had to interfere and order them all out of jail, and the wretch had to get along without any preacher.

An English Remedy

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS.

For Nervousness and General Debility,

PREMATURE decay, mental and physical prostration, fear, despondency, over indulgence in the use of opium or alcoholic drinks, tobacco, &c., &c. Medicines unrivalled for their wonderful properties and remarkable cures of all Nervous Complaints. Their efficacy is equally great in the treatment and cure of Cancers, Nodes, Ulcers, Pustules, Pimples, Tetter, Fever Sores, Ringworm, Erysipelas, Scald-Head, Barbers' Itch, Scurvy, Salt Rheum, Copper Colored Blotches, Glandular Swelling, Worms and Black Spots in the Head, Discoloration, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth and Nose, Sore Legs, and sores of every character, because the medicines are the very best Blood Medicine ever placed before the people, and are warranted to be the most Powerful Alterative ever originated by man. They impart Strength to the Body and Vigor to the Mind, removing Morbid Sensibility, Depression of Spirits, Dementia and Melancholia.

NERVOUS DEBILITY.

However obscure the causes may be which contribute to render nervous debility a disease so prevalent, affecting as it does, nearly one-half of our adult population, it is a melancholy fact that day by day, and year by year, we witness a most fearful increase of nervous affections from the slightest neuralgia to the more grave and extreme forms of Nervous Prostration.

It is of the highest importance, then, that individuals should be able to judge for themselves, by their own feelings, if and to what extent they are attacked by this insidious enemy to ill health, comfort, and even life itself if left to run its course unchecked by the early and prompt application of curative remedies.

DRUNKENNESS.

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS is the only remedy that has ever proved by practical experience a benefit to those who suffer from over-indulgence in alcoholic liquors; it completely destroys the taste for them, and restores the victim of intemperance to health and vigor. A single trial will prove it to be just what it is recommended to be.

Price $2.50. Large size, $5. Each package of the Cordial Balm contains one box of the Tonic Pills, which may also be had separately at 50 cents per box.

RECENT TESTIMONIALS.

FREWSBURGH, Nov. 12, 1874.

I have used the Cordial Balm and Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills as a preventive and cure for the use of ardent spirits and habitual intoxication, and find them actually specific in such cases. I regard them as most invaluable medicines, and nothing could induce me to be without them.

JACOB MESERVE.

TIPTON, Dec. 3, 1874.

We take great pleasure in informing you of the surprisingly beneficial results from the use of your English Remedy, The Cordial Balm of Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills, in a case of great Nervous Debility and Prostration, by a member of our family who had been under treatment by different doctors for nearly three years past without any apparent benefit therefrom; but your medicines have produced a most wonderful change for the better and the patient now enjoys comparatively excellent health.

MRS. HARRIET STURGESS.

P. S.—We tell all with whom we are acquainted who are similarly afflicted to try your medicines.

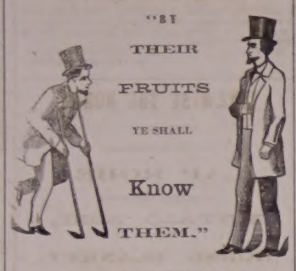
FACTS PROVEN

BY THE

TEST OF EXPERIENCE.



THE CAUSE OF GOUT.

It proceeds from a deficiency of, or an alteration in the cutaneous, urinary or intestinal secretions. This definition leads us to the solution of a second and not less important question:

HOW TO CURE THE GOUT.

This can only be accomplished by a course of treatment capable of establishing the perspiration, if suppressed, of inducing a proper flow of urine, and of destroying the obstinate constipation when it exists. But it is not sufficient that these three functions act properly as respect quantity, but above all, and before all, their quality must have our attention. Indeed, we have mentioned not only a deficiency but also an alteration of secretion. For the perspiration, the urine, and the evacuations should be not only sufficiently abundant, but should carry off certain principles whose stay would produce the most serious disorders.

This is precisely what we see in the Gout. Does it not often happen that after an attack, the joints become deformed by chalky concretions? These gouty deposits have been analyzed by the Chemists Wallaston, Fourcroy, Vanquilin and Barruel.—Even the first class physician should know their composition, then there would remain to find a means to prevent these salts spreading, and, as it were, condensing of themselves throughout the system. The receipt from which is compounded the will produce this desirable result, because it gives to the products of the body the quantity and quality necessary.

CHRONIC GOUT having been engendered insensibly during a certain lapse of time, time is necessary for its removal. Its elimination must take place atom by atom. It is, therefore, not surprising that patience should be required for a complete cure. We must be careful not to confound the acute with the chronic condition; if the latter, it requires weeks to remove it; in the former, a few doses only are necessary to effect a complete cure.

By persevering a longer or a shorter time, according to the severity of the case, the joints will gradually recover their suppleness, and the nodes will be seen to soften and diminish insensibly. This last is an infallible test of the wonderful properties of the

DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

To this unerring proof we can, by the aid of Chemistry, add another, equally palpable and convincing.

The articular concretions are composed principally of uric acid, waters of ammonia, of soda, and of phosphate of lime. These are precisely the salts which we find in the various excreta, particularly in the urine; so that chemical reagents which show scarcely a trace of these before taking the DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE, will demonstrate an enormous proportion after its use.

Thus the concretions, the principal components of which analysis has shown can be again reproduced, and will thus furnish the most convincing proof any medicine can offer. This, then, is the most rational plan of proceeding, and which enabled us to answer the question of a certain English M. P., "WHAT HAS BECOME OF MY GOUT?" We told him that "it followed the course of the evacuations," since chemical analysis, as has been said, finds in them all the principles which produce it. Henceforth it is clear that this medicine is and ought to banish not only all ideas of retrogressions, but should inspire the most perfect confidence. It cannot be too often repeated, these are no hypotheses, no vain theories, but palpable truths, material, physical facts, confirmed over and over again by twenty-five years' practical experience in the leading hospitals of England and France, as well as by thousands of testimonials held by every one of our agents, freely offered by sufferers restored to sound health and continued use furnished through the means of the world-renowned DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

It is styled as above for the reason that its great efficacy in rheumatic complaints is just as apparent as in gout, and thousands of sufferers in Massachusetts to-day, cured of rheumatism by its use, mention the Proprietor's name with benedictions of praise.

This medicine is for sale at all Druggists throughout the United States and Canada. If it happens that your Druggist has not got it in stock, ask him to send for it to any of the Wholesale Druggists in Boston. Price $1 a bottle.

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

"SCULPED."

"Injuns, stranger—Injuns? Yes, I know the hull gang of 'em from Red Cloud and Spotted Tail down to the toddling pappoose. I ought to know 'em for nigh onto thirty years!"

He was a grim-looking old man, with grizzly locks in view under his coon-skin cap. He had on a bear skin coat, Indian moccasins, buckskin shirt and leggings, and he held a long rifle between his knees as we talked.

"These Western railroads are rapidly civilizing the country—fast killing off Indians, wolves, and buffaloes?"

He looked around the car, which was handsomely furnished and finished, and sighed as he replied:

"Yes, times are gittin' wuss an wuss down this way. I've been thinkin of goin' up to the Yellowstone, whar a man can go out any time o' day and git up a squar fight with a grizzly, or raise a rumpus with the reds."

"You must be quite an old man?"

"Only 'bout sixty. I aint quite so limber on a long run, an' can't sleep quite so well with the rain pouring down into my face, but it I thought I wasn't good for any three Injuns on the plains, or any grizzly that ever stood on legs, I'd ax ye to shoot me!"

"You must have seen wild times out here?"

"Purty wild—purty wild," mused the old man; "there used to be heaps o' reds out here, to say nothing of the wolves, b'ars and rattlesnakes, an' thar was times when death rose up to shake hands with me."

"Ever taken prisoner?"

"I mought hev been—I guess I was!" he said, as he uncovered his head.

"Why, you've been scalped!"

"They called it sculping, stranger!"

"And who did that?"

"This same blasted Red Cloud. He didn't use the knife, but he stood by and hollered and encouraged the chap who did do it."

"Your sensations must have been terrible."

"There wasn't time to feel any sensations, stranger. They sneaked in on me an' Tom as we dozed, an' when I woke up Tom was riddled an' my sculp was hanging to an Injuns belt!"

"And what then?"

"Nothing much. I got up and killed two, wounded another, and legged it up a canon and got away. If it was to do over again I'd git my topknot back or fight the whole Sioux nation till sumbody went under!"

He seemed lost in reflection for a moment, and then continued:

"I don't know what sculps are wuth in the market, but I guess I've got the full value o' mine. I've knocked over risin' of thirty Sioux since that night, an' I guess I'd be willin' to pass receipts!"

"I suppose you've had a turn at half a dozen different tribes?"

"Less see?" he mused. "Thar's the Sioux, Blackfeet, Pawnees, Arrapahoes, Shoshones, Cheyennes, an' three or four other tribes. They've all hunted me, and I've hunted them, and I can't say as they owe me anything."

"I notice a bad scar on your face."

"Purty good scar for a common man, but I kin show ye the sculp-lock of the Pawnee who made it. He jumped on to me jist after I had swum a river, an' he thought he'd got hold of a jack-rabbit. 'Twas a bad cut, and it kind a 'mazed me at fust, but when I did cum to, he was gone afore he could yell twice! I said it was a purty good scar, but it isn't quite ekal to this."

And he pushed up the legging on his right leg and exhibited a scar which made me draw back. The foot, ankle, and the leg as high as I could see had been burned by fire.

"The Blackfeet had me fast to a stake once, ye observe," he explained. "That was the time when they poked each other in the ribs an' said they had a dead-sure thing on old Carter, but they wuz mistaken. They had me three days, and I'd bin kicked an' cuffed around until there wasn't any more fun in it, an' then they tied me to a stake an' lighted a fire around me. 'Twas pretty clus, stranger—pretty clus!"

"And how did you escape?"

"Half a dozen of my old pards came along jist in time to knock over half the band, and save me."

There was silence again while he unbuttoned his shirt and showed me a bosom literally grid-ironed with scars.

"Well, thar may be two or three knife cuts thar," he explained, "but the heft o' them scars wuz made by a grizzly. He wasn't one o' these bar calves that sum folks knock over an' then blow about, but a reg'lar three-story, old-fashioned grizzly, such as ye don't find outside o' the darkest canons in the Rockies. I wuz bending over the dire when the varmint slid down a canon an' wuz right on hand afore I had any warnin'."

"And was it a hard fight?"

"It wuz a purty fight, stranger, because it wuz a fa'r fight. I had a big knife, an' he had teeth and claws, an' we went in ter kill. He wuz good grit, but a leetle slow. Thar wuz about thirty days after that little epysode that my pard had to nuss me like a child."

"And you mean to die out here?"

"That's for the Lord to say, but I spects yer more'n right. The Injuns is purty quiet down here, an' these keers ar' bringin' heap o' people West, but I'm goin' up whar a white man won't disturb the Lord's work for a hundred years to cum! I feel kinder mean an' small down here—as if I wuz huntin' rabbits, but up the Yellowstone a feller kin brace up after he's knocked over a red or two an' feel as if he wasn't foolin' away his young days!"

And that was old Carter.

The Orange and Green in Collision.

A riot occurred in Lawrence, Mass., resulting from an attack made by a mob upon the members of Lodge No. 106, Loyal Orangemen, who were returning from celebrating the anniversary of the battle of the Boyne by a picnic at Laurel Grove, five miles up the Merrimac. The picnic was quietly and respectably conducted, and there were no indications of a trouble until the party had broken up and a few Orangemen from Lawrence, with their wives and children, were disembarking, Monday evening, at the steamer landing, on Water street. Four of the men wore regalia—Cassidy, the Grand Master; J. H. Spinlow Worshipful Master of Lawrence Lodge; and Edward and John DeRinsey. There was a crowd, numbering several hundreds, about the landing, and as the Orangemen walked toward the city, they were hooting and yelling.

After crossing Broadway the party hurried by. The crowd came down Canal street in front of the Pacific Mills, and then began the throwing of stones and bricks, which continued till they reached the Police Station. DeRinsey wore a sash and had the stars and stripes over his shoulders. He became separated from the others on Essex street, near the Essex House; he was struck upon the jaw, and his sash and the flag were taken from him but he regained them, and drawing his revolver made his way to the station-house. The Police Station at this time was surrounded by a mob of men and boys, and it was proposed to make a way through them and send the Orangemen and their women in hacks. The Mayor refused to allow hacks to be ordered, and, going to the front of the station, endeavored to speak to the crowd. The cries and jeers of the mob drowned out most of what he said.

The Mayor ordered the crowd repeatedly to disperse, without effect, and then taking Officers Gemmell, Dyson, Floyd and Corliss the Mayor led the way out of the station and down Essex street, which was filled with the mob for half a mile. Stones and bricks were thrown all along the route, and with the exception of the Mayor every member of the party was hit. The roughest work which was encountered was after turning from Essex into Union street. The mob about the party had grown more and more, and there was now a storm of missiles. At the corner of Union and Spring streets, nearly every man of the Orangemen and the police was knocked over, and in self-defence the Orangemen drew their revolvers and began firing; no shots were fired by the police. In all, the Mayor estimates twenty shots were fired. It is impossible to ascertain the effect of the shooting.

A Romance of the Sea.

[New Orleans Picayune.]

About a month ago a friend of Mrs. Harmon Jones read in an English paper the account of some British vessel having been driven out of her course in a storm and sighting an unknown island. Much to the surprise to the crew, the island turned out to be inhabited, and, still more astonishing, by men who spoke the English language. The rest of the story as given in the paper referred to, is that the castaway told the ship's company that they were the Florida party, who had sailed from New Orleans in 1849, bound for California, that they had been wrecked on the island and had dwelt there ever since, it being then more than twenty-five years since they had seen a human face or sign of the world from which they were so utterly eliminated. The paper gave the names of several, all of whom are known to have been of the Florida's crew, and in many other ways, according to the version of Mrs. Jones' friends, the identity of the party was established, as none but themselves could establish it. It was further stated that the British vessel offered to take the men on board, but they declined, saying that they had been lost for a quarter of a century; that they knew not in what situation they would find the families they had left, and that they preferred staying and ending their days there rather than venture back to such a doubtful and uncertain future. This paper was four months old when Mrs. Jones' friend saw it one month ago, and the events narrated were described as having occurred four months previous to the issue of the paper. It is just nine months, then, since the island was discovered by the British vessel, and at the time all or nearly all of the Florida party appear to have been alive. It need not be said that this news has aroused the deepest interest. To the community at large it recalls the familiar occurrence of the Florida's sailing from New Orleans with its adventurous company. To the families of the ill-fated men it comes like a message from another world, and is as though it were an announcement of a resurrection. Within the past few days the relatives have been living in a state of constant excitement, and many of them, especially the sons of Harmon Jones, John A. Sidney and Captain Kenmure, the skipper of the Florida, have devoted themselves to the task of following the clue given by the friend who saw the English paper. Extensive inquiries are now on foot and the British Consul has kindly interested himself in the affair so far as to agree to forward to the war office in London a statement of the circumstances, so that the name of the vessel which touched at the castaway's home can be ascertained, and the bearings of the island taken from her log.

News and Notes.

The Cornell crew won the race at Saratoga on Tuesday.

Col. John S. Mosby has declined the invitation to deliver one of a series of addresses in Tremont Temple, Boston. He writes: "Although circumstances compel me to decline it, I assure you that I do so from no want of sympathy with the noble object you profess a desire to promote—the restoration of fraternal relations between the people of the long-estranged sections of our country. For the soldiers of the Union I cherish no feelings of bitterness, but on the contrary, sentiments of the highest respect, and I trust the day is not far distant when the soldiers of both armies will receive from the whole country the credit due to their valor and patriotic devotions in 'the big wars that made ambition virtue.'" In reply to this Col. Mosby received a second letter asking him to reconsider his declination because his letter had so much "true soldierly ring." He has not yet decided whether he will accept or not.

The annual Twelfth of July riot was, this year, in New England, in the city of Lawrence. As usual, the attack was made upon the Orangemen, apparently without provocation and in a cowardly manner, upon the unprotected few; and the mob, made war indiscriminately upon the officers of the law, who came to the assistance of the assaulted party, as it was their duty to do, and gave them the protection that was their right. The prompt and determined action of the Mayor is deserving of all praise, and it is no doubt largely due to him and his presence at the head of his police force in the midst of the flying bricks and stones that the riot did not attain more serious proportions. The 17th of March and the 12th of July seldom pass without a row. We are a free country and allow the utmost freedom here, but we protest against longer allowing the fighting over in our peaceful streets of old battles long since fought out in distant fields.

The Bridget Landergan Murder.

Recent developments strengthen the suspicion attached to Thomas W. Piper, now awaiting trial for the murder of Mabel H. Young, as the murderer of Bridget Landergan. On the day that Piper was arrested, charged with the "belfry" murder, he was taken to the office of the Chief of Police, where he changed the clothes he had on for another suit. Now it will be remembered that a bundle containing a shirt, pair of pants and a brick were fished from the bottom of a vault near the house where Thomas Cahill lived, and that the name of "Thomas Cahill" was written on the waistband, the watch pocket being cut or torn out. The bundle was found seven months and fourteen days after it was supposed it had been thrown into the vault, and yet a witness has been found who declares that the lining of the pants was dry, and that the brick was not moist, which could not have been the case had the articles been there the time named. The attention of Chief Savage having been called to these circumstances he employed a tailor of fifteen years' experience as a cutter to make a careful comparison of the pantaloons found in the vault and those worn by Piper on the day of his arrest. The result was that the measurements of the two were found to correspond almost exactly. At the suggestion of the Attorney-General, the Chief called in three experts in penmanship, a majority of whom, after comparing the writing on the pants found in the vault with the hand-writing of Piper, declared them to have been executed by one and the same hand. Furthermore, it is declared that the knots in the cord around the bundle was a square sailor's knot, and not one likely to have been made by a landsman. What will come of all this remains to be seen.

Religious Exercises in Florida.

[From the Phrenological Journal.]

After a half hour's discourse he said: "Does you tink I'se preachin' to you now? No; I hab't begun yet. I'se only preparin' ob my mind to preach. I don't look at the book, cause why? I hab catsracks ober my eyes, and de docter say I musn't look at black and white talken."

Then after some characteristic singing, all beating time with one foot, a brudder led in prayer, during which which the sisters chanted in an undertone. He closed by pathetically imploring de Lord to "see us all to our watery graves in peace."

After more singing, a brudder rose and said; "Dey was a berry poor church, but dat last year a white lady threw up $5 for their benefit, and would be glad if we would do something, too." So a hat was passed and "we threw up," to their great delight.

The services closed with the Holy dance, all singing and jumping about to the tune, and shaking hands with owl-like solemnity. One preacher has been known in his fervor to leap over the pulpit and "shin" up the posts to the roof, whence he triumphantly watched the proceedings below.

—The boys of New Albany, Ind., know a trick worth two like coasting down-hill. It is called a mud-slide and is made by tramping out a hollow on the sloping river bank, and by means of water carried from the river in the hats of the boys, make the slide soft and "slick as glass," care being taken to remove any substance that would be apt to render sitting in the side, at all uncomfortable. After the slide is completed, the boys procure an old skiff or canoe and laboriously pull the vessel to the top of the slide, where they fill it with boys from stem to stern, and giving it a push, slide into the water with the velocity of a bullet shot from a gun. Another amusement is for a string of boys to sit down in the slide and glide smoothly into the river, closely following one another. This latter plan has its disadvantages, however.

—This is the way a Western squirrel hunter regards the American rifle team: "We understand one of the shootists laid on his stomach; another on his back, and a third rested his rifle on his big toe. Please explain to us how this mode of shooting can be of any benefit to anybody. I have seen squirrel-hunters knock the eye out of a squirrel at the distance of a hundred yards off-hand. I have seen men in the army draw a bead on a man one thousand yards off and drop him, but I didn't see them rest their rifle on their big toe, nor did I see them lying on their stomach, nor on their back. Please tell us what possible use these fellows would be in an emergency?"

—It is supposed that the remains of Brandon, said to have been the executioner of Charles I., were disturbed last week by the local authorities of Whitechapel, who have lately been removing the bodies interred beneath Whitechapel church, for the purpose of rebuilding the edifice. In the burial register of that church is the following entry: "June 21, 1649, Richard Brandon, a man out of Rosemary lane, supposed to have cut off the head of Charles I." When he died, on the 20th of June, 1649, in his house on Rosemary lane, a large crowd assembled on the occasion of his funeral, and suggested that he should be buried in a dung hill. It was with difficulty that the local authorities of Whitechapel managed to smuggle his body to the churchyard, where it was at last carried with a bunch of rosemary at each end of the coffin, and a rope tied across from one end to the other.

—The British museum and other public libraries in England are watching like buzzards for the death of Mr. Crossley, living in Manchester, and eighty years old. Crossley is a bibliographer, and the most noted book-worm in England. His library contains 50,000 volumes. He is a complete encyclopedia of English literature, and in his immense library of musty tomes he lives the life of a hermit. He was a personal friend of Charles Lamb and other literary men of past generations, but has written nothing himself except a few magazine articles, contributed to current literature in 1820.

—Two young roughs in Memphis courted the same girl, and upon her choice between them arose a fight. The rejected lover attacked his rival with a knife, cutting a deep gash across his cheek and nose. The wound was a long time healing, and it left a disfiguring scar. Having recovered from his wound the sufferer asked the girl to select a day for the wedding; but she coldly informed him that she could never marry a man with such an ugly scar on his face, and decided to accept the other fellow.

—A large and elegant tea shop was opened in St. Louis about a month ago. The establishment was so handsome and the prices so low that the sales were enormous from the start. Yet one morning the place was closed, and later on the same day the tea merchant's creditors took possession. An examination showed that the chests remaining contained only sawdust. The merchant had obtained ten thousand dollars' worth of tea on credit for a month, had sold the whole of it at less than its actual value, and had gone away with the money.

—John Thompson of Algiers, near New Orleans, lives close to a railroad, and one day his dog was killed by a locomotive. The dog was a favorite with his master, whose resentment was aroused by its death. That night he misplaced a switch and threw a freight train off the track, and two days afterward he repeated the act. Then a watch was kept, and he was caught fastening iron bars to cause a disaster to a passenger train. His trial is in progress in New Orleans.

—The San Francisco Bulletin represents the effect of opium eating upon the Chinese in that city as worse than the popular estimate of it. The victim when deprived of the drug, is in a more pitiable condition than the drunkard with delirium tremens. His complexion becomes ghastly, and his stomach will not retain food. It is believed that nine-tenths of the thieving done by Chinese is to get money for opium.

—A man went into a furniture room at Mankato recently and sat down on a wooden-bottomed chair. He immediately arose and danced and howled like the wildest kind of a dervish. The proprietor anxiously inquired if he had an attack of any kind. "A tack!" yelled the man, "I should say so; and the confounded thing stood on its head, too."

—An attempt is being made on the Swedish coast to recover the cargo of an East Indiaman which foundered near the Fortress of Elfsborg in 1712. The diving operations have been very successful, a large quantity of old Chinese porcelain having already been recovered in so perfect a condition that pieces have been sold to collectors at high prices.

—Frozen peaches will be shipped to Europe this Summer in large quantities. A successful experiment was made last year, and it was demonstrated that fruit kept frozen during the ocean voyage thawed out fresh and fine of flavor upon arrival in England, where it was sold at enormous prices.

—The Chicago Times reports that the first lady lawyer admitted to the bar in Ohio has just got her first client. The client is very youthful, and is the legitimate result of successful courting. The doctor says she is doing as well as could be expected; but what does he know about law?

—The daughter of Mario and Grisi has married the son of Rev. Mr. Vaughan of Christ Church, Brighton, England. The bride was born in Brighton, and hence arose the acquaintance which has ended in this marriage.

—The Golden Age suggests that preachers who want their salaries raised will please take notice of the Plymouth Church proceedings and govern themselves accordingly.

—The Boston Post says there are only 41,000 lawyers in this country. The Detroit Free Press exclaims that it thought there were 1,500,000, with Texas to hear from.

—The St. Louis Times thinks that Prof. Ward's crocodile is not the first American specimen, but that Weeping Brother Shearman is entitled to the honor of precedence.

—A Toronto (Ont.) bridegroom was confronted at the door, Monday, by two big brothers of the bride, and had to thoroughly whip them both before the marriage ceremony could proceed.

—"Latin and Greek are all right," said a Washington county farmer to his son, a young graduate recently, "but gimme a man who can plow around an apple tree 'thout touching the roots."

A Revengeful Organ.

The stomach is a revengeful organ. If we assign it indigestible food, it not only refuses to perform its office, but inflicts upon us unspeakable tortures, such as those of indigestion, colic, cholera morbus, &c. Not content with giving us pain, it frequently inaugurates an excessive and wasting diarrhœa, called dysentery, which carries us to our graves. With a view to prevent these consequences, as soon as the stomach gives notice by premonitory twinges that its cargo is not to its liking, a wineglassful or two of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters should be swallowed. This admirable digestive cordial will promptly reconcile the refractory organ to its contents, and prevent any of those annoying and possibly fatal results which the presence of indigestible food in the stomach is liable to produce. The Bitters are also a superb tonic, restorative and appetizer.

Local Matters.

The William H. Marcy.

The above named vessel sails from this port this (Wednesday) morning, at 9 o'clock, should the weather be fair, in command of Capt. J. Truro Marcy, son of the staunch old veteran ship-master, Capt, Daniel Marcy. The William H. Marcy is, without doubt, the finest and most perfect embodiment of naval skill and architecture ever set afloat, being as strong as the best of New Hampshire oak and Norway iron can make her, besides having been built by one of the best ship carpenters that ever handled an adze, David D. Badger, Esq. From truck to keelson thoroughness of construction seems to have been the prevailing idea.

A party composed of the friends of Capt. Marcy and his son, inspected the vessel alluded to on Tuesday, and were treated to a bountiful collation of everything desirable to the inner man. After partaking of the viands, a little speech-making was supplemented, James P. Bartlett, Esq., being selected as chairman of the occasion. Rev. Carlos Martyn, Hon. Albert R. Hatch, Col. Wm. H. Hackett, Senator Hall, Rev. Mr. Hebbard, Capt. Ross of the ship Frank Jones, and Hon. Daniel Marcy contributed each his share to the literary festivities.

The following extract from the CHRONICLE of June 5th, just previous to the launch, will give the reader an idea of her proportions.

"The material of the ship from bow to stern is of the very best, and has been selected and put in under the personal supervision of Capt. Marcy, whose experience as a ship builder has given him the great success and ame by which he is known among ship masters and owners at home and abroad. The length of the keel of the above mentioned vessel is two hundred and five feet; breadth of beam forty-one and two inches; depth of hold from top of floors to top of lower beam, fifteen feet and six inches; height between decks, eight feet and six inches; angle of dead rise, five degrees; angle of entrance, thirty-nine degrees; angle of clearance, thirty-seven degrees; capacity, 1607 tons, carpenter's measurement. She is owned by Peter Marcy, Esq,, of New Orleans, and his brother, Hon. Daniel Marcy of Portsmouth. The commander, Capt. J. T. Marcy, is the second son of the builder, and as she is thus preeminently a Marcy ship, we predict for her the good fortune that has attended her owners, that good fortune that is born of shrewd business foresight, hard labor, and a personal attention to one's affairs."

The Wm. H. Marcy sails for New York to load for San Francisco.

Railroad Meetings.

A meeting of the stockholders of the Eastern Railroad in New Hampshire was held on Tuesday, Hon. Ichabod Goodwin presiding. The committee appointed to assort and count the votes were Messrs. Ropes of Salem, Giddings of Beverly and Abbott of Concord, who reported that the whole number of votes cast 1657, all of which were in favor of John Woolredge of Lynn; William H. Y. Hackett, Portsmouth; Robert W. Hooper, Boston; Ichabod Goodwin, Portsmouth; Frederick W. Choate, Beverly; as Directors. These were accordingly declared elected and the meeting adjourned.

Subsequently, Ex-Gov. Goodwin was re-elected Treasurer, as also Wm. H. Hackett, Clerk.

A meeting of the Great Falls and Conway Railroad was held immediately after the above, and was called to order by John Woolredge, President. A committee, consisting of Messrs. Nathaniel Hooper of Boston, T. E. O. Marvin of Portsmouth and E. A. Abbott of Concord, were appointed to assort and count the votes. Their report shew 1305 ballots, all of which were for F. Gordon Dexter, Boston; John, Woolreidge, Lynn; Ichabod Goodwin, and W. H. Y. Hackett, Portsmouth; George W. Burleigh, Great Falls.

John Woolredge was, at a subsequent meeting of the Directors, elected President, and William H. Hackett, Clerk.

Vanitatas Vanitatem.

In my den is conspicuously hung an excellent mirror. Most mirrors—could they speak—would tell a multitude of tales concerning our vanities—many of which, although recognized as truthful, we should be glad to deny. My mirror has no such disclosure to make, with reference to its owner; but owing to the thickness of its plate, and the purity of the metal upon its back, it retains, for my especial delectation, impressions of all the faces and forms which have passed before it. It confesses to a comical experience to-day.

While sitting quietly in my den, the door being open, a dapper little lady walked in, for the purpose of selling me some article of merchandise, a specimen of which she held in her hand.

Her toilet was a marvel of intricacy. To describe its elaborate details would be impossible, were it not for my faithful mirror. But I forbear. As she meandered across the floor, the polished plate attracted her eye, and she became immediately absorbed in contemplation of her own petite figure and its gorgeous paraphernalia. Her fingers dallied carelessly with the sample of her wares she carried; while her glib little tongue told of their merits in the most perfunctory manner. This of course, was mere mechanical action, requiring no effort of the brain.

She waltzed up to the mirror, and sidled away; she advanced again by echelon, and retreated by parallel. 'Twas like a bee hovering around a field of clover blossoms. Suddenly she darted out at the door with a delicate little rustle, and all was still. I never saw such downright satisfaction with one's self. Ordinarily, self-worshippers at my mirror are tempted to alter this ribbon, or that fold—but here the conditions were simply perfect; nothing was changed. I was at first inclined to congratulate myself upon affording the little creature so much genuine happiness. But then the entertainment she afforded me was much in excess of any benefit I had conferred upon her. Verily! in comparison with her airy flitting the "Shadow Dance" in "Dinorah" was a clumsy burlesque. I wonder if she sold any—well—what did she have to sell? Will she come again? My glass is at her service,—and yours. P. L.

Jottings.

The hop at the Wentworth for which so much preparation has been made, comes off to-night if fair weather, if not we understand that a postponement takes place until the following Wednesday. Probably twenty-five couple will be present from this city, to whom tickets have been issued.

The annual meeting of the Proprietors of the Portsmouth Bridge was held on Tuesday and the following named gentlemen were elected directors: Ichabod Goodwin, William H. Y. Hackett, William L. Dwight, J. K. Lothrop, S. Lothrop Thorndike, Charles E. Barrell and John Woolredge, Hon. Ichabod Goodwin was by the directors re-elected President and William H. Hackett, Proprietors' clerk.

The Wolfe Tone Club will hold their annual picnic in Pinkham's grove, at Dover Point, on Thursday. A variety of amusements will be provided for the entertainment of the crowd, including boat and sack racing, swinging, dancing, etc. Harlow's band has been engaged for the day. Tickets, only 50 cents each, (good on any train,) to go and return, may be obtained of members of the club and at the Eastern railroad ticket office.

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH OF THE CITY OF PORTSMOUTH call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10 of the City Ordinances and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the city to aid them in the execution of their duty.

CHAPTER X.

Sec. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, &c. shall be conveyed by the owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the health officers may direct.

Sec. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

Sec. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten days from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting to do so, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time above specified.

Sec. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offals of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

Sec. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisances shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

Sec. 12. When any householder shall know that any person within his family is taken sick of the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 13. When any physician shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for each refusal or neglect forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the health officers in the name of the city.

Sec. 16. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other thing deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier of the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may, by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

Sec. 21. No person shall erect, keep or continue or permit to be erected, kept or continued, upon any land occupied by him, any pen for the keeping of swine, or privy, over either of the mill ponds in this city, or so placed that offensive substances therefrom shall be discharged or drained into either of said ponds, or into any creek, or cove or drain leading thereto. And no person shall construct, keep or continue any drain leading from any pen for the keeping of any swine, slaughter-house, privy vault, or other unwholesome or offensive place, into either of said ponds, or to any flat or marsh adjoining the same. And no person shall throw or suffer to be thrown from his land into either of said ponds, or upon any of said flats or marshes, any dead, decaying, unwholesome or offensive animal or vegetable substances.

THE UNION DEAD AT RICHMOND.

[By Ione G. Daniels.]

Bring flowers, bright flowers, for the Union dead,
And deck their graves with a floral spread;
They sleep by the James and their royal rest,
Is deep in the heart of Virginia's breast.

Bring flowers, fair flowers to bloom above
The soil that is dear to Patriot love.
Sweet be the rest of our Loyal and True
Who sleep in their martial shrouds of blue.

Bring flowers, sweet flowers, for the far away,
Who in death are ours on Memorial Day;
May incense upborne on a seraph's wing,
Be wafted to them from these flowers we bring.

Bring flowers, dainty flowers of every hue,
Reflecting the pure heavens, red, white, and blue;
From the red roses blush, to the lily-cups snow;
From the gentian's soft blue, to the violet's glow.

Bring everything rare, and everything new,
That May has baptized in her heavenly dew,
To the unknown, whose headstones have dotted the land,
Like shining white pebbles, washed up from the strand.

Bring flowers, swe test flowers, the choice and the rare,
To bloom o'er our braves who lie slumbering there.
And for those who have perished in foul prison pens,
Whose bodies still hallow the rivers and glens;
For them! all the gardens of earth could not bear
An emblem of half the bright glories they wear.

We'll honor the graves of our Patriot Dead,
So long as God's firmament blazes o'er head;
While o'er them, the Star Spangled Banner shall wave.
Renewed in the blood of the true and the brave.

They impart Strength to the Body and Vigor to the Mind, removing Morbid Sensibility, Depression of Spirits, Dementia and Melancholia.

NERVOUS DEBILITY.

However obscure the causes may be which contribute to render nervous debility a disease so prevalent, affecting as it does, nearly one-half of our adult population, it is a melancholy fact that day by day, and year by year, we witness a most frightful increase of nervous affections from the slightest neuralgia to the more grave and extreme forms of Nervous Prostration.

It is of the highest importance, then, that individuals should be able to judge for themselves, by their own feelings, if and to what extent they are attacked by this insidious enemy in ill health, comfort, and even life itself if left to run its course unchecked by the early and prompt application of curative remedies.

DRUNKENNESS.

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS is the only remedy that has ever proved by practical experience a benefit to those who suffer from over-indulgence in alcoholic liquors; it completely destroys the taste for them, and restores the victim of intemperance to health and vigor. A single trial will prove it to be just what it is recommended to be.

Price $2.50. Large size, $5. Each package of the Cordial Balm contains one box of the Tonic Pills, which may also be had separately at 50 cents per box.

RECENT TESTIMONIALS.

FREWSBURGH, Nov. 12, 1874.

I have used the Cordial Balm and Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills as a preventive and cure for the use of ardent spirits and habitual intoxication, and find them actually specific in such cases. I regard them as most invaluable medicines, and nothing could induce me to be without them.

JACOB MESERVE.

TIPTON, Dec. 3, 1874.

We take great pleasure in informing you of the surprisingly beneficial results from the use of your English Remedy, The Cordial Balm of Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills, in a case of great Nervous Debility and Prostration, by a member of our family who had been under treatment by different doctors for nearly three years past without any apparent benefit therefrom; but your medicines have produced a most wonderful change for the better and the patient now enjoys comparatively excellent health. MRS. HARRIET STURGISS.

P. S.—We tell all with whom we are acquainte who are similarly afflicted to try your medicines.

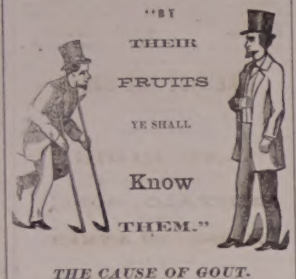
FACTS PROVEN

BY THE

TEST OF EXPERIENCE.



THE CAUSE OF GOUT.

It proceeds from a deficiency of, or an alteration in the cutaneous, urinary or intestinal secretions. This definition leads us to the solution of a second and not less important question:

HOW TO CURE THE GOUT.

This can only be accomplished by a course of treatment capable of establishing the perspiration, if suppressed, of inducing a proper flow of urine, and of destroying the obstinate constipation when it exists. But it is not sufficient that these three functions act properly as respect quantity, but above all, and before all, their quality must have our attention. Indeed, we have mentioned not only a deficiency but also an alteration of secretion. For the perspiration, the urine, and the evacuations should be not only sufficiently abundant, but should carry off certain principles whose stay would produce the most serious disorders.

This is precisely what we see in the Gout. Does it not often happen that after an attack, the joints become deformed by chalky concretions? These gouty deposits have been analyzed by the Chemists Wallaston, Fornerey, Vanquillin and Barrnell.—Every first-class physician should know their composition, then there would remain no fault a means to prevent these salts spreading, and, as it were, condensing of themselves throughout the system. The receipt from which is compounded the will produce this desirable result, because it gives to the products of the body the quantity and quality necessary.

CHRONIC GOUT having been engendered insensibly during a certain lapse of time, time is necessary for its removal. Its elimination must take place atom by atom. It is, therefore, not surprising that patience should be required for a complete cure. We must be careful not to confound the acute with the chronic condition; if the latter, it requires weeks to remove it; in the former, a few doses only are necessary to effect a complete cure.

By perseverance longer or a shorter time, according to the severity of the case, the joints will gradually recover their suppleness, and the nodes will be seen to soften and diminish insensibly. This last is an infallible test of the wonderful properties of the

DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

To this unerring proof we can, by the aid of Chemistry, add another, equally palpable and convincing:

The articular concretions are composed principally of uric acid, waters of ammonia, of soda, and of phosphate of lime. These are precisely the salts which we find in the various excreta, particularly in the urine; so that chemical reagents which showed scarcely a trace of these before taking the DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE, will demonstrate an enormous proportion after its use.

Thus the concretions, the principal components of which analysis has shown can be again reproduced, and will thus furnish the most convincing proof any medicine can offer. This, then, is the most rational plan of proceeding, and which enabled us to answer the question of a certain English M. P., "WHAT HAS BECOME OF MY GOUT?" We told him that "it followed the course of the evacuations," since chemical analysis, as has been said, finds in them all the principles which produce it. Henceforth it is clear that this medicine is and ought to banish not only all ideas of retrogressions, but should inspire the most perfect confidence. It cannot be too often repeated, these are no hypothesis, no vain theories, but palpable truths, material, physical facts, confirmed over and over again by twenty-five years' practical experience in the leading hospitals of England and France, as well as by thousands of testimonials held by every one of our agents, freely offered by sufferers restored to sound health and continued use furnished through the means of the world-renowned DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

It is styled as above for the reason that its great efficacy in rheumatic complaints is just as apparent as in gout, and thousands of sufferers in Massachusetts to-day, cured of rheumatism by its use, mention the Proprietor's name with benedictions of praise.

This medicine is for sale at all Druggists throughout the United States and Canada. If it happens that your Druggist has not got it in stock, ask him to send for it to any of the Wholesale Druggists in Boston. Price $1 a bottle.

HORSE RAKE.

Farmers are respectfully requested to inspect these Machines before purchasing elsewhere.

They are believed to be the best Mower and Rake in the Market.

The Mower is strong, durable and of the lightest draft.

IT HAS TAKEN ONE HUNDRED PREMIUMS.

The demand has increased from 200 in 1873 to over 7000 in 1875 which is ample proof of their superiority.

The rake for 1875 is perfected so that by a simple centre-trip attachment, three pounds' pressure with the foot will DUMP THE RAKE.

These Machines can be seen at Hayes Farm and will be cheerfully shown to parties whether they purchase or not. We are ready to compare notes with any other machines in a field trial.

BOOK AGENTS wanted to sell "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser." It is the cheapest book ever published; 383 pages, over 250 illustrations, $1.50. Thousands buy it at sight, who could not be induced to purchase the high-priced books treating of Domestic Medicine. Unlike other books sold through agents this work is thoroughly advertised throughout North America. This fact, together with the large size, elegant appearance, and many new features of the book, causes it to sell more rapidly than any work ever published in this country. Those of my agents who have had experience in selling books, say that in all their previous canvassing they never met with such success or made so large wages, as since commencing the sale of my work. PULMOCINE.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

—USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

RUNNING A NEWSPAPER.

I arose from bed sad at heart, and went down stairs to breakfast, afraid to face, for another day, the mortifications that beset a man out of a situation and in debt. A grim spirit of malice possessed me, and my tongue itched to say something disagreeable. It happened that the first person I met was old Mrs. Cobleigh, my next door neighbor at table. She was bobbling to her place, supporting herself by a chair pushed before her, as I reached the door. "Old Sam Hinchcliffe is dead," I observed to her, in a wickedly personal and insinuating manner. I brought that thunderbolt on my own head. In my distemper I had rashly forgotten that she craved news of that sort more than owls crave the dark and bees the flowers. "Bless my soul, my dear," she exclaimed, in her most pensive tone, laying her hand on my arm. "Sit down and tell me all about it." Merciful Heaven! what had I done? An unusual number of letters on my plate afforded me a bit of an excuse. "Yes, he's dead," I continued, abstractedly; "but I really don't know anything more about it. Sarah, what is there for breakfast?"

"Hash, fried fish and cold mutton, sir."

"A diversity of riches perplexeth the brain. Bring me some bread and butter."

"Well, now, my dear, tell me all about old Sam," persisted Mrs. Cobleigh. "I knew him when I was a girl. Think ye I could be of any service to his poor, dear sister? Tell me all about it, my boy."

"I met Fanny Edwards last night, Mrs. Cobleigh," I replied with a shudder, "and she said she would call this morning and give you every particular. She saw him die."

"Bless that lovely girl! She always remembers poor old Cobby."

Thus, by a little truth and some fiction I obtained time to examine my letters. I could tell by the envelopes what they were: answers from editors to my application for employment; polite negatives assuring me that their staffs were full, and that otherwise I was the very gentleman they would engage. I tore open the uppermost in a frame of mind prepared for disappointment; I read it with a smile, which even changed to a loud laugh, and put it down full of hope and good cheer. It read as follows:

OFFICE OF THE AFTERNOON,
No —, —— street,
B——, September 28, 1871.

Robert Halle, Esq.:

MY DEAR SIR—I should be very glad if the circumstances of this paper would permit me to reply affirmatively to your inquiry of the twenty-fifth. (At this point I savagely muttered, "of course!") But circumstances rule otherwise. The staff is reduced to one, whereas it once numbered four. One by one they fell and were raken in by the croupier of journalism—seedy want. There are "vacancies" enough in the editorial department, the dear knows; but there is one vacancy still worse on the ground floor, and the cashier is its much harassed victim.

As you are one of us you will have no difficulty in piercing the thin veil of metaphor—which conceals a deeper poverty than that of ideas—and comprehending the situation. The concern is not dead broke, but the men who do the work are near the haven of good fellows. Probably the Afternoon will live, and one afternoon become famous; but just now, and since last March, I have been at the pumps alone, and long ago saw my bottom dollar.

Will you excuse this digression and confession, and charge it to that fellow-feeling which is never so generous as when it can be lavish of words without endangering a fellow's exchequer? You might come here, but you would starve to death, and saddle your friends with the expenses of a funeral. If I could see a streak of light I would encourage you, but I do not, unless you will come and take my place, to which you shall be welcome.

Wishing it were otherwise,
I am, ever yours truly,
SALTUS G. W. PENN,
editor and proprietor of the Afternoon.

"Bless me, my dear, how you laugh!" remarked Mrs. Cobleigh.

"Another fellow is dead," I said pleasantly; and, before she had time to ask me to tell her all about it, I was on my way up stairs to my room. The letter awakened all my latent enthusiasm. Here was the rara avis that men in all ages had been seeking for—an honest man. A man without humbug, who told the truth about himself and his condition to a mere stranger; who disdained evasions; appreciated the poverty of his profession, and confessed it. Then there was the offer to surrender his place. It could not be an enviable one, certainly; but he expected to lose. I had never retained any position for more than six months or a year, owing to a very perverse disposition which asserted itself in antagonism to the principles, or want of principles, of my employers. But there was no doubt in my mind that, with a free field, I should prove more successful than ever before. I might starve to death in my new efforts; but that would be an "experience," and "experiences" are of greater value to a popular writer than the classics. I could not saddle friends with the expenses of a funeral, because I had none. These and many other reasons made me decide to find out Mr. Saltus G. W. Penn, and seek work on the city dailies in case his letter should prove to be written in bad faith.

I had already seen copies of The Afternoon, a penny evening paper, making a fair appearance, and I was too old in the business to anticipate a large establishment. A small room on the obscure top floors of some building used for all purposes was all that I pictured beforehand, and found in reality. The cashier on the ground floor was a myth. Advertisements were received, type-setting and editorial work done, six stories up. I stumbled into the dark and dreary office, and brought up against two or three feet of counter. A gray-haired old man and a smutty boy working at case, and, behind a board partition, I caught a glimpse of a gentleman in his shirt sleeves, writing with frantic haste on yellow manuscript paper.

This was Mr. Penn, editor and proprietor of The Afternoon, I decided; the man whom I had labored through twenty years to find; an ideal in the flesh; a hero in modern clothes. Observing me before I had time for a searching examination, he struck a bell on his desk; but, suddenly remembering that the office boy was a bygone luxury, he rose and came bustling toward me himself. He was a pure American, evidently, with some of the sparkle of the West in his nature; a gay, active little man, about thirty or thirty-five years old. His mustache—otherwise his face was clean shaven—was dandified, black and waxed, and his hair slightly streaked with gray. A brooch of the grand army was pinned to the breast of his vest, and his manner had the raciness and ease of a class, familiar to all of us, which the training and vicissitudes of our last war created. As he advanced toward me, smiling blandly, I introduced myself as briefly as possible. He did not recollect the name at first, but, as I reminded him of the letter, he stretched out his hand and laughed.

"You have my references, and I have come to offer my services," I observed.

"It is not possible that you entertained my proposition!" he exclaimed with some amazement.

"Before I answer, let me ask whether it was made in good faith or not."

"It was, sir, in perfect good faith."

"Then I will be frank. You are anxious to be relieved of the responsibilities and duties; I am willing to assume them. All I can lose is my time and $75."

"My dear sir, I am grateful to you. You shall have The Afternoon all to yourself—yes, all. I have just received an appointment as consul to Tongatabu; I did not know what to do with the concern, but you shall be welcome to it, thrice welcome. Matters shall be arranged at once, as I want to sail for my post by the next steamer from San Francisco. First of all," he added, with a merry twinkle in his eye, "let us think about the coffin."

"Whose coffin?" I asked.

"Yours, sir. I will introduce you to Sowls, the undertaker, and I am sure, with all his accustomed liberality, he will provide something neat, not gaudy; no silver mounting—you could hardly expect that—but a sound oaken box, that will keep out the damp worms for at least a week. A pleasant paragraph, to the effect that Sowls' coffins are a source of pleasure and satisfaction in every household, will fully compensate him. Two or three lines judiciously added will obtain coffin space in some graveyard for you. By all means, we must see Sowls at once: "Tommy, Tommy, Tommy!" he roared to the office boy. Alas! only aloud echo answers. Tommy's mother took him away last week. She was a cat not satisfied with three Afternoons. Never mind; we'll go and see Sowls ourselves presently. Now, Mr. Halle., you want to know something about the condition of the paper. Since I purchased it, about two years ago, it has been managed on the co-operative principle; not co-operative as that word is generally understood, but in a wider and truer sense. I have indicated this in the transaction I propose you shall have with Mr. Sowls. You want a coffin, or, probably, will want one in a short time—'sufficient for the day is the evil thereof,' you know, and Mr. Sowls wants a puff. The movement of coin is troublesome, and better dispensed with. Sowls and you adjust the comparative value of the two articles, and transaction, honorable alike to the press and honest tradesman, is complete. The system, as you will observe, has much to commend it. It is economical, obviates books, and engenders good feeling, inasmuch as Sowls is more gratified with the puff, especially if it alludes to his domestic virtue and financial integrity, than he would be with twice the cash value of his coffin. A just remark, printed in The Afternoon, about the domestic virtue of the root-beer man around the corner, supplied the office with that beverage for an entire Summer. I regret, however, that the undertaker and this gentleman are the only tradesmen who continue to recognize the efficacy and beauty of the system."

Mr. Penn was chuckling loudly as he talked.

"The paper must circulate, or you would not print it, of course."

"It does," he resumed, in a more serious voice, "and while there's life there's hope. A few hundred copies are struck off at the pressman's and sold on the streets. If it were possible to get up a good sensation, you might suddenly attain popularity; but I am played out, and yearning for the coral sands and sheltering palms of Tongatabu."

"How deeply is the paper in debt?"

"Only a few hundred dollars. I could not get more credit. We are obliged to pay for paper and press work before we get either. But do not suppose The Afternoon has lapsed into darkness. The receipts for sales and advertisements, after deducting the salaries of three compositors and other running expenses, leave us about $5 a week in hand. A very fair reward for seventy-two hours' brain work! In my leisure moments I work at the case myself."

"You have not mentioned current news. How do you get that?"

"The truth is, we want so very little in a paper like ours, that it is not worth the trouble of buying. We steal it. Most of the paper is made up of short stories, 'wit and humor' clipped from soothing syrup almanacs—our exchange list is very short—and standing advertisements. We reserve a column until one of the other afternoon sheets appears, and then dress up all they have in the way of telegrams and local matters. Now and then I forge a presidential proclamation, burn down one of my neighbor's houses, or discover frauds in the department of public lamp-posts, and publish the information exclusively in The Afternoon; but such work is a drain to a man's system, sir."

Within a few days this merry, reckless, good-natured representative of war and the press was on his way to Tongatabu, and the comparative affluence of an income of not less than $2000 a year; while I was proudly installed at my new desk. As I first sat down I found something underneath which interfered with the free exercise of my legs, and, upon searching, brought out a coffin, bearing a tin plate inscribed with my full name, a blank space being left for the date of my death. This was Penn's parting joke. I never heard of him afterward—except on one occasion, when he was promoted to the embassy of the Society islands.

With all his industry, his twelve hours' work a day, it was apparent that, had he not mismanaged The Afternoon, he might have had a large circulation. He was unstable and intemperate in his habits. Therein was the secret of his failure. His creditors never hoped to be paid, and acquiesced willingly to the transfer of their claims from his name to mine. They were even disposed to encourage me, and offered further credit to a small amount. Other men then Penn would have attempted to prolong the precarious existence by blackmail, but The Afternoon came to me with no strains of that kind upon it. I went to work full of energy and bright anticipations. First of all, I discharged the boy, and undertook his share of type-setting, in addition to that Penn had been in the habit of doing; then I found an old friend connected with one of the leading papers, and had him introduce me about the town? I screwed kindly notices out of all my contemporaries, enlisted a corps of newsboys, and encouraged them by unsurpassed inducements to carry The Afternoon. Election day was approaching, and I sought an alliance with some politician wanting the support of an influential journal; but in this I did not succeed, as all gentlemen of that class were as penniless as myself. At six o'clock every morning I went to work and wrote original matter and made selections. My editorials had some tone, and attracted occasional attention. From ten o'clock until three I worked at the case, and then ran out, bought an afternoon paper, condensed the news, helped to set it up, and carried the forms to the pressman's. I folded the hot little sheets with my own hands, and on one occasion, when I obtained an important bit of news, I made an "extra" out of it; put on my worst suit of clothes, disguised myself in a false mustache and wig, and went about the streets roaring "extra" at the top-pitch of my stentorian lungs. My voice drowned the smaller ones, and I sold over a hundred copies at three cents each. Three dollars' profit! When the paper was issued, I went through the city canvassing for advertisements, and spent my evenings gathering special news. One night a famous English divine was to preach at the First Presbyterian Church. I struck off a lot of handbills announcing that his sermon would be published verbatim in The Afternoon of the following day. These I intended to distribute through all the pews. How could I do it? The officials of the church would be afraid of exciting the opposition of other papers if they advertised mine; I was desperate, and not over-scrupulous. It happened that some men had been renovating the church, and on the evening before the services they were putting finishing touches on the bronze gas brackets. I singled out a man who looked more sly than the others, and engaged him to place a handbill in every Bible and prayer book in the house. For this service I paid him $5. I had not yet arranged to report the sermon, and could not myself follow so fast a speaker as Dr. ——, nor could I afford to employ a stenographer. I secured a seat nearest the pulpit, and intended to push forward and borrow the manuscript the moment service was ended. Several eager-looking young men, representatives of other papers, were around me, bent on the same project. Almost before the last words of the benediction had died away I went up to the reading desk and coolly took the manuscript in my hands.

"It is for The Afternoon, which will print it in full," I said, holding it in my hands. The doctor's attention was called away, and, taking it for granted that he would not decline to lend the manuscript to so important a newspaper as my own, I started rapidly down the center aisle. As I reached the sidewalk, a strong hand grasped me by the collar; looking round, I found a rival reporter in a threatening attitude. I knocked him down, and went to the office, bolting every door behind me. A crowd of reporters had followed me, and demanded admission; but I was too busy to waste time upon them. At ten o'clock next morning, after working all night, the sermon was in type. It occupied all the paper; current news and advertisements excepted. That day the circulation of The Afternoon reached 3000 copies. I was arrested for assault and battery on my rival, but obtained bail in time to be present at an investigation, ordered by the trustees of the church, into the manner by which my advertisement had got into their Bibles. A report of this affair gave me another sensation.

I feel very bitter when I remember that all my exertions did not enable me to pay $7 a week for miserable board. Three weeks after I took charge of the paper, which was growing daily, a vulgar old woman came to me and threatened to turn me into the street for the paltry sum of $21. She did so ultimately, and the safeguard of American liberty was compelled to sleep with the mice, rats and cockroaches, at the dismal office. What outrageous folly it is to say that industry is always rewarded! In my worn and leaky boots, without an overcoat or any seasonable clothing, I often tramped, paste-pot in hand, through the snow, slush, fog and rain of drear November nights, to cover the walls of B—— with immense posters, urging everybody to read The Afternoon. I did not shrink from my duty, although I lived on little more than hope and air. My meals were eaten in underground restaurants, my clothes were threadbare and patched, and all this time I was editor, proprietor and publisher of a daily paper in one of the most intelligent cities of the country. This is a true story in the substance, and I know of no stranger life than it feebly illustrates.

Until January The Afternoon continued to gain a little almost every day, and as I expended all the money realized in improving its appearance and contents, my bodily wants were left unsupplied. I dreamed of events that would bring the sheet into popularity, and one day it seemed that my perseverance was to be rewarded. An overdressed character came into the office and explained that he had held office in the sealing wax bureau, and had been removed without just cause. He craved revenge, and produced a number of documents purporting to prove the theft of $20,000,000 from the department. Would I publish them? After an examination, I saw that they would stir the whole city; and that I might as well engage several additional editors and compositors, and enlarge the paper without delay. I thought better of this resolution, and simply published a sensational article, eight columns in length, which I wrote between 5 P. M. and 4 A. M. Once more I went out into the streets disguised and sold the paper myself. That afternoon 7000 copies were disposed of, chiefly among the best classes, and on the following day large newsdealers, who had disdained The Afternoon heretofore, sent in extensive orders. The rippling, effervescing cup of success was within an inch of my lips, when ill-fate dashed it aside. I was arrested for libel in the midst of my duties, and thrown into jail by the court. My contemporaries, envious of the lead I had taken in the news, said no word in my defense. I was tried and sentenced to pay a fine, for which the sheriff seized and sold all the material of The Afternoon. Subsequently, one of the wealthy and influential journals of the city revamped my sensation, and made a feature of it from day to day, until its circulation nearly doubled.

I soon obtained employment in another city, and am now a family man. My calling is night editor of the Morning Mercury. The drudgery falls roughly on a fellow of talent and spirit, but thank Heaven, it gives us bread and butter and a home.

News and Notes.

The Freshman race at Saratoga, Tuesday, was a close one. Time, Cornell 17 32 1-4, Harvard 17 37, Brown 17 39 1-4, Princeton 17 49 1-4. Harvard lost the race by half a length, one of the crew giving out. The winning boat was made of paper.

Daniel Dunn kicked his wife to death at Lowell on Tuesday for refusing him money. She leaves five children.

Joseph Pidge, of Dighton, Mass., was shot twice by a tramp, Tuesday morning, who called him and demanded money. The first ball entered the groin, the second the body. The assassin escaped. His age is about 20. Pidge lives three miles from Dighton, on the Providence road. He refused to give the tramp any money, and he drew a pistol and pointed it at his breast. Pidge knocked the pistol down and the ball entered the groin. The tramp fired again and hit the body and ran away.

Paul Boyton has rescued sixty-one persons from drowning.

It is stated that a house was recently set on fire at Benson, R. I., by reflection of the sun's rays from a milk-pan.

A despatch from Raleigh, N. C., states that Scott Partin, a white man, cut his wife's throat, murdered his boy eight months old, cut their heads off, unjointed every bone, and cut off all the flesh from their bodies. He then buried the pieces in a marsh, where they were found. Partin was probably assisted by his father and brother. Lynch law is threatened if they are caught.

There was a special ordination at St. Paul's Episcopal church, Concord, on the 12th, by Right Rev. Bishop Niles, D. D., one of the candidates being Mr. Howard F. Hill, son of John M. Hill, Esq., of Concord. The church was beautifully decorated with flowers, and the font was filled with a pyramid of white lilies, the altar, desk and pulpit being ornamented with rich bouquets. Mr. Hill is to minister in St. Mark's church at Ashland, and in his new profession has the earnest sympathy and best wishes of a host of friends, among whom are his former associates of the New Hampshire Press, who esteem him as a talented gentleman, valued acquaintance and conscientious companion. He graduated at Dartmouth in 1867, receiving the degree of Master of Arts. Later he became one of the editors of the Patriot, and his intimate connection with the Press Association as its efficient and courteous corresponding secretary has been a pleasant experience to all with whom he has come in contact. Mr. Hill's abilities will soon place him in the front rank of the profession he has chosen, and his faithfulness and rare discernment will bring to his aid the warmest of friendships and the most appreciative affection that a people can extend to a pastor who ministers with a self-sacrificing spirit to the best interests of church and society.

Sharkey is still in jail at Havana and has refused to accept his release therefrom by the Spanish authorities on condition that he would leave the island.

A most wicked murder was committed near Canton, in Van Zandt county, a few days ago by two negroes, Boyd and Sims. The victim, a colored man by the name of Cooper, was an industrious, intelligent and sober man, who stood well with the people and had many friends. Cooper, Sims, and Boyd went out coon hunting together; the two latter returned alone, and the continued absence of Cooper created some suspicion, whereupon a search was made, and his body discovered in a dry well a mile and a half from the scene of the murder. The whole comunity, whites and negroes, united in the search for the murderers. Sims and Boyd were arrested, and confessed the crime. It seems that the two murderers killed him with an axe, concealed his body in the brush, and went at night and stole the victim's mule, tied his body upon it and conveyed it to the well and threw it in. The only reason that they could give for the murder was that Cooper was a conjurer, and had threatened to conjure them. Very few realize the hold that these superstitions have on the minds of the negroes and the half-civilized Indians. Possibly Cooper, being a smart negro, was playing upon their fears, and thus caused his own death.

At the New Hampshire and New England Fair in September there will be an exhibition of dogs, including all the improved varieties, for which several hundred dollars in premiums are offered. There are dogs in this State valued at $300, one of which is mortgaged for $150. The Fish Commissioners of the State have been consulted with reference to a grand piscatorial exhibition. The arrangements are not yet perfected, but it is proposed to show specimens of trout in various stages of development from the egg to four pounds in weight.

If Mrs. Beecher should die and Theodore commit suicide——

A recent visitor to Mrs. Abraham Lincoln at the private retreat for the insane at Batavia, Ill., reports her condition unchanged. The Superintendent evidently did not think the prospects for her ultimate recovery encouraging; she is surrounded with every comfort and visited every week by her son Robert. She is very quiet and would scarcely be considered insane by a casual observer.

Stephen Burbank, a native resident of Contoocookville, committed suicide on the 10th.

Cornell won the University race at Saratoga on Wednesday. Harvard led during the first mile, but came in third with Dartmouth fourth and Yale sixth. The official time was Cornell 16 53 1-4, Columbia 17 04 1-4, Harvard 17 05 3-4, Dartmouth 17 10 3-4, Wesleyan 17 13 3-4, Yale 17 14 3-4, Amherst 17 24 3-4, Brown 17 33 3-4, Williams 17 43 3-4, Bowdoin 17 50 3-4. Then Hamilton, Union and Princeton. In the single-scull race, Kennedy, of Yale, beat Weld of Harvard, 100 feet in 14 06.

3 MARKET ST.

John Morrissey at Saratoga.

[Philadelphia Times.]

Morrissey has no other weakness than getting drunk about twice a year, and then he is amiable as Pontiac or Goliath. All the rest of the year he is a cool, measuring, gain-seeking business man, with the soul of a merchant. He owns nearly two acres of ground here, on which are a large hotel, a pool house for betting on horses, four cottages, a mineral spring, a rock spring, and a trout pond. He has nearly one thousand trout, and he took us out to see them fed. Many of them weigh two pounds. His hotel is a substantial brick edifice, built on piles and planks twenty-four feet under the surface. He took a swamp, piled it, filled it, and made a paradise of it. I asked him how much he had spent here. He said: "I have laid out $340,000. The first piece of ground I bought, fifty feet front, I paid $200 a foot for. I never bought anything in Saratoga at second price. If you reflect on any proposition over night they'll raise on you next morning. I keep a hotel in connection with my club house to be allowed to gamble. I aim with that hotel to pay my servants and to support the table. There are seventy people in my employment here. The cook is paid $400 for the season, and I generally present him with $200 when he goes away. The good servants I reengage for the next year.

The hotel part of Morrissey's establishment bears no relation whatever to his gaming, and the games are neither visible nor the players audible from the dining room. His salle de jouer is a sort of transept to his hotel, one immense room, lighted from the sky, carpeted richly, with a narrow rim of gaming tables around the sides. No citizen of Saratoga is allowed to play, no intoxicated person, no verdant young men. Gambling has its own class. There are some men who game as naturally and as coolly as they do business. Morrissey himself never plays, except with great experts, and men of equal purse and nerve like Ben. Wood or Price McGrath.

Rattan Work.

The rattan manufactory of Mr. David Urch, on Congress street, is one of four in the United States and we are glad to learn that the proprietor is meeting with such success here that ere long probably he will be enabled to enlarge the business extensively. Mr. Urch's original trade was that of a willow-worker, but the importation o rattan from China about fourteen years ago made a change that has caused the rapid introduction into hotels and private residences of furniture and other necessary adjuncts of housekeeping, of rattan work which is light, durable, and always neat. Mr. Urch's experience in willow work enabled him to avail himself of the change wrought by the substitution of rattan, and he turns out some of the finest specimens that either of the four rattan manufactories can boast of, and is prepared to manufacture to order anything in that line of goods which the fancy of the housewife may dictate.

A brief call at the salesroom over Freeman's oyster house will repay the visitor. There are inviting tete-a-tetes, reclining or smoking chairs, ladies' sewing rockers, children's, rustic, dining, office, easy, German reception, boudoir, German, Vienna, Berlin and French chairs; trellises, work and music stands, foot rests, wall pockets, settees and sofas; lounges, couches, whatnots and cribs; and a variety of baskets that would enlist the interest of ladies from the first,—including clothes hampers, laundry, market, clothes, knife, fruit, fancy work and office baskets. Mr. Urch makes furniture of all descriptions, the popular taste just now requiring the material to be of light and dark colors. Furniture made of rattan outlasts the best of stuffed work, moths never trouble it, and its cost is but a trifle if any greater than ordinary wood. Mr. Urch has sold a number of parlor sets in which pieces of light and dark colors form a most attractive contrast. He is now engaged on a buggy to be made entirely of rattan, a most unique specimen of workmanship—and will hereafter manufacture carriage bodies of this material in style to suit the desires of customers.

The Mill Pond Nuisance.

Many persons besides those residing on Pleasant, Court and Middle Streets, must be annoyed by the foul air alluded to by the writer of an article in your paper oi Tuesday.

Will not some one take this matter in hand, (and soon, too) to protect the citizens of Portsmouth from being obliged to inhale such unpleasant and poisonous air, as that which we are so often forced to breathe. Cannot something be done by the city to let us have purer air, especially in very warm warm weather! H. T. I.

Business Notices.

A Double Danger Averted.

The inhabitant of a malarious region is threatened by a double danger. He is not only compelled to breathe miasma, but swallow it, since it infects not only the atmosphere, but the water. The aerial poison threatens his system through the lungs and pores, the liquid through the stomach. Against this double peril there is but one protection, and that is to invigorate the entire body through the digestive and secretive organs. Ordinary tonics usually fail to accomplish this—Hostetter's Stomach Bitters never. In the tropics, where the diseases originated by malaria are of a far more malignant type than those originated by the same cause in the temperate zone, it enjoys immense and constantly increasing sales, and there is no portion of this continent where it is not the reigning specific for miasmatic fevers and disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels, proceeding from malaria and other causes.

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH OF THE CITY OF PORTSMOUTH call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10 of the City Ordinances and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the city to aid them in the execution of their duty.

CHAPTER X.

Sec. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, &c. shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the health officers may direct.

Sec. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

Sec. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten days from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time above specified.

Sec. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offals of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

Sec. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisances shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

Sec. 12. When any householder shall know that any person within his family is taken sick of the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 13. When any physician shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for each refusal or neglect forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the health officers in the name of the city.

Sec. 16. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other thing deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier —the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may, by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

Sec. 21. No person shall erect, keep or continue or permit to be erected, kept or continued, upon any land occupied by him, any pen for the keeping of swine, or privy, over either of the mill ponds in this city, or so placed that offensive substances therefrom shall be discharged or drained into either of said ponds, or into any creek, or cove or drain leading thereto. And no person shall construct, keep or continue any drain leading from any pen for the keeping of any swine, slaughter-house, privy vault, or other unwholesome or offensive place, into either of said ponds, or to any flat or marsh adjoining the same. And no person shall throw or suffer to be thrown from his land into either of said ponds, or upon any of said flats or marshes, any dead, decaying, unwholesome or offensive animal or vegetable substances.

Daily Chronicle.

—A prisoner in Paris lately received a letter containing merely a lock of hair wrapped in the leaf of a small book. The father did not consider the souvenir important enough to be delivered, but a few days after came a similar enclosure, and yet another. This aroused suspicion, and the Governor took the matter in hand. He examined the leaf of the book. It was only that of a common novel, twenty-six lines on a page. Then he studied the hair and noticed the small quantity of the gift. Counting the hairs he found them of unequal length, and twenty-six in number, the same as the lines of the page. Struck with the coincidence, he laid the hairs along the line of the page which they respectively reached, beginning at the top with the smallest hair. After some trouble he found that the end of each hair pointed to a different letter, and that these letters combined formed a slang sentence, which informed the prisoner that his friends were on the watch, and that the next time he left the prison to be examined an attempt would be made to rescue him. The Governor laid his plans accordingly, the attempt at rescue was made, but the rescuers fell into their own trap.

—The people of France now take their bathing houses with them from Paris to the seaside. They are made portable and can be packed in a trunk.

—A bachelor made his will leaving all his property to the girls who had refused him. "For," said he, "to them I owe all my earthly happiness."

—Lydia Smith, who was Thaddeus Stevens' housekeeper, and was given $5,000 by his will, has sued the estate for six years' pay at $200 a month.

—Socialism is on the decline in Germany, the number of its adherents having dwindled in a few years from 340,000 to about 25,000.

—A wag lent a clergyman a horse that ran away and threw him, and then claimed credit for spreading the gospel.

An English Remedy

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS,

For Nervousness and General Debility,

PREMATURE decay, mental and physical prostration, fear, despondency, over indulgence in the use of opium or alcoholic drinks, tobacco, &c., &c. Medicines unrivalled for their wonderful properties and remarkable cures of all Nervous Complaints. Their efficacy is equally great in the treatment and cure of Cancers, Scales, Ulcers, Pustules, Pimples, Tetter, Fever Sores, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Scald-Head, Barbers' Itch, Scurvy, Salt Rheum, Copper Colored Blotches, Glandular Swelling, Worms and Black Spots in the flesh, Discoloration, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth and Nose, Sore Legs, and sores of every character, because the medicines are the very best Blood Medicine ever placed before the people, and are warranted to be the most Powerful Alterative ever originated by man. They impart Strength to the Body and Vigor to the Mind, removing Morbid Sensibility, Depression of Spirits, Dementia and Melancholia.

NERVOUS DEBILITY.

However obscure the causes may be which contribute to render nervous debility a disease so prevalent, affecting as it does, nearly one-half of our adult population, it is a melancholy fact that day by day, and year by year, we witness a most frightful increase of nervous affections from the slightest neuralgia to the more grave and extreme forms of Nervous Prostration.

It is or the highest importance, then, that individuals should be able to judge for themselves, by their own feelings, if and to what extent they are attacked by this insidious enemy to ill health, comfort, and even life itself if left to run its course unchecked by the early and prompt application of curative remedies.

DRUNKENNESS.

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS is the only remedy that has ever proved by practical experience a benefit to those who suffer from over-indulgence in alcoholic liquors; it completely destroys the taste for them, and restores the victim of intemperance to health and vigor. A single trial will prove it to be just what it is recommended to be.

Price $2.50. Large size, $5. Each package of the Cordial Balm contains one box of the Tonic Pills, which may also be had separately at 50 cents per box.

RECENT TESTIMONIALS.

FREWSBURGH, Nov. 12, 1874.

I have used the Cordial Balm and Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills as a preventive and cure for the use of ardent spirits and habitual intoxication, and find them actually specific in such cases. I regard them as most invaluable medicines, and nothing could induce me to be without them.

JACOB MESERVE.

TIPTON, Dec. 8, 1874.

We take great pleasure in informing you of the surprisingly beneficial results from the use of your English Remedy, The Cordial Balm of Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills, in a case of great Nervous Debility and Prostration, by a member of our family who had been under treatment by different doctors for nearly three years past without any apparent benefit therefrom; but your medicines have produced a most wonderful change for the better and the patient now enjoys comparatively excellent health. Miss. HARRIET STURGISS.

P. S.—We tell all with whom we are acquainte who are similarly afflicted to try your medicines.

FACTS PROVEN

BY THE

TEST OF EXPERIENCE.

"BY

THEIR

YE SHALL

Know

THEM."

THE CAUSE OF GOUT.

It proceeds from a deficiency of, or an alteration in the cutaneous, urinary or intestinal secretions. This definition leads us to the solution of a second and not less important question:

HOW TO CURE THE GOUT.

This can only be accomplished by a course of treatment capable of establishing the perspiration, if suppressed, of inducing a proper flow of urine, and of destroying the obstinate constipation when it exists. But it is not sufficient that these three functions act properly as respect quantity, but above all, and before all, their quality must have our attention. Indeed, we have mentioned not only a deficiency but also an alteration of secretion. For the perspiration, the urine, and the evacuations should be not only sufficiently abundant, but should carry off certain principles whose stay would produce the most serious disorders.

This is precisely what we see in the Gout. Does it not often happen that after an attack, the joints become deformed by chalky concretions? These gouty deposits have been analyzed by the Chemists Wallaston, Fornerey, Vanquillin and Barrnell.—Every first-class physician should know their composition, then there would remain to find a means to prevent these salts spreading, and, as it were, condensing of themselves throughout the system. The receipt from which is compounded the will produce this desirable result, because it gives to the products of the body the quantity and quality necessary.

CHRONIC GOUT having been engendered insensibly during a certain lapse of time, time is necessary for its removal. Its elimination must take place atom by atom. It is, therefore, not surprising that patience should be required for a complete cure. We must be careful not to confound the acute with the chronic condition; if the latter, it requires weeks to remove it; in the former, a few doses only are necessary to effect a complete cure.

By persevering a longer or a shorter time, according to the severity of the case, the joints will gradually recover their suppleness, and the nodes will be seen to soften and diminish insensibly. This last is an infallible test of the wonderful properties of the

DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

To this unerring proof we can, by the aid of Chemistry, add another, equally palpable and convincing:

The articular concretions are composed principally of uric acid, waters of ammonia, of soda, and of phosphate of lime. These are precisely the salts which we find in the various excreta, particularly in the urine; so that chemical reagents which showed scarcely a trace of these before taking the DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE, will demonstrate an enormous proportion after its use.

Thus the concretions, the principal components of which analysis has shown can be again reproduced, and will thus furnish the most convincing proof any medicine can offer. This, then, is the most rational plan of proceeding, and which enabled us to answer the question of a certain English M. P., "WHAT HAS BECOME OF MY GOUT?" We told him that "it followed the course of the evacuations," since chemical analysis, as has been said, finds in them all the principles which produce it. Henceforth it is clear that this medicine is and ought to banish not only all ideas of retrogression, but should inspire the most perfect confidence. It cannot be too often repeated, these are no hypotheses, no vain theories, but palpable truths, material, physical facts, confirmed over and over again by twenty-five years' practical experience in the leading hospitals of England and France, as well as by thousands of testimonials held by every one of our agents, freely offered by sufferers restored to sound health and continued use furnished through the means of the world-renowned DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

It is styled as above for the reason that its great efficacy in rheumatic complaints is just as apparent as in gout, and thousands of sufferers in Massachusetts to-day, cured of rheumatism by its use, mention the Proprietor's name with benedictions of praise.

This medicine is for sale at all Druggists throughout the United States and Canada. If it happens that your Druggist has not got it in stock, ask him to send for it to any of the Wholesale Druggists in Boston. Price $1 a bottle.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or Inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not know ing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs

NO. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents.'

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

Portsmouth Chronicle.

Old Time Chronicles, No. 125.

BY UNCLE JOSEPH.

Perhaps no one building in Boston is more generally seen by the multitudes who live there, and those who go to the city than the Old South Church. It stands on Washington street at the corner of Milk street. And Milk street is one of special interest, as in it Dr. Franklin was born. Standing a little South of the church, the locality of the birth place of the sage and phillosopher is seen. The Old South Church building is large, of good architectural proportions, has a lofty spire and has a clock to which many eyes are turned almost constantly, as the throngs hurry to and fro in busy Washington street.

We think a history of the Old South Church as an ecclesiastical organization has been published, but we have not seen it. A few sketches are given as we have them.

But first, the age of the church. It was organized in 1669, so is 206 years old. The land was given by the widow of Rev. John Norton. Mr. Norton was the third pastor of the first, or oldest church in Boston. The present church edifice was erected in 1730, so is 145 years old. In the time of the Revolution it was desecrated by British troops, which for a season were quartered in Boston.

The church has had fourteen pastors, nine of which died while in office over the church. The present pastor is Rev. G. W. Blagden, installed in 1836. We think he has a colleague, and after the building was occupied as a Post Office, the public services were in another place.

While in the Old South Church building at the time of our visit, February, 1874, thought ever active, went backward. On that spot in the first house of worship, Thaxter, the first pastor, gifted in prayer, lifted his glowing desires to heaven. Willard, the next, was profound and reasoned of the deep things of religion. Pemberton followed, displaying the beauty and glory of divine things. Sewall and Prince left a record of their industry and researches worthy of men. This last was the first to occupy the present church building. It is said he taught througing multitudes. Cummings came next in 1761. He shone as a star of the first magnitude, but melted away in the light of heaven, dying after a pastorate of less than three years, at the early age of 36. Others we need not notice, only Rev. Samuel H. Stearns. His father, Rev. Samuel Stearns, was a native of Epping, son of Rev. Josiah Stearns, second minister of that town. Rev. Samuel H. Stearns was born in Bedford, Mass., was ordained over tee Old South in 1834, but obtained a dismission after about two years in consequence of poor health. He went across tee Atlantic and died, we think, in France, in 1837. His remains were brought home and rest in Mount Auburn.

Old South, stand there long. If not occupied for sacred purposes as formerly, stand as a monument of the past. Tell of old times of simplicity, purity, and of divines and men who were strong.

Burning Whiskey in Dublin.

Cor. London Times.

Owing to the inflammable nature of the stores, there was no hope from the first of saving any of the adjoining premises, but fears were entertained that the conflagration would be borne in a resistless flood over the city. The burning liquid streamed out under the doors and through every crevice in the malt-house, and, rushing along the streets, soon found its way into the bonded stores, where, meeting with a congenial element, it became more terrible and spread on every side with ruinous effect. The barrels of spirits, becoming ignited with the rapidity of gunpowder, blazed and burnt up, sending forth new tributaries to swell the fiery tide, which dashed with increasing fury through the streets. The bonded stores were speedily wrapped in flames, which illuminated the sky and signaled the event for miles beyond the city. When the fire brigade arrived, after some little delay, they saw that their engines and appliances for extinguishing ordinary fires were of no avail in such an emergency. To add water to the burning torrent would have been only to render it more widely destructive. As it was, the burning liquid ran down to the sewers, and, meeting with the gases which were confined in them, caused them to burst with explosions, which increased the alarm and danger. A more serious peril arose from the conduct of the populace. The streams of burning whisky, which to most people were appalling, offered to others a temptation which they could not resist. Although the streets were generally well guarded by the military and police, numbers of people got access through narrow lanes and passages unobserved to places where it ran freely along the channels, or formed in pools in the streets, and they resorted to every possible expedient to obtain draughts. Some tried to collect the liquor in their hats, and others in their boots, and failing to satisfy their passionate craving by such means, they lay down across the channels and lapped the intoxicating stream until some became helpless and almost insensible, and were dragged off to hospitals, while others, seized with the same mania, rushed into their places and followed their example. It would be hard to conceive a more shocking exhibition of degrading vice.

Some deeds of bravery were done, which are to be set off against such disgraceful conduct. Numbers of students of the university, and of the medical schools, volunteered to help the authorities in preserving order and working the engines when they could be got into play, and an artilleryman dashed through the flames at the risk of his life and rescued a number of horses out of the stables attached to the malt stores. * * * Two corn-porters, however, named Healy and McNulty, aged respectively 28 and 30, have died in the hospital from the effects of drinking the whisky which flowed in the streets. They were both found in a lane off Cork street on the night of the fire, lying insensible, with their boots off, which they had evidently used to collect the liquor. There are seventeen other persons in the Meath hospital who are suffering from the same cause and it is feared that other deaths will follow.

The University Race.

The Boston Post has a very interesting account of the Saratoga regatta. Betting was largely in favor of Yale, although Cornell, Harvard and Columbia were well backed. There were 20,000 spectators at and near the grand stand. The collegians were collected in full force, and made merry with their friends. Nearly everybody had a field or an opera glass, and not a few were provided with telescopes of formidable proportions. The ladies' toilettes were remarkable only for the ingenuity with which college colors were made to harmonize with tastefulness.

The boats took the positions assigned them as follows, numbering from the western shore: Williams one, Cornell two, Amherst three, Bowdoin four, Brown five, Columbia six, Wesleyan seven, Princeton eight, Dartmouth nine, Yale ten, Hamilton eleven, Harvard twelve, Union thirteen. The course of each was marked by flags placed at intervals of one quarter of a mile, one hundred feet apart. Williams and Union pulled outside the outer line of flags on their respective sides of the lake. There was some delay in getting the boats on an exact line, but finally it was accomplished, and Mr. Gunster, at five minutes past 12, gave the word, "Are you ready?" "Go!" The men were ready for the word, and in an instant the thirteen shells took the water.

Attention at once centered upon Yale and Harvard. Hamilton was between them, but it did not take many strokes for both the blue and crimson to get clear of her and begin the contest in earnest. Both kept their course admirably, and Otis set the Harvards a stroke of forty to the minute. It was the old-time Harvard rate and it immediately began to tell in their favor, for they had not gone a quarter of a mile before they obtained a clear lead over Yale, Cook setting his men at the rate of thirty-six to the minute. The Cornell crew away over next to Williams started off in fine style, pulling at the rate of thirty-three. Amherst went at the rate of thirty-six and at once began a sharp race with Bowdoin and Brown, who were next in order of position. Both the latter seemed to be well together, while Columbia, on the other side of Brown, gave them all they wanted to attend to. Down to the first mile flags Williams' stroke was counted at thirty-four, and for a considerable distance kept on even terms with Cornell. Dartmouth and Wesleyan soon left Princeton in the rear, and after a good spurt for a considerable distance the Methodists succeeded in getting open water between themselves and the New Hampshire boys. The Union crew—the babies, as they have been termed—and the Hamilton six were left in the rear to keep company with Princeton. All the others bent to their work, and before the first mile was completed it became evident that between Cornell, Columbia, Harvard and Yale, it was anybody's race. The scene was lively in the extreme, and twenty glasses were kept upon the leading crew from the press boat. As the mile flag was reached the shout arose, "Harvard's ahead!" and so it proved to be, as she led Cornell a length. Yale was third, and then Bowdoin, Amherst, Columbia, Brown, Wesleyan, Williams and Dartmouth, the others being from two to half a dozen lengths in the rear.

The steering on all sides was excellent, and there did not appear to be the least possible chance for a foul. On the second mile the racing was simply tremendous. Harvard continued to show entirely clear of Yale, although she had gradually slackened her stroke. Cook struggled manfully to lessen the distance, but it was of no avail; the magnificent rowing of Otis and his associates had been too much for him. On the opposite side of the lake Cornell was doing splendid work, and it became evident that she was to prove a dangerous customer on the finish. Columbia too, with the remembrance of her last year's victory in her mind, did good work as she entered upon the second mile. In the meantime there appeared to be trouble in the Princeton shell. She was all at sea, so to speak, and presently stopped rowing, the cause of which was subsequently ascertained to be the sudden illness of one of her crew. As the boats neared the second mile flags Cornell obtained a slight lead over Harvard, with Columbia third and Yale fourth. Then came Amherst and Brown, who had changed places, Wesleyan and Dartmouth, with Williams and Bowdoin, Hamilton and Union.

Otis again called upon the Harvards and they responded to the best of their ability, but the spurt at the start in order to get Yale beaten added to the fact that he held off a trifle too long was fatal to their chances. They, however, with Columbia, Dartmouth, Wesleyan and Yale, prepared for the finish with true grit. Cornell hugged the Western shore, as her Freshmen did the day before, and as Columbia came up into close quarters she let out a little reserve power. The Dartmouth boys came down with a tremendous rush, passing Wesleyan and Yale right before the grand stand. Harvard and Columbia struggled to the last instant, but Cornell beat them a boat's length, Columbia beating Harvard for the second place by a second and a half, the latter less than a boat's length ahead of Dartmouth, with Wesleyan and Yale lapped to her.

At the grand stand, the start of the referee's steamer and the splash of the oars of the contesting crews could be seen three miles away. Suddenly up went the signals that Cornell was ahead at the half-mile. The announcement elicited no demonstration. Still nothing could be seen. A few minutes of intense excitement prevailed, then up went the signal "Harvard ahead at the mile," and the wearers of the crimson shouted wildly. Almost immediately, however, Cornell's figure was pulled up by the side of Harvard's, and a strong murmur ran through the crowd. Then there was a long wait. Some called out that it was time for another signal. The signal man explained that no news had been received from the mile and a half. Almost immediately the signal went up that Harvard maintained the lead at the mile and a half. Just then small specks grew out of the water, from whose sides tiny glints of sunlight flashed, and the excitement found vent in an indescribable roar, followed by shouts of "There they are!" Harvard appeared to be leading, with the others in an oblique line backwards, Cornell, which was nearest shore, seeming to be behind. All were not sure of this, however, and a faint attempt at applause died down into eager silence. The excitement increased every instant. Everybody pressed forward, and there was a general shout of "Sit down" and "Hats off in front." Gradually the specks developed into racing boats, and it was seen for certain that Harvard was leading. "'Rah! 'Rah! 'Rah!" went up on every side, and as if this was the signal for an era of uncontrolled excitement, wild yells and shouts broke out from the assembled multitude! On they came, parting the water like keen-edged scimeters. The crowd on the banks above rose to their feet and raced down the bank cheering and waving hats and canes. As the leading crews neared the line it began to be seen that although Harvard was doing nobly she was third, Cornell occupying the van, closely pressed by Columbia. In this way they crossed the line, and Cornell had won.

The grand stand was emptied instantly and the crowd, delirious with enthusiasm, rushed to the bank to where the victors had paddled their boat. Numbers of Cornellians rushed to the front, and still shouting, threw oranges and apples to the crew. One man ran into the water, and grasping an oar blade, dragged the shell nearer the shore, then six stout collegians grasped the glistening brown-backed oarsmen around their waists, and lifting them upon their shoulders, carried them bodily the whole length of the crowd, who cheered like wild Indians, while women madly waved their handkerchiefs and shouted at the top of their lungs. For a few minutes the scene was indescribable. Finally the triumphant crew were permitted to return to their boat, and the multitude poured over the little bridge in search of their several vehicles. The defeated crews remained on their oars in the lake, but Harvard waited until the victors turned their prow from shore. Then they they greeted them with their "'Rah! 'Rah! 'Rah!" to which Cornell responded with an old fashioned cheer for Harvard. As the two crews started back for Snake Hill they were given a parting cheer, and the last lingerers dispersed.

In less than an hour, the crowd was back in town. The Cornell students hired a band and bore the victors on their shoulders through the street. The enthusiasm which their appearance excited among the immense throngs of people about the hotels was intense. Cheer followed cheer, and a general jollification was indulged in. The students of all the colleges joined in the procession, which proceeded through the hotels and finally halted in front of Congress Hall. Here each college gave the victors a round of rousing cheers which startled the echoes thereof. Columbia led off with their slogan—"C-o-l-u-m-b-i-a." Then came Harvard's familiar "'Rah, 'Rah 'Rah," three times repeated, and so on until all the colleges had thus tendered their congratulations. Then the crowd dispersed and the victors proceeded to partake of a banquet, which their fellow collegians had arranged for them at the United States. The most disappointed men are the Yales. They had considered themselves sure of the front place in the race, and their sporting friends had staked all their money on them. Capt. Cook says that he was fairly and squarely beaten, and has no apologies to offer, having done his best. Capt. Bacon, of Harvard, says that his crew had the front place from the start to the last half-mile, and then Cornell and Columbia passed him. He thinks he could never have beaten Cornell, though he is sure he might have had the second place had not Taylor weakened his stroke. Columbia and Harvard gathered on the steps of the United States and cheered each other alternately. Yale and Harvard buried the hatchet and marched together.

At Ithaca, N. Y. the news of Cornell's victory roused the most intense enthusiasm. The bells and University chimes were rung, bombs and fire crackers were exploded, guns fired, business places and private buildings festooned in the National and University colors, and bands paraded the streets.

Killed His Sister's Husband.

Buffalo, Mo., Independent.

A family quarrel, of nearly six years' standing, in Steuben County, came to a termination on Sunday, June 20, by the killing of one of the parties to it by another, under peculiarly distressing circumstances. Four miles from the village of Troupsburg Centre, in Steuben County, a farmer, highly respected, has lived for many years. He has two children, a son and a daughter, Geo. E. Hendricks, aged twenty-one, and Helen, aged twenty-six. Six years ago Helen, in opposition to the wishes of her family, married a man named Wm. H. Dildine. He was a young man of no little talent and education, but of somewhat questionable character. Helen Hendricks, being an only daughter, was given superior educational advantages, and at the time of her marriage had been a short time from college, where she graduated with high honors. Dildine was a man of splendid physique, and well calculated to win the affections of any lady. The marriage of his daughter was a terrible blow to the old farmer, but he conquered his resentment to her husband, and endeavored to make the best of the situation.

Shortly after their marriage the Dildines removed to Wellsville, Alleghany County, where they lived together until last week. Two children, a boy and a girl, were born to them. Not long after taking up their abode in Wellsville rumors that Dildine was neglecting and abusing his wife reached the Hendricks homestead. These reports finally became so frequent that old Mr. Hendricks went to Wellsville and remonstrated with his son-in-law about his conduct. This led to a bitter quarrel between them, and to Hendricks' taking his daughter and two children, one an infant in arms, back home with him. This was in 1873. Mrs. Dildine remained home a few days, when her husband went to her father's and forced her to return to Wellsville with him.

They continued to live a miserable life together until Saturday last. In the morning of that day a quarrel arose between Dildine and his wife at the breakfast table. He threw a plate at her, striking her on the head and inflicting a bad wound. Not satisfied with that, he knocked her down, and, seizing her by the hair, pounded her head against the floor until she was almost unconscious. He then left the house. After she had recovered sufficiently she arose from the ficor, and writing the following note, also went away, taking her children with her:

"WILL—I will make one more effort to make your home happy. I think this one will be successful. May you be as happy as you deserve to be. HELEN."

Mrs. Dildine went to her father's, reaching there with her children on Saturday evening.

At intervals for the past two years Mr. Hendricks has suffered considerable loss by fires, which have been very plainly of incendiary origin. The first one of these fires destroyed a barn and its contents, a few days after Dildine had taken his wife away from her father in 1873. The last occurred a few weeks ago, and since then George E. Hendricks, the son, procured a navy revolver, and has kept a watch on the premises. Revelations made by Mrs. Dildine on Saturday night, after reaching home, confirmed the suspicions of Mr. Hendricks as to the origin of the fire. Mrs. Dildine said that on the way to Wellsville with her husband in 1873 he was very bitter in his threats against the life and property of her father and brother, and said that he had been arranging with a man to burn her father's barn, and added, with an oath, that "if he didn't do it he knew well who would, and he only wished the whole Hendricks family could be in the building and burn to a crisp." She never informed her relatives of this, for fear her husband would kill her.

Last Sunday afternoon, between five and six o'clock, Dildine drove up to Hendricks house with a horse and buggy. He entered the house, where his wife, her father, mother and brother were assembled.

Failing in his purpose to get the child away, he commenced talking about the children, and said that he was going to take his boy with him "in spite of ——"

The child was playing in the yard when its father drove up, but, upon seeing him, ran into the house and sprang into his mother's lap, where he lay holding to her dress. Dildine seized the child, and, tearing it screaming away from its mother, started rapidly toward his wagon. The mother ran after him, shrieking for her child. George Hendricks, who had maintained silence from the moment his brother-in-law entered the house, sprang from his chair as Dildine left the house, and, drawing his revolver, cried out to him to stop. Dildine paid no attention to young Hendricks, and the latter fired. Dildine kept on toward the wagon, closely followed by his wife. Hendricks fired again, but Dildine neither stopped nor said a word. A third shot was fired. Then Dildine turned about, facing his wife, who had overtaken him at that point. He was deadly pale, and, after trying to take a step forward, fell heavily to the ground. Mrs. Dildine stooped down and took the child from her husband's arms. He looked up and said:

"Helen, do you see your dying husband? Your brother has killed me."

To a question as to whether she could do anything for him he made no reply, and she ran into the house with the child.

Young Hendricks is a leading church member of Troupsburg, and a remarkably devout and pious young man. After seeing that he had fatally wounded his brother-in-law, he took his hand, as he lay on the ground, and asked him:

"Have you any hope in Christ, Will?"

Dildine opened his eyes and said, as vehemently as he was able:

"No—none!"

Nothing further passed between the dying man and any of the family. Young Hendricks walked coolly to and fro by Dildine with his watch in his hand, to get as he said, the exact time of the man's death. He died in eight minutes after he fell.

Coroner M. D. Ellison was informed of the shooting, and held an inquest at Hendricks' house on Monday. Every shot fired by Hendricks had taken effect. One entered the back below the left shoulder blade, passed through the left lung and the heart, lodging in the right lung. Another entered the left hip, and the third lodged in the right leg below the knee. The jury found a verdict according to the above facts, and Hendricks was arrested and taken to Bath yesterday, and lodged in jail to await the action of the grand jury. He says that he believes God will hold him guiltless in doing what he did, as it was done in defense of his sister and her children.

—A deserved lesson for tramps was recently given at Carsonville, Mo. Two men, William Schultz and Charles Morl, after getting quite drunk, stopped at the house of a Mr. Giesseler, a widower at that place, sixty-eight years old, who was standing on his porch; but he knew them but slightly, and did not give them a cordial greeting. Their purpose was to inquire as to work, but they first demanded some wine, and Mr. Giesseler, not being so situated as to refuse them safely gave them a bottle. They drank it and called for more, and when they finished three bottles, the old man ordered them out. Schultz seemed willing to go, but Morl was so drunk as to be ugly, and he refused. The old man then sent his hired man to call Schulenberg, his son-in-law, to his assistance. Schulenberg came, and on being informed of the circumstances again ordered the men out, when he was set upon by Morl, who knocked him down, choked him and scratched his face. The hired man pulled him off, and as soon as Schulenberg regained his feet he told the drunken men that if they did not go away he would shoot them, at the same time going into the house and getting a gun. Schultz and Morl now went out into the road. Schulenberg said he did not wan to shoot them, but only wanted to scare the fellows. They evidently heard this, for Morl came back, and going toward Schulenberg used vile epithets and told him to shoot. Schulenberg, in a confused way, threw away the gun, and the little crowd scattered. Schulenburg then went down the yard, picked up a singletree, threw that away, and then picked up a hoe near the garden gate. As Morl advanced upon him, he struck him a blow on the side of the head with the heavy end of the hoe, knocking him down and killing him almost instantly.

High School Exhibition.

The annual exhibition of the High School is looked forward to with pleasurable anticipations, not only by the young ladies and gentlemen who participate in it, but by former pupils and by all citizens who are interested in the cause of education. Great preparations have been made for the exhibition of '75 and no pains have been spared to make it at least as good as any of the preceding ones. The day was a charming one; a cool breeze tempered the heat, and nothing was lacking to make the occasion pass off pleasantly.

The doors opened at two, and the well-dressed crowd of ladies and gentlemen hurried into the large upper school room, which was tastefully dressed for the occasion with beautiful bouquets. The blackboards were adorned with crayon sketches by the pupils.

The following was the order of exercises:

PIANO SOLO, "In der Schmelde," Jungmann, Miss Neil.

"Greeting Glee."

1. SALUTATORY, "The Necessity and Dignity of Labor," FRANK H. THOMPSON.
2. ESSAY, "My New Friends," MISS EMMA G. HALL.
3. RECITATION, "Sandalphon," MISS CARA G. NEIL.
4. ESSAY, "The Six Days of Creation," J. WARREN DAVIS.

CHORUS, "My Bark is Bounding to the Gale," Mendelssohn.

5. ESSAY, "June-Day," MISS JOSIE F. PRESCOTT.
6. DECLAMATION, "Taste for Reading," WALLACE A. S. HOLBROOK.
7. ESSAY, "School Life," MISS ELEANOR G. HANSCOM.

SONG, "Light of my Soul," Lupas.

MISS LIZZIE M. VARRELL.

8. ESSAY, "Lilies," MISS NELLIE E. RAND.
9. ORATION, "The Benefits of a Liberal Education to the Man of Business," J. WARREN DAVIS.
10. ESSAY, "Sacred Art," MISS MARY E. STEWART.

SEMI-CHORUS, "The Hunter's Song," Kucken.

11. ESSAY, "My Garden," MISS MARIA L. FULLER.
12. ESSAY, "A Leaf from the Life of a School Girl," MISS CARRIE H. HAWKINS.
13. DIALOGUE, "Portsmouth in 1900," FOURTH CLASS OF YOUNG GENTLEMEN.

DUET, "On to the Field of Glory," Donizetti.

MASTERS OWEN.

14. DECLAMATION, "Personal Influence," HARRY S. HOLMES.
15. RECITATION, "The Pipes at Lucknow," MISS JOSIE F. PRESCOTT.
16. ORATION, "A Hundred Years of Liberty," FRANK H. GREENOUGH.
17. FRENCH RECITATION, A Scene from Esther, FOURTH CLASS OF YOUNG LADIES.
18. ESSAY, "The Castle, a Symbol of Strength," OLIVER H. HAM.

SEMI-CHORUS, "The Harvest Field," Mendelssohn.

19. ESSAY, "Blessed are the Horny Hands of Toil." MISS KATIE J. MORRISSEY.
20. ESSAY, "The Girls," MISS CARRIE C. MCINTIRE.

DUET, "From our Merry Swiss Home," Glover.

MISSES PRESCOTT AND HAWKINS.

21. VALEDICTORY, "Je marche lentement, mais je marche," MISS CARA G. NEIL.

"Parting Song."

AWARD OF MEDALS.

PRESENTATION OF DIPLOMAS.

The exercises were opened by a piano forte solo very finely performed by Miss Neil, one of the graduating class. We were very glad to observe that this young lady, the Valedictorian of the class, had the courage to dress in a very tasteful cambric, and thus inaugurate a custom which we hope next year will be followed by all the young ladies of the graduating class. A school exhibition is not the place for a display of fashionable costumes, and we would like to see our High School take the initiative in establishing a plain style of dress on such occasions.

A glee by the whole school followed the opening solo, and then Master Frank H. Thompson stepped forward and delivered the Salutatory, which was well written and finely delivered. Essays, songs, and recitations then followed each other in quick succession, all of which were interesting, and were attentively listened to by the audience. At such a time as this comparison is out of place, for all the essays and recitations were carefully prepared and well delivered. A few, however, were especially noticeable:

The essay, "June-Day," was a sprightly account of the June-Day picnic of the school, and was very amusing and interesting. The oration of Master Davis on the "Benefits of a Liberal Education to the Man in Business" was short but practical, and the essay, "A Leaf from the Life of a School Girl," very lifelike and natural. No. 13, "Portsmouth in 1900," a dialogue by the young gentlemen of the 4th class, was very amusing, and the panorama, depicting the wonderful progress made by our city in twenty-five years, especially good, and a truly wonderful work of art! But are not the young gentlemen rather sanguine, to imagine that in the short space of twenty-five years, we shall have our Park?

After this dialogue, a brief intermission was allowed, and then the exercises were resumed. The oration "A Hundred Years of Liberty," by Master Greenough, must not be passed over, for it was especially appropriate in this centennial year. It was a brief synopsis of the advance our country has made since its first birthday, and its future outlook.

The French dialogue by the the young ladies of the fourth class showed an enviable proficiency in that beautiful language.

The essay by Miss Morrissey deserves especial mention, for it was a very well written production, and showed much information, and was full full of thought.

The programme was very long, and though some parts were omitted, the afternoon was far advanced, when Miss Neil, the Valedictorian, took her place upon the floor. Her subject was "Je marche lentement, mais je marche," translated, "I advance slowly, but I advance," and was well elaborated. Robert Fulton, James Watt and others were given as instances of those who have helped on the slow progress of events. The parting song was then sung, and then the Haven medals were awarded to the following pupils:

SECOND YEAR.

For General Improvement, 1st to Ida F. Blaisdell; the 2d medal drawn for by Misses Flora Dow and Lizzie Flagg. The young gentlemen: 1st, Arthur E. Gage; the 2d, drawn for by Herman Emery and Samuel Foss. William Grace received a prize on account of excellence of deportment.

THIRD YEAR.

Book keeping and mathematics; Emma Johnson and Albert Baker; English Composition, Edward Hall; Diligent application, Lizzie C. Meloon; 2d, drawn for by Clara French and Edith Tripp—W. C. Benedict.

FOURTH YEAR.

Best scholar in English Composition, Emma G. Hall; Diligent application, and general improvement, C. G. Nell, Nellie Rand, Josie Prescott and Katie Morrissey. Young gentlemen, highest ranks in scholarship, Frank Thompson; mathematics and deportment during the four years, O. H. Ham; the best scholar in Latin, writing, and for not having been absent during the four years, J. Warren Davis.

Mr. Hatch then presented the diplomas to the class of sixteen, and made a brief address to them and the exercises were ended, and the crowd turned homeward, well pleased with the afternoon's exhibition, and feeling that the teachers had done their work thoroughly and well.

We have omitted to mention the prize essay by Miss Emma G. Hall, which was a very fine one, the young lady taking for her subject "My New Friends," and referring to Coleridge, Longfellow and other poets, with examples of their various styles.

Miss Mary E. Stewart has not been absent, tardy or dismissed during the four years' course altho' living nearly a mile and a half from the school. A public mention of this fact was unintentionally omitted by the Committee.

Jottings.

Mr. Sargent, formerly of South Boston, who was recently transferred to duty as Storekeeper in Ward's distillery in this city, was drowned near the Wentworth House on Thursday evening while mooring his boat. His body was recovered and taken to the Wentworth, where he had been boarding with his family,—and Coroner Rider was sent for.

The steeple of the Temple was taken down on Thursday by Messrs. Luther E. Martin, John W. Stavers and Daniel W. Adams.

The opening hop at "The Wentworth," Wednesday evening, was a most successful affair, although the party was small, numbering some twenty-five couples. The ladies were elegantly dressed and the gentlemen and supper au fait.

The assessors meet this evening at 7 1-2 o'clock, at the City Rooms.

Robert Clarke & Co., of Cincinnati, have issued a pamphlet edition of George Roy's writings, "The Art of Pleasing," and "The Old, Old Story," which may be ordered of any bookseller at twenty-five cents per copy.

—The Cincinnati Gazette gets off the following good one: "Visitors from the country should be a little careful how they post letters in fire boxes. Henry Clark came to town a few days ago from Brown County, and spent last Sunday in the vicinity of South Camp Washington. He wanted to post a letter, and not being very well up in city ways, took fire alarm box No. 283 for a letter box. As he approached it, he could read the words, 'Key to be found at the saloon.' He applied to the saloon keeper, who produced the key in great haste, supposing there was a fire. Returning to the box, the Brown County man opened it and saw within what was apparently an inner door with a handle to it, and the words, 'Pull down the hook and then let go.' Thinking this letter would not be safe unless he deposited it in the innermost place, he pulled down the hook and then let go. Presently there was a commotion, and while Mr. Clark was studying out some better way of getting into the interior, two or three engines came tearing up to the place in search of the fire. The cause of the alarm was traced to the unfortunate man from Brown County, and he was arrested for turning in a false alarm. The next day he was arraigned in the Police Court, fined $1 and cost, and went away a sadder and wiser man."

—The intelligent juryman has removed to Cincinnati. This is his latest, as vouched for by the Gazette: "We, the jury, find that the said Louis Fillman came to his death by a shot accidentally went off by himself by killing a cat by shooting the same and when she was not dead instantly by striking the cat with the breach of the gun and the load discharged itself."

—Holding the hand of the very sick and the dying is a comfort unspeakable to them, and if you are holding it and the spirit is passing away, do not release the grasp until the poor heart is at rest, for it gives the feeling of company, of sympathy, of help.—Dr. W. W. Hall.

—Why should there be no hell in France? Because it would be unfair.

Business Notices.

A Double Danger Averted.

The inhabitant of a malarious region is threatened by a double danger. He is not only compelled to breathe miasma, but swallow it, since it infects not only the atmosphere, but the water. The aerial poison threatens his system through the lungs and pores, the liquid through the stomach. Against this double peril there is but one protection, and that is to invigorate the entire body through the digestive and secretive organs. Ordinary tonics usually fail to accomplish this—Hostetter's Stomach Bitters never. In the tropics, where the diseases originated by malaria are of a far more malignant type than those originated by the same cause in the temperate zone, it enjoys immense and constantly increasing sales, and there is no portion of this continent where it is not the reigning specific for miasmatic fevers and disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels, proceeding from malaria and other causes.

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH OF THE CITY OF PORTSMOUTH call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10 of the City Ordinances and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the city to aid them in the execution of their duty.

CHAPTER X.

Sec. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, &c. shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the health officers may direct.

Sec. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

Sec. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten days from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time above specified.

Sec. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offals of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, upon any wharf, but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

Sec. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owner or occupier of the premises where such nuisances shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

Sec. 12. When any householder shall know that any person within his family is taken sick of the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 13. When any physician shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for each refusal or neglect forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the health officers in the name of the city.

Sec. 16. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other thing deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier—the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may, by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

Sec. 21. No person shall erect, keep or continue or permit to be erected, kept or continued, upon any land occupied by him, any pen for the keeping of swine, or privy, over either of the mill ponds in this city, or so placed that offensive substances therefrom shall be discharged or drained into either of said ponds, or into any creek, or cove or drain leading thereto. And no person shall construct, keep or continue any drain leading from any pen for the keeping of any swine, slaughter-house, privy vault, or other unwholesome or offensive place, into either of said ponds, or to any flat or marsh adjoining the same. And no person shall throw or suffer to be thrown from his land into either of said ponds, or upon any of said flats or marshes, any dead, decaying, unwholesome or offensive animal or vegetable substances.

Exhausting Old Billy.

[Louisville Courier-Journal, Dem.]

They had only to decorate him with a few rosettes, trot him out before the grand stand let him prance a bit, and then lead him back o his stable at Columbus. They possessed in him a Lexington, rejuvenated sufficiently to show well; not equal to violent exercise. They are putting him up to this, and they are making a wretched mistake. It is a good turfman's, as well as a good farmer's rule, not to sweat the horses before breakfast They are sweating Governor Allen sorely. They are trying to put him through paces which are by no manner of means his own; and if they are not careful, they will find before his day is half over that they have exhausted his wind.

PREMATURE decay, mental and physical prostration, fear, despondency, over indulgence in the use of opium or alcoholic drinks, tobacco, &c., &c. Medicines unrivalled for their wonderful properties and remarkable cures of all Nervous Complaints. Their efficacy is equally great in the treatment and cure of Cancers, Nodes, Ulcers, Pustules, Pimples, Tetter, Fever Sores, Ringworm, Erysipelas, Scald-Head, Barbers' Itch, Scurvy, Salt Rheum, Copper Colored Blotches, Glandular Swelling, Worms and Black Spots in the flesh, Discoloration, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth and Nose, Sore Legs, and sores of every character, because the medicines are the very best Blood Medicine ever placed before the people, and are warranted to be the most Powerful Alterative ever discovered by man, they impart Strength to the Body and Vigor to the Mind, removing Morbid Sensibility, Depression of Spirits, Dementia and Melancholia.

NERVOUS DEBILITY.

However obscure the causes may be which contribute to render nervous debility a disease so prevalent, affecting as it does, nearly one-half of our adult population, it is a melancholy fact that day by day, and year by year, we witness a most frightful increase of nervous affections from the slightest neuralgia to the more grave and extreme forms of Nervous Prostration.

It is of the highest importance, then, that individuals should be able to judge for themselves, by their own feelings, if and to what extent they are attacked by this insidious enemy to all health, comfort, and even life itself if left to run its course unchecked by the early and prompt application of curative remedies.

DRUNKENNESS.

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS is the only remedy that has ever proved by practical experience a benefit to those who suffer from over-indulgence in alcoholic liquors; it completely destroys the taste for them, and restores the victim of intemperance to health and vigor. A single trial will prove it to be just what it is recommended to be.

Price $2.50. Large size, $5. Each package of the Cordial Balm contains one box of the Tonic Pills, which may also be had separately at 50 cents per box.

RECENT TESTIMONIALS.

FREWSBURGH, Nov. 12, 1874.

I have used the Cordial Balm and Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills as a preventive and cure for the use of ardent spirits and habitual intoxication, and find them actually specific in such cases. I regard them as most invaluable medicines, and nothing could induce me to be without them.

JACOB MESERVE.

TIPTON, Dec. 3, 1874.

We take great pleasure in informing you of the surprisingly beneficial results from the use of your English Remedy, The Cordial Balm of Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills, in a case of great Nervous Debility and Prostration, by a member of our family who had been under treatment by different doctors for nearly three years past without any apparent benefit therefrom; but your medicines have produced a most wonderful change for the better and the past few days comparatively excellent health. MRS. HARRIET STURGISS.

P. S.—We tell all with whom we are acquainte who are similarly afflicted to try your medicines.

PULMOCINE

BY THE

TEST OF EXPERIENCE.

THE CAUSE OF GOUT.

It proceeds from a deficiency of, or an alteration in the cutaneous, urinary or intestinal secretions. This definition leads us to the solution of a second and not less important question:

HOW TO CURE THE GOUT.

This can only be accomplished by a course of treatment capable of establishing the perspiration, if suppressed, of inducing a proper flow of urine, and of destroying the obstinate constipation when it exists. But it is not sufficient that these functions act properly as respect quantity, but above all, and before all, their quality must have our attention. Indeed, we have mentioned not only a deficiency but also an alteration of secretion. For the perspiration, the urine, and the evacuations should be not only sufficiently abundant, but should carry off certain principles whose stay would produce the most serious disorders.

This is precisely what we see in the Gout. Does it not often happen that after an attack, the joints become deformed by chalky concretions? These gouty deposits have been analyzed by the Chemists Wallaston, Fornercy, Vanquillin and Barrnell.—Every first-class physician should know their composition, then there would remain to find a means to prevent these salts spreading, and, as it were, condensing of themselves throughout the system. The receipt from which is compounded the will produce this desirable result, because it gives to the products of the body the quantity and quality necessary.

CHRONIC GOUT having been engendered insensibly during a certain lapse of time, time is necessary for its removal. Its elimination must take place atom by atom. It is, therefore, not surprising that patience should be required for a complete cure. We must be careful not to confound the acute with the chronic condition; if the latter, it requires weeks to remove it; in the former, a few doses only are necessary to effect a complete cure.

By persevering a longer or a shorter time, according to the severity of the case, the joints will gradually recover their suppleness, and the nodes will be seen to soften and diminish insensibly. This last is an infallible test of the wonderful properties of the

DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

To this unerring proof we can, by the aid of Chemistry, add another, equally palpable and convincing:

The articular concretions are composed principally of uric acid, waters of ammonia, of soda, and of phosphate of lime. These are precisely the same which we find in the various excreta, particularly in the urine; so that chemical reagents which showed scarcely a trace of these before taking the DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE, will demonstrate an enormous proportion after its use.

Thus the concretions, the principal components of which analysis has shown can be again reproduced, and will thus furnish the most convincing proof any medicine can offer. This, then, is the most rational plan of proceeding, and which enabled us to answer the question of a certain English M. P., "WHAT HAS BECOME OF MY GOUT?" We told him that "it followed the course of the evacuations," since chemical analysis, as has been said, finds in them all the principles which produce it. Henceforth it is clear that this medicine is and ought to banish not only all ideas of retrogressions, but should inspire the most perfect confidence. It cannot be too often repeated, these are no hypotheses, no vain theories, but palpable truths, material, physical facts, confirmed over and over again by twenty-five years' practical experience in the leading hospitals of England and France, as well as by thousands of testimonials held by every one of our agents, freely offered by sufferers restored to sound health and continued use furnished through the means of the world-renowned DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

It is styled as above for the reason that its great efficacy in rheumatic complaints is just as apparent as in gout, and thousands of sufferers in Massachusetts to-day, cured of rheumatism by its use, mention the Proprietor's name with benedictions of praise.

This medicine is for sale at all Druggists throughout the United States and Canada. If it happens that your Druggist has not got it in stock, ask him to send for it to any of the Wholesale Druggists in Boston. Price $1 a bottle.

BOOK AGENTS wanted to sell "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser." It is the cheapest book ever published; 293 pages, over 250 illustrations, $1.50. Thousands buy it at sight, who could not be induced to purchase the high-priced books treating of Domestic Medicine. Unlike other books sold through agents this work is thoroughly advertised throughout North America. This fact, together with the large size, elegant appearance, and many new features of the book, causes it to sell more rapidly than any work ever published in this country. Those of my agents who have had experience in selling books, say that in all their previous canvassing they never met with such success or made so large wages, as since commencing the sale of my work. Pulmocine Cordial.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or Inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

—USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs!

NO. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

The House That Bowen Built.

[W. A. Croffut in N. Y. Graphic.]

I.

PLYMOUTH CHURCH.—This is the house that Bowen built.

II.

GRACE, MERCY AND PEACE.—This is the meal that lay in the house that Bowen built.

III.

PAROXYSMAL KISS.—This is the mouse that hid in the meal that lay in the house that Bowen built.

IV.

GOSSIP.—This is the cat that hunted the mouse that hid in the meal that lay in the house that Bowen built.

V.

DISSIMULATION.—This is the dog that worried the cat that hunted the mouse that hid in the meal that lay in the house that Bowen built.

VI.

VICKY.—This is the cow with crumpled heel that kicked till the dog was aus ge spiel that worried the cat that hunted the mouse that hid in the meal that lay in the house that Bowen built.

VII.

SIR MARMADUKE.—This is the swain all tattered and torn who soothed the cow with crumpled heel that kicked till the dog was aus ge spiel that worried the cat that hunted the mouse that hid in the meal that lay in the house that Bowen built.

VIII.

ELIZABETH.—This is the maiden all forlorn, who jilted the man all tattered and torn, who carried the cow with the angry heel, that kicked till the dog was aus ge spiel that worried the cat, that hunted the mouse, that hid in the meal that lay in the house that Bowen built.

IX.

H. W.—This is the priest all shaven and shorn, who almost wished he had not been born, when he kissed the maiden all forlorn, who jilted the swain all tattered and torn, who coaxed the cow with the lively heel, that kicked till the dog was aus ge spiel, that worried the cat, that hunted the mouse, that hid in the meal, that lay in the house that Bowen built.

X.

MRS. MOULTON.—This is the "Slice of Judgment Day," whose "downright truthfulness" carried dismay to the naughty priest in "the cave of gloom," who "sat on the ragged edge of his doom," when he kissed the maiden all forlorn, who jilted the man all tattered and torn, who soothed the cow with the angry heel, that kicked the dog was aus ge spiel, that worried the cat, that hunted the mouse, that hid in the meal, that lay in the house that Bowen built.

XI.

"MY DEAR VON MOLTKE."—This is the name of the Mutual Friend, who carried the secrecy through to the end, for the sly old priest in the cave of gloom, who kept a dangerous cup in his room, when he kissed the maiden all forlorn, who jilted the man all worried and worn, who coaxed the cow with the versatile heel that kicked till the dog was aus ge spiel, that teased the cat that hunted the mouse that hid in the meal that lay in the house that Bowen built.

XII.

MRS. MORSE.—This is the typical mother-in-law with the terrible tongue and a flexible jaw, the eager eye and avenging claw, who told of all she heard or saw, who indulged in various comments aloud, and made it sultry for all the crowd—for the Mutual Friend who dared to refuse to let her get at his budget of news; for the priest, who, caught in what he had done, said, "Mother, I wish you would call me son;" for the desolate daughter, all forlorn, who jilted T. T. (Tattered and Torn,) who carried the cow with the frisky heel that kicked until the dog was aus ge spiel, that worried the cat that hunted the mouse that hid in the meal that lay in the house that Bowen built.

XIII.

THE GRAPHIC.—This is the cock that will crow in the morn when Justice blows her delinquent horn, commanding all to acknowledge the corn; for the mother-in-law with the lingual thorn; for the Mutual Friend with his lofty scorn; for the Slice of the Day of Judgment, born to comfort and scare and guide and warn; for Bessie, who, as she was sworn, by Marmaduke from her bed was torn, and unto his screaming and sleeping borne; for the social priest all shaven and shorn, who kissed the maiden all forlorn, who jilted the man all worried and worn, who soothed the cow with the limber heel, that kicked till the dog was aus ge spiel, that worried the cat that hunted the mouse, that hid in the meal, that lay in the house that Bowen built.

—They have a singular kind of a dance conducted on the greens of country villages in Russia. The dancers stand apart, a knot of young men here, a knot of maidens there, each sex by itself, and silent as a crowd of mutes. A piper breaks into a tune, a youth pulls off his cap and challenges his girl with a wave and a bow. If the girl is willing, she waves her handkerchief in token of assent, the youth advances, takes a corner of the handkerchief in his hand, and leads his lassie round and round. No word is spoken and no laugh is heard. Stiff with cords and rich with braids, the girl moves heavily by herself, going round and round, and never allowing her partner to touch her hand. The pipe goes droning on for hours in the same sad key and measure; and the prize of merit in this "circling," as the dance is called, is given by the spectators to the lassie who, in all that summer revelry, has never spoken and never smiled.

Daily Chronicle.

SATURDAY, JULY 17, 1875.

News and Notes.

It is lamentable to reflect how the members of both parties in the legislature sat down on Mellows of Newmarket, who was continually rooting around among the bills offered in the House, and turning them over in his mind, digesting them in his thoughts, and letting his convictions abstractedly wander forth into syllabic utterances, that were delivered with an air of abstruse familiarity that would have moved the feelings of an Egyptian mummy, and caused the Sphinx to change its base and establish like Pope its headquarters in the saddle. The word-famine that set in during the last week of the session deprived the members of much mellow eloquence from this source.

We would fain enter the Boston Herald's primer class in finance. There seems to be no doubt that rag money is plenty. There is likewise no doubt that it is a result of the rebellion. There is no doubt also that the democracy of the Buchanan, Breckenridge, Yaney, Toombs, Floyd, Davis type, a controlling majority of the 1860 party, are directly responsible for the rebellion. No democracy, no rebellion; no rebellion, rag money; no rag money, no "Rise up, William Allen." See, Herald?

The Hartford Courier says; Two little children were playing in the back yard of a dwelling house on Seymour street, when one of them fell through the rotten planking of a privy vault and was completely lost to the sight of the companion, who immediately gave an alarm, and a woman within distance plunged into the vault and got the child out just in time to save its life, though it was strangled and almost past resuscitation. The act of the woman is specially commendable. She only had the word of the child that its companion had fallen in, as nothing could be seen, and the child rescued was of no concern to her beyond the fact that she knew it had a mother, and she was a mother herself.

Miss Mary Scruton has been appointed Postmistress at Farmington, in place of A. J. Scruton, deceased.

A house belonging to James Carter, of North Conway, was burned recently from the breaking of a kerosene lamp. Loss $1000. No insurance.

Dr. J. P. Bancroft, superintendent at the Insane Asylum, Concord, is to spend a year in Europe.

Henry Glidden, thirteen years old, was drowned in Smith's lake, Wolfeboro', on the 11th. Fred Delano was drowned by the sinking of a dory in Lake Winnipesaukee on the 14th.

An ice-house at North Weare, belonging to Page & Gove, was struck by lightning and burned on the 13th. Loss $2000.

Gen. Sherman says: Frank Blair was a noble, generous, honest man. He was brave, frank, sincere and unselfish. His virtues will live forever, because they reflected good upon others, while his faults will be buried with him because they harmed no one but himself."

A little six-year-old son of Mr. Ober fell under the wheels of a loaded team which he was driving at Andover Centre, and was instantly killed.

On the 10th, as the noon passenger train on the Boston & Maine was nearing Biddeford, a man and woman were seen lying on the track. The whistle was sounded and the train slackened. The man aroused up enough to attempt to pull the woman off the rails, but some one on the train had to assist them. They were both drunk. Another woman was beside the track curled up.

A son of Charles Hesseltcn, five years old, has died at Wilton from the effects of the bite of a cat, received a few days since while he was trying to part the cat and dog, who were fighting at a neighbor's house.

The report again comes from Salt Lake City, that John D. Lee, who has been under arrest for so long a time, has consented to give evidence for the State in the matter of the Mountain Meadow massacre. This evidence, it is asserted, will convict high Mormon authorities of complicity in one of the most bloody and shameful transactions of which modern history carries the record.

Justice William L. Foster of the Circuit Court was shot in the right arm at Merrimack station on the Concord Railroad, while sitting in a car. The injury was slight. It is thought a tramp did it in revenge for being put off a train during the day.

Seven Times Married.

On the 30th ult. Benjamin Abbott and Mrs. Mary Pratt were wedded at Smyrna, Del. This is the seventh time the bride has been led to the altar, and the Smyrna Times prints some interesting gossip concerning her past life. The contracting parties to these nuptials, it says, are well up the ascending grade of eighty years. The groom is a quiet, unassuming old man, a widower, with means enough (particularly if combined with her income) to meet his not very numerous wants. The bride was the relict of the late ex-Sheriff Henry Pratt of Kent county, who was the last anti-democratic Sheriff who has filled that office in that county. He was elected Sheriff in 1844 by the whigs. His descendants, children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, at the time of his marriage numbered over 156, and yet he had never then had but one death in his family—his first wife. Mrs. Abbott's names have been eight in all—Miss Williams, Mrs. Truax, Mrs. Farrow, Mrs. Riggs, Mrs. Wallace, Mrs. Berry, Mrs. Pratt, and now Mrs. Abbott.

"In every instance," says the Times, "save the first she has married a widower, some of them with a goodly number of children. She, however, has never sustained the maternal relation by consanguinity. She was reared in this community, as have been all her husbands, so far as we can learn, and hence her record has been as an open book to all her seven companions, yet record, age, nor aught else seem to work fatality to the charm that wins, whatever that may be, and to find that out is the rub. The five years and over of widowhood that existed between her last and her present husband is the longest she has endured. This, however, may not be wholly her fault, as we are certain that in one instance at least she offered to share her comfortable home with one of our most worthy old citizens; but the mere proposition filled him with fear and trembling, and to avoid a repetition he hurriedly married a young lady in her teens, with whom and his little prattler he is now enjoying the fullest share of domestic bliss. We have no intimation, however, that her numerous conquests have been made by open, direct assault. On the contrary, we think they have not. It has been asserted on good authority that she has confessed to a presentiment that she should have seven husbands. She now enjoys the fulfilment of this prophetic notion, and hale, seventy odd, she wears her bridal wreath with becoming dignity."

—The greatest feat of an Arab hunter is to capture an ostrich. It is the largest of living birds, and probably the swiftest of all living animals. Being very shy and cautious, and living on the sandy plains, where there is little chance to take it by surprise, it can only be captured by a well-planned and long-continued pursuit with the swiftest horses. The ostrich has two curious habits in running when alarmed. It always starts off with out-spread wings, against the wind, so that it can scent the approach of an enemy. Its sense of smell is so keen that it can detect a person at a great distance, long before one can be seen. The other curious habit is that of running a circle. Usually five or six ostriches are found in a company. When discovered, part of the hunters, mounted on fleet horses, will pursue the birds, while the other hunters will gallop away at right angles to the course the ostriches have taken. When these hunters think they have gone far enough to cross the paths the birds will be likely to take, they watch upon some rise of ground for their approach. If the hunters hit the right places, and see ostriches, they at once start in pursuit with fresh horses, and sometimes they overtake one or two of the birds, but often two or three of the fleet horses fall, completely tired out with so sharp a chase.

—Auburn is an extremely devout town; even its cats go to church. The Lewiston Journal says:

Thomas was turned out of the church last Sunday, for disturbance. We never saw a person more humiliated before a large congregation. He walked up right in front of the pulpit, and interrupted the minister by his ill-timed remarks. Nobody interfered in the interest of peace, and the minister after enduring this unsound doctrine till forbearance ceased to a virtue, descended from the pulpit, took Thomas by the nape of the neck and escorted him down and out of the church. The affair caused no little sensation. No sooner had the minister returned to his pulpit, than the voice of Thomas again sounded on the staircase, and pretty soon in he marched, big as life, screaming at the top [of his voice, while a ripple of laughter ran over the entire congregation. This aroused the dander of one of the deacons, and out of the pew the church officer ran and made for the cat as fast as he could go. Thomas, however, was not inclined to be taken, and up the aisles he raced, and deacon after him at a gait that to say the least, was hardly ecclesiastical. The deacon made so quick time that he barely caught the offending cat by the end of his tail amid bitter feline expostulation. But holding his grasp, the gentleman finally got possession of the whole tail and at last of the entire period of Thomas, and bore him off to eixle. Thomas can scream around our household gods, but his manners are not such as to encourage his going to church.

—A writer says, "A French woman in Lent may be truly said to be the very opposite of a French woman during the carnival. From Ash Wednesday to Easter Monday she draws her veil close about her face, her dress becomes sombre, her bonnet is less coquettishly perched on her head, her high heels tread the pavement with less pertness than usual. During the forty days which follow the carnival she walks as though bowed beneath engrossing reflections; she preaches inwardly to herself; she expiates the sin of having lent a ready ear to mundane proposals; she feels twinges of conscience as she thinks how many waltzes she has indulged in; she does not show her teeth so much when she laughs, and a minute observer might be astonished to see when she takes her seat in her box at the opera that the body of her dress has heightened in proportion to her repentance."

—Miss Alvord, of New York, has secured a patent for a coal cart, which is provided with a flexible spout to discharge the coal directly into the hole of the sidewalk instead of dumping it upon the pavement. In a city like New York, where coal bins are in cellars, the invention is one of great labor-saving importance, and it is strange some stupid man had not thought of the thing before.

The Man with an Item.

[Detroit Free Press.]

It wasn't right, and future generations will say that it wasn't. He came tramping up stairs, tossed his hat on to a table, and as he sat down in a chair he carelessly remarked:

"Suppose you'd like a item?"

"Yes, of course," replied the lone reporter.

"I haven't been to any other paper with it," he continued, as he leaned forward; "I've taken the Free Press for twenty-nine years, and I've walked four miles to give you this item."

"Well, I am very much obliged, indeed. What is the item?"

"Well, you know the Grand Trunk Junction?"

"Yes, out here about three miles from the City Hall."

"Well, it was about a mile beyond that Me and another fellow was coming in on the track. He was a stranger and seemed down-hearted and gloomy; said he didn't care two cents whether he lived or died."

"Poor fellow! Can you describe him?"

"Yes; he was about five feet six; had red hair, big feet, coarse clothes, blue eyes and no whiskers."

"Well, go on."

"We'd got within a mile of the junction when the express train from the east came thundering along."

"Yes."

"And of course we stepped off the track.'

"Yes."

"I wasn't looking for nor expecting any such thing, you know, for the man didn't let or nor betray himself by word nor look. If I'd only suspected it, why I could have grabbed him."

"Yes; I see."

"Well, we stood facing the train. I was a leetle ahead of him, and what did he do as the train got within 300 feet, of us?"

"Rushed on the track?"

"No, not that. He made a jump for the rail, kneeled down, and—"

"Great blazes, but it was awful!" interrupted the reporter.

"Awful! I guess it was! I was never so weak in all my life. He deliberately laid his neck on the rail, shut his eyes and—"

"And the locomotive took his head clean off," shouted the reporter, springing up.

"No. As I was saying, he deliberately placed his neck on the rail, held it there——"

"And was mashed!"

"No, sir—held it there for a moment and then——"

"And was then struck by the pilot!"

"No, sir—and then he deliberately took it off again, and is now in a saloon around the corner inquiring for a job."

The reporter leaned back and looked at him for a long time.

The stranger leaned back and looked at the reporter.

Nothing disturbed the deep silence but the ticking of the clock.

By and by, the man with the item looked up at the skylight, down at the floor, and softly slid out into the hall and was gone.

—"John Paul" is taking his vacation at Long Branch and furnishing the Tribune with notes at the same time. If he evolves few facts he is wealthy in philosophy and not deficient in judgment. He says: "Frequently I have asked of myself (as well as of other personal friends) what makes Long Branch so favorite a watering-place. Ease of access, all reply. Now, I don't see that this explains it at all. The Pit called Bottomless is proverbially easy of access, but I have never heard it claimed that this makes it a good watering-place. On the contrary, does it not stand glaringly and nakedly forth as perhaps the worst watering-place to be found in the world or out of it—if we except, possibly, Coney Island." One of the most delightful things about the Branch he thinks is getting to it. The most delightful is getting away from it, and he pays his respects to the hotel clerk in this fashion; "Can I have a room?" I modestly ask after registering my name. Clerk looks at me a moment, takes in the general unostentatiousness of my apparel at a glance, turns away and attends to the swells who get credit of Bell instead of buying for cash of Porter, chats with the young men whom he knows for a few minutes, pauses to tell some old gentleman with a bald head the last brilliant bon mot apropos of the Beecher trial, and when everybody else is roomed and he has settled the pen right behind his ear, then he calls the smallest bell-boy in the office and turns to me with, "Show this gentleman up to 993?" And by this time I feel so humble about it that I bow to the bell-boy and look round for his bag and wonder how I am to find No. 993 to show him to.

PULMOCINE.

—A country editor in Tennessee has discovered that there is nothing so ungrateful as ingratitnde. He says: "At an election not more than a thousand years ago, this paper supported a gentleman for office during the whole campaign. It stopped its press to print tickets for him, and the editor stood in the courthouse yard all day and neglected his private business to electioneer for him, and now he tells us to stop his paper—he can't pay for two country papers. Comment is unnecessary."

—The company which was formed to work the Peterborough gold mine have expended a large amount of money for machinery, and have just struck at a depth of fifty-six feet a vein of soft stone, which has lessened their confidence in the value of the mine.

Business Notices.

A Double Danger Averted.

The inhabitant of a malarious region is threatened by a double danger. He is not only compelled to breathe miasma, but swallow it, since it infects not only the atmosphere, but the water. The aerial poison threatens his system through the lungs and pores, the liquid through the stomach. Against this double peril there is but one protection, and that is to invigorate the entire body through the digestive and secretive organs. Ordinary tonics usually fail to accomplish this—Hostetter's Stomach Bitters never. In the tropics, where the diseases originated by malaria are of a far more malignant type than those originated by the same cause in the temperate zone, it enjoys immense and constantly increasing sales, and there is no portion of this continent where it is not the reigning specific for miasmatic fevers and disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels, proceeding from malaria and other causes.

Local Matters.

A Sad Case.

The circumstances attending the death of Mr. William E. Sargent, of Cambridge, near the Wentworth, on Thursday evening, are peculiarly distressing. Mr. Sargent and Mr. James W. Poor, each about 32 years of age, had been bosom friends for years and were intimately connected in business relations. On being transferred to duty here in inspecting the manufacture of liquor at Ward's distillery, they took up their residence for the Summer at the Wentworth with their families, Mr. Sargent having a wife only. He was a person of genial manners, overflowing with kindness and good nature, and a general favorite among his associates. Messrs. Sargent and Poor had been out fishing with a gentleman named Holmes, and on returning, Mr. Sargent said he would take the clams used for bait out to the lobster car, about a hundred feet from shore. He started to do so and while his friends were waiting for his return he shouted for help. As the door of the lobster car could not be opened from the boat it is probable that he stepped on it and capsized it, as it was found bottom up on Friday. His cry for help was answered by Mr. Poor, who immediately plunged into the water, as Mr. Sargent could not swim. It was too dark to see distinctly, and Mr. Poor, seeing Mr. Sargent's hat floating, swam for it, but the unfortunate man had gone down. He however came up within a few feet of Mr. Poor, who seized him by the arm and spoke encouragingly to him, urging him to cling to him and he would save him. Starting to swim in, both men sank and touched bottom, Mr. Poor springing upward with his feet when he touched. Coming to the surface, Mr. Sargent changed his hold and caught him by the shirt collar, which made Mr. Poor's efforts still easier. During this struggle for life, Mr. Harry W. Huguley, of the Boston Custom House, an intimate friend of the two men, had launched a dory which was lying at a considerable distance from the shore, and rowed out to meet the men. When he reached them Mr. Poor was standing on bottom with the water up to his chin, holding Mr. Sargent's head above water. Mr. Huguley drew the insensible form of Mr. Sargent into the boat and helped Mr. Poor to the shore, where he arrived so exhausted that he was unable to use his limbs.

All efforts to resuscitate Mr. Sargent were in vain, although they were kept up for an hour and a half, during which time his wife was unaware of the great loss which had befallen her, although she knew her husband had been overboard. On being informed of the fatal termination, she went into spasms and seemed half-benumbed by the dread announcement. All the consolation that kind friends could offer failed to break the sad effects of the disaster which had left her widowed and heart-broken, and throughout the night she remained in a state of semi-consciousness, tearless and unable to respond to the watchful tenderness of those who devoted the time to comforting her.

Coroner Rider deemed an inquest, unnecessary, a physician on examination pronouncing the cause of Mr. Sargent's death to be apoplexy, superinduced by his plunge into the cold water and his exertions to save himself. The noble conduct of Mr. Poor who nearly lost his life in the vain endeavor to save his friend, is an example so worthy as to call down praises from the lips of all for his courage and presence of mind. He thinks Mr. Sargent had not been dead five seconds when the boat reached them, and is confident that he heard him speak his name just before.

Jottings.

The Universalist Sabbath School will picnic one day next week at the Wentworth grove.

Mr. Charles H. French, P. H. P. of Eastern Star Encampment, of Portland, a former resident of this city, was recently made the recipient of an elegant sword from the members of the Encampment.

The new military company will meet next Tuesday evening at the Common Council room to hear the report of a committee on organization.

The Reunion committee of 1873 are requested to meet at the Common Council room next Monday evening at eight o'clock to hear the report of a special committee appointed to consider the proper observance of the centennial of American Independence, next year.

Steamer Plymouth Rock will transport an excursion party of 1500 persons from Boston and vicinity to the Shoals regatta next Friday.

The High School reunion on Thursday evening passed off very pleasantly. The schoolroom seats were removed, and the hall lighted by lamps. At about half-past eight o'clock the guests began to gather, and by nine the large room was filled with gay promenaders, the young lady graduates of the afternoon being conspicuous in their snowy costumes. Shortly before ten o'clock Harlow's orchestra struck up the grand march, and dancing was kept up till a late hour, when the company separated, every one hoping that this first reunion, which had passed off so successfully, would not be the last.

Old "Jack" is summering at Appledore, dignified, fat and possessed of an appetite that speaks well for the house.

Rev. John A. Goss will hold another open-air meeting on Haymarket Square tomorrow afternoon at four o'clock.

Col. J. C. Butler's annual excursion to the Shoals will take place next Wednesday.

For the Oceanic regatta, schooners Fearless, Romance, Ray and Falcon, and sloops Viva and Alarm are entered in the first class. In the second class, the following vessels are entered: Schooners Lidie, Sunbeam, Mariquita, Shadow, Sparkle, Whisper, Louise, Vanitas, Mist, Phantom and Annie M., and sloops Cycla, Mist, Tartar, Albina, Gleaner, Georgie, Casco, Kelpie, Kate, Magic, Gael, Billie, Violet, Volante, Lottie and Niagara.

The Boston Transcript, in a review of Mr. Samuel A. Drake's new historical boat, says: Mr. Drake comes, by way of Wells, to Old York and Agamenticus, the ancient city, a trading place 250 years ago, by virtue of its situation near the mouth of the Piscataqua River, and its lofty mountain, which is the first landmark seen by vessels approaching the New England coast from the ocean—and the scene of Gorges' cumbrous attempts at establishing a city and an ecclesiastical government for New England. Kittery Point is fairly running over with history, and with aristocracy, indeed, when you come to ramble through it with an antiquarian like our author. And when such dry bones as these comparatively unvisited and half-forgotten places can be clothed on with richness by the scholarly cicerone, what may not be expected of his extraordinary talent on bringing us to the Isles of Shoals, saturated with the romance of two centuries as with its eternal tides and billows; to rare old Portsmouth (pronounce it "Porchmouth," he says, if you would do the "correct thing"); to Salem and its Witch Hill; to Marblehead, and its naval and nautical glories; to Plymouth, to Provincetown and Nantucket, to Newport and Mt. Hope, to New London and Norwich, and old Saybrook. We have only to add that the style of the author is as happy, free and charming as his matter is scholarly and permanently valuable.

Col. Cyrus Eastman's new cottages at Odiorne's Point when well seasoned are likely to be moist in the joints. The original Odiorne never imagined probably that so many points would be added to the attractions of that locality.

Rev. Thos. F. Davies, D. D., is in town.

Mr. Cedric Laighton of the Appledore House, Isles of Shoals, whose graceful billiards have been so much admired, has consented to give semi-weekly exhibitions during the season, for the gratification of the guests of the house.—Globe.

The Sea View Chapel and Hall will be formally opened to-morrow by appropriate services; discourse by Rev. Robert Laird Collyer, of Chicago, who has just arrived from Europe.

Pakeha.

WHITE ISLAND, July 9th.

In one of the last CHRONICLES received by me I noticed an item to the effect that the Massachusetts Council had unanimously declined advising the Governor to commute Pomeroy's sentence. Why is this thus? Wagner and Gordon have gone to —— some place, Lowell, Pemberton and Costley seem to be on the same road, and even the "poor child Pomeroy" appears to be worshipped less than ferocious murderers have usually been for many years past. Where will this thing end? If coolblooded, calculating assassins are to be punished as a rule, instead of being deified and slobbered over by soft-hearted and softerheaded men and women, murder will soon cease to be a regular branch of industry in New England, but will be regarded as a perilous if not absolutely discreditable occupation.

STATISTICS.

The number of vessels of all kinds which have "passed by or in the vicinity of the light-station at the Isle of Shoals" during the year ending June 30, 1875, foots up 21,-292, as follows: ships 2, barques 4, brigs 52, sloops 56, steamers 574, schooners 20,-604. Nearly one half the entire number passed during the quarter ending September 30, 1874, the record for that quarter footing up 9874, while but 1615 vessels passed during the first three months of this year. The largest number recorded as passing in any one day is 303, on August 27th.

In my last communication I mentioned what was then our latest style of catching lobsters (to watch when the regular lobster catchers were drawing their pots and go off and get a lot out of their boat) and suggested that it was about as near perfection in lobster catching as erring mortals may hope to get; but we have improved on it, and now watch for the lobster fishermen and hail them to bring us a lot ashore. My mate thinks we can only make one more advance, and that will be when we can induce some chap to boil the lobsters and pick the meat out, after catching them and bringing them ashore for us.

A GLIMPSE OF HEAVEN.

I tried my hand at another plan of lobster catching a few days ago, but it did not result satisfactorily. The lobster catchers did not draw their pots that morning, so I went off in the dory to pull one or two myself. I picked up the first buoy I came to and took in the slack of the warp, but the pot was stuck fast to the bottom and I couldn't start it; so I stood up, braced one foot against the side of the boat and gave a mighty pull, when all of a sudden the resistance ceased and I sat down with uncommon vigor on the dory's gunwale, my boots going up in the air until their soles were just level with the crown of my hat. How swift is thought in moments of extreme peril. Before that day I did not know what was meant by living a life-time in a few moments; now I do. As I sat poised on that dory's gunwale, expecting every instant to hear something splash in the water, all the sins and errors of my past life held a kind of 17th-of-June review before my mind; but I clung to hope until memory taunted me with having once (long, long years ago) scratched the name of a good republican from the regular ticket and put on the name of a democrat, and then I yielded to despair and hurriedly commenced to prepare for any contingency by reciting the Apostles' Creed as fast as possible, and had got as far as "now I lay me" when a little sea hit the dory broadside on and—canted me upon my feet in the bottom of the boat all right. I threw the lobster-pot buoy as far away as I could and pulled solemnly ashore, without any lobsters, but truly reformed and firmly resolved never again to attempt investigating another man's lobster pots except in the very smoothest of water and shoal at that.

EVRLY RISING.

Sunrise at sea, as viewed from the lighthouse balcony on a clear morning, is beautiful indeed. I never cared much about sunrise before,—in fact, I never saw it rise a great many times, until I came out here. I used to hear people tell about getting up at daybreak, but never believed anybody ever did it; now I am up myself before that time, every alternate morning. I have not yet tired of looking on the animated scene then presented,—the numerous boats of the lobster-catchers, hand-liners and trawlers, the scores of fishing-schooners of all sizes, ages and models, with occasional coasters and steamboats, going in all directions over the bright-blue ocean, which lies as placid as though it had never swallowed a ship or killed a man; the sea-birds circling about as though they were looking for a job; the signs of busy life on the three hotel-occupied islands—for there are three hotels out here now, the Appledore, the Oceanic, and the new one (the name of which I have not learned) on "Lunging" island—all combine to form a picture which I should enjoy more but for the painful thought of how many poor people there are in the world who cannot lie abed late in the morning.

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH OF THE CITY OF PORTSMOUTH call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10 of the City Ordinances and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the city to aid them in the execution of their duty.

CHAPTER X.

Sec. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, &c. shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the health officers may direct.

Sec. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

Sec. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten days from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time above specified.

Sec. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offals of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

Sec. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisances shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

Sec. 12. When any householder shall know that any person within his family is taken sick of the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 13. When any physician shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for each refusal or neglect forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the health officers in the name of the city.

Sec. 16. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other thing deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier —the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may, by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

Sec. 21. No person shall erect, keep or continue or permit to be erected, kept or continued, upon any land occupied or by him, any pen for the keeping of swine, or privy, over either of the mill ponds in this city, or so placed that offensive substances therefrom shall be discharged or drained into either of said ponds, or into any creek, or cove or drain leading thereto. And no person shall construct, keep or continue any drain leading from any pen for the keeping of any swine, slaughter-house, privy vault, or other unwholesome or offensive place, into either of said ponds, or to any flat or marsh adjoining the same. And no person shall throw or suffer to be thrown from his land into either of said ponds, or upon any of said flats or marshes, any dead, decaying, unwholesome or offensive animal or vegetable substances.

Daily Chronicle.

—And now we hear of a successful journalistic duelist, evidently from the tropics, who returned from one of these encounters in such a beatific mood that nothing less than this would relieve his mind: "It is something, after all, to be an editor. The profession, being not altogether unproductive of results, offers a field broad enough for ambition of the most varied nature. The bright laurels of war and the modest lilies of peace are alike growths of its soil; and there are garlands, too, growing upon its waving globes to twine the brow of the most exalted fame." Some one, not finding this very definite, inquired what his occupation was, and learned that it was "standing before a double-barreled shotgun for a salary of $3,000 a year." The last installment of his stipend consisted of 36 buckshot.

An English Remedy

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS,

For Nervousness and General Debility,

PREMATURE decay, mental and physical prostration, fear, despondency, over indulgence in the use of opium or alcoholic drinks, tobacco, &c., &c. Medicines unrivalled for their wonderful properties and remarkable cures of all Nervous Complaints. Their efficacy is equally great in the treatment and cure of Cancers, Nodes, Ulcers, Pustules, Pimples, Tetter, Fever Sores, Ringworm, Erysipelas, Scald-Head, Barbers' Itch, Scurvy, Salt Rheum, Copper Colored Blotches, Glandular Swellings, Worms and Black Spots in the flesh, Discoloration, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth and Nose, Sore Legs, and sores of every character, because the medicines are the very best Blood Medicine ever placed before the people, and are warranted to be the most Powerful Alterative ever originated by man. They impart Strength to the Body and Vigor to the Mind, removing Morbid Sensibility, Depression of Spirits, Dementia and Melancholia.

NERVOUS DEBILITY.

However obscure the causes may be which contribute to render nervous debility a disease so prevalent, affecting as it does, nearly one-half of our adult population, it is a melancholy fact that day by day, and year by year, we witness a most frightful increase of nervous affections from the slightest neuralgia to the more grave and extreme forms of Nervous Prostration.

It is of the highest importance, then, that individuals should be able to judge for themselves, by their own feelings, if and to what extent they are attacked by this insidious enemy to ill health, comfort, and even life itself if left to run its course unchecked by the early and prompt application of curative remedies.

DRUNKENNESS.

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS is the only remedy that has ever proved by practical experience a benefit to those who suffer from over-indulgence in alcoholic liquors; it completely destroys the taste for them, and restores the victim of intemperance to health and vigor. A single trial will prove it to be just what it is recommended to be.

Price $2.50. Large size, $5. Each package of the Cordial Balm contains one box of the Tonic Pills, which may also be had separately at 50 cents per box.

RECENT TESTIMONIALS.

FREWSBURGH, Nov. 12, 1874.

I have used the Cordial Balm and Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills as a preventive and cure for the use of ardent spirits and habitual intoxication, and find them actually specific in such cases. I regard them as most invaluable medicines, and nothing could induce me to be without them.

JACOB MESEREVE.

TIPTON, Dec. 3, 1874.

We take great pleasure in informing you of the surprisingly beneficial results from the use of your English Remedy, The Cordial Balm of Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills, in a case of great Nervous Debility and Prostration, by a member of our family who had been under treatment by different doctors for nearly three years past without any apparent benefit therefrom; but your medicines have produced a most wonderful change for the better and the patient now enjoys comparatively excellent health. MRS. HARRIET STURGISS.

P. S.—We tell all with whom we are acquainte who are similarly afflicted to try your medicines.

FACTS PROVEN

BY THE

TEST OF EXPERIENCE.

"BY THEIR FRUITS YE SHALL Know THEM."

THE CAUSE OF GOUT.

It proceeds from a deficiency of, or an alteration in the cutaneous, urinary or intestinal secretions. This definition leads us to the solution of a second and not less important question:

HOW TO CURE THE GOUT.

This can only be accomplished by a course of treatment capable of establishing the perspiration, if suppressed, of inducing a proper flow of urine, and of destroying the obstinate constipation when it exists. But it is not sufficient that these three functions act properly as respect quantity, but above all, and before all, their quality must have our attention. Indeed, we have mentioned not only a deficiency but also an alteration of secretion. For the perspiration, the urine, and the evacuations should be not only sufficiently abundant, but should carry off certain principles whose stay would produce the most serious disorders.

This is precisely what we see in the Gout. Does it not often happen that after an attack, the joints become deformed by chalky concretions? These gouty deposits have been analyzed by the Chemists Wallaston, Fourcroy, Vanquillin and Barruel.—Every first-class physician should know their composition, then there would remain to find a means to prevent these salts spreading, and, as it were, condensing of themselves throughout the system. The receipt from which is compounded the will produce this desirable result, because it gives to the products of the body the quantity and quality necessary.

CHRONIC GOUT having been engendered insensibly during a certain lapse of time, time is necessary for its removal. Its elimination must take place atom by atom. It is, therefore, not surprising that patience should be required for a complete cure. We must be careful not to confound the acute with the chronic condition; if the latter, it requires weeks to remove it; in the former, a few doses only are necessary to effect a complete cure.

By persevering a longer or a shorter time, according to the severity of the case, the joints will gradually recover their suppleness, and the nodes will be seen to soften and diminish insensibly. This last is an infallible test of the wonderful properties of the

DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

To this unerring proof we can, by the aid of Chemistry, add another, equally palpable and convincing:

The articular concretions are composed principally of uric acid, waters of ammonia, of soda, and of phosphate of lime. These are precisely the salts which we find in the various excreta, particularly in the urine; so that chemical reagents which showed scarcely a trace of these before taking the DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE, will demonstrate an enormous proportion after its use.

Thus the concretions, the principal components of which analysis has shown can be again reproduced, and with this the most convincing proof of any medicine can offer. This, then, is the most rational plan of proceeding, and which enabled us to answer the query, one of a certain English M. P., "WHAT HAS BECOME OF MY GOUT?" We told him that "it followed the course of the evacuations," since chemical analysis, as has been said, finds in them all the principles which produce it. Henceforth it is clear that this medicine is and ought to banish not only all ideas of retrogressions, but should inspire the most perfect confidence. It cannot be too often repeated, these are no hypotheses, no vain theories, but palpable truths, material, physical facts, confirmed over and over again by twenty-five years' practical experience in the leading hospitals of England and France, as well as by thousands of testimonials held by every one of our agents, freely offered by sufferers restored to sound health and continued use furnished through the means of the world-renowned DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

It is styled as above for the reason that its great efficacy in rheumatic complaints is just as apparent as in gout, and thousands of sufferers in Massachusetts to-day, cured of rheumatism by its use, mention the Proprietor's name with benedictions of praise.

This medicine is for sale at all Druggists throughout the United States and Canada. If it happens that your Druggist has not got it in stock, ask him to send for it to any of the Wholesale Druggists in Boston. Price $1 a bottle.

Thousands buy it at sight, who could not be induced to purchase the high-priced books treating of Domestic Medicine. Unlike other books sold through agents this work is thoroughly advertised throughout North America. This fact, together with the large size, elegant appearance, and many new features of the book, causes it to sell more rapidly than any work ever published in this country. Those of my agents who have had experience in selling books, say that in all their previous canvassing they never met with such success or made so large wages, as since commencing the sale of my work. Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,
Croup,
Diphtheria,
Asthma, etc.,

—USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs!

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents.'

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

Portsmouth Chronicle.

How Morrissey Beat the Central Pacific.

[Cincinnati Commercial.]

A few years ago there was a determined effort made by the Central Pacific Railroad to get from Congress the free grant of Yerba Buena or Goat Island, in the Bay of California. It was claimed at the time, if the Government meant to relinquish it, by one Ryan, who had squatted on it many years, a fellow Irishman with Morrissey.

The latter was a poor fellow, hardly able to pay his board bill. He employed, or rather begged, Sam Ward, the epicurean lobbyist, and Jesse Johnson, to represent him. Ward came to the door of Congress, called Representative Morrissey out, and told him that the railroad company had nearly forty majority, several democrats being also in their interest. Ward was at his wits' ends. Morrissey thought a minute, and hit apon a gambler's device to beat the railroad.

This island was a rather barren mound, opposite San Francisco, connected with Oakland by a bridge. The railroad company secretly meant to shave down the crown of the hill, connect the island with San Francisco, and use it for all the heavy shipping of the port. Axtell and Sargent were engineering the scheme. They had a map prepared and laid on the table under the Speaker's nose, plainly showing the worthless nature of the island to anybody. A great crowd of members were gathered around the map. As Morrissey came up he heard the remark made: "It's worth nothing in the world except for an entrepot." He said obtusely:

"You say it ain't worth nothing. Well, I'll give a million dollars for it, and I'll put up $250,000 to-morrow."

This remark was the shot that knocked away the main argument. He had Fernando Wood make the offer in a petition of $1,000,000 for Goat Island. Then, Elihu Washburne on one side, and Morrissey and Wood on the other, began to beat up recruits.

That night C. P. Huntington, Vice President of the road, went to Morrissey's room.

"Morrissey," said he, "Why do you oppose our bill?"

"Well," said Morrissey, "my public reason is that you have had enough. You asked for an empire of land and the Government gave you all you asked for. My other reason is that a friend of mine has rights in that island. He is a poor man. You are all worth six or seven millions apiece. If you had been just or generous you would have given that man Ryan $25,000 before you applied to Congress for his island. You didn't think of it, and I'm against you."

"I'll give you $100,000," said Huntington, looking into Morrissey's eyes, "to pass that bill."

"You can't give it to me," said Morrissey, looking back. "And as I've put all them men on record, I don't see how they can change their votes."

The Exemplary Art of Not Hearing.

The art of not hearing is fully as important to domestic happiness as a cultivated ear for which so much time and money are expended. There are so many things which are so painful to hear, many of which, if heard, will disturb the temper and detract from contentment and happiness, that all should be educated to take in or out sounds at will. If a man falls into a violent passion and calls all manner of names, the first word shuts my ears and I hear no more. If, in my quiet voyage of life I am caught by one of those domestic whirlpool, I shut up my ears as a sailor would furl his sail, and, making all tight, scud before the gale.

If a hot and restless man begins to inflame my feelings, I consider what mischief these sparks might do in the magazine below, where my temper is kept, and instantly close the door. Does a gadding, mischief-making fellow begin to inform me what people are saying about me, down goes the portcullis of my ear, and he cannot get in any farther.

Some people feel so very anxious to hear everything that will vex and annoy them that they set about searching and finding it out. If all the petty things said about one by the heedless or ill-natured idlers were to be brought home to him he would become a mere walking pin-cushion stuck full of sharp remarks.

I should as soon thank a man for emptying on my head a bushel of nettles, or setting loose a swarm of mosquitoes in my chamber, or raising a pungent dust in my house generally, as to bring upon me all the tattle of spiteful people. If you would be happy among good people, open your ears; when among bad, shut them.

It is not worth while to hear what your servants say when they have slammed the door; what a beggar says whose petition you have refused; what your neighbors say about your children; what your rival says about your business or dress.

I have noticed that a well-bred woman never hears an impertinent remark. A kind of discreet deafness saves one from not a little apparent connivance in dishonorable conversation.

—The editor of the Taunton Gazette has been eating 'em, for he says: "The comely cucumber cometh, conveying countless cases of cholera and colic, causing cheerful comments on the part of the compounder of curious but comforting cordials."

Yellow fever is reported at Norfolk, Va., and the United States sanitary officials are much alarmed lest the disease should spread to Northern cities.

Ex-Solicitor Banfield of the Treasury is hopelessly insane.

The Lebanon Free Press, one of the most sensible papers in the State, suggests that when the proposed constitutional convention meets, representation shall be provided for on the basis of the population as shown by the census, and that State Senators shall be elected by counties, as is done in Maine. There seems to be no call for a tribunal to decide who is entitled prima facia to seats in the legislature, as "there will hardly be more than one Weston in a century."

The democratic legislature of Connecticut, which convened a month earlier than that of New Hampshire, is still in session, trying to devise some way to refill the treasury, depleted by the reduction of taxes made for political effect when the party first came into power in that State.

A small sloop named the Whim has recently sailed from England, bound to the Arctic seas and zone. It is under the command of Captain Wiggins, of the merchant service, and is manned by five able seamen. The little vessel is twenty-seven tons register, with a spencer and square sail on the mast proper, a small spencer sail at the stern, and the usual jibs. There is a saloon in miniature about six feet long by five feet wide and five feet deep, and the usual forecastle for the crew. Captain Wiggins commanded an expedition to the Arctic seas last year, and he is of opinion that a valuable field for investigation and trade is open to the philanthropist and commercial adventures among the scattered people who occupy Samoyede Land and northernmost Russia generally, and he and his crew go out in pursuit of further investigation in the direction indicated.

When we are asked to meet the "arguments" of Mr. W. D. Kelley, we have only to say that Mr. W. D. K. does not present any arguments. He assumes certain perversities to be axioms, and then invites the people who have nothing to cut the throats of those who have something. If his argument was answered in kind he would be hanged to a lamp-post.—Cincinnati Commercial.

Indiana republicans claim a majority of 25,000 for their next election. This may be a trifle large, but certainly the promise never looked brighter for a handsome republican victory in both Indiana and Ohio.

Solomon Hagar was a lazy drunkard who lived with his industrious brother at Harvard, Mass. He went home drunk and the brother threatened him with expulsion from the premises if he did not reform. "You will be sorry for that," said the sot; and thereupon he went to the barn, set fire to a mow of hay and was burned to death in the conflagration.

J. N. Ostrom, stroke and captain of the victorious Cornell crew, is a carpenter by trade, and has supported himself at the University by working at the bench, helping about the farm and taking care of one of the buildings.

The Boston Journal says the Dartmouth crew returned to their homes on Friday, feeling satisfied with their work on Saratoga Lake and with the result of the University boat race. They are all fine athletes and good oarsmen; and it is safe to predict that the college another year will have a representative crew which will astonish people. They came out of the race physically the best crew, and had their boat been rigged as it should have been for the rough surface of the lake they would have been second sure, if not first, which can be said without detracting from the honors which they have received. The trouble with the boat, which is a beauty, was that the outriggers were set low, for smooth water, and every time they spurted she buried so that the waves swashed the iron outrig and sent water into the boat. Twice in the race they let themselves out, each time settling down to their regular swing to avoid swamping. When near the finish they "hit her up" once more and lots of water washed inboard; it was too rough for them to continue so, and they reluctantly obeyed the Captain's order to ease up. Five members of this remarkable crew are still eligible for the University boat race of 1876: No. 2, Sumner Wallace, '77, Rochester; No. 3 (Captain,) Benj. F. Robinson, '77, Manchester; No. 4, Walter C. Frost, '76, Dublin; No. 5, Frank W. Mitchell, '76, Manchester; stroke Charles W. Eager, '77, Manchester. The crew will lose Willis G. Eaton, Jr., a most excellent bow oar, but there will be no trouble in supplying a good man next year from the material on hand at present.

Incidents of the Great Rifle Match.

Reports are now very complete and full in regard to the recent rifle match at Dollymount, and few incidents or details that helped to make the day a memorable one for Ireland have been omitted. Upon the morning of the match the promise of sunshine brought out the citizens in force, and by the conclusion of the 800 yard stage the grounds were well thronged. The conclusion of the shooting was eagerly watched, and when at the finish it was announced that the Irish team was one point ahead, the cheering was hearty. Among the riflemen themselves the effect of this announcement was peculiar. The Irish looked upon it as the beginning of a victory. The lower ranges they considered the most familiar to the American shooters, and this vantage, taken thus early in the struggle, the Dublin men hoped to keep and increase to the end of the game. The Americans took the return with all stolidity. The manner of working adopted by the two teams was characteristic, and may serve to explain why the battle took the turn it did. It is fair to assume that both squads of men were in prime condition; there was no complaint of illness heard, and no accident happened to mar the progress of the contest.

But in the American wing all was order and system. As each man rose from the firing point he stepped up to a convenient easel and jotted down the wind and rear right measurements used by him, while the spotter inverted a broad-headed tack in a small target in plain sight on the spot corresponding with that hit by the ball. There was no hurry, no running about after points, but the whole team pulled together in a hearty and helpful manner. On the Irish side the men wandered about, bantering with friends and acquaintances, running for points on wind and elevation to one another, and especially to Mr. John Rigby, who was not shooting, but acted as a sort of general father over all, trying to give advice to a half-dozen questioners at one and the same time. There was no system. Instead of putting out the less reliable men as pioneer shots at each range, their best men, Hamilton and Wilson led off. After the nine hundred yards' match the Irish lost hope of victory. After lunching, the teams reentered the grounds. The crowd had doubled in numbers. The evening papers had announced the evil tidings with commendable rapidity, and "the boys" had come from town to see about matters, and an attempt was made to get the crowd back to the 1000 yard stations. Expostulations, prayers, commands, anger, blows were tried, but all in vain. The first people in the city were bandied about in the crowd as the veriest sans culotte. The police to the number of fifty were as powerless as so many women, and nothing was more apparent than that they were afraid to push their authority.

Only two targets were in sight; the crowd hid the others and would not be driven back. One member of the Irish Team pelted in a blank cartridge, and well nigh touched a temper which would have soon put an end to the match. For truth to tell, it was with the Irish Team that the Irish people were angry. Mr. Milner's unhappy reputation over that fatal shot at Creedmoor had not been forgotten, and he was most unmercifully jeered by the wits of the town. Dr. Hamilton lost his usually good temper, and addressed the people, asking them in no civil terms to stand back. When the last Irish shot was fired, the ropes were broken, although Mr. Yale was just about to pull the trigger. The crowd rushed headlong on the ground and swept up beyond the starting points. Col. Bodine had still a shot. He lay down in the most characteristic manner, and levelled his gun; the crowd fell back, but he was at the end of a thin enough lane of human folk to make many a man tremble. Long and steadily did he lie, until in sheer admiration the crowd stood still and gazed on him. At last he pulled the trigger, the thud was heard, a bull's-eye was repeated. "Old Reliable" came in for a tremendous shout of applause and the match for 1875 was over.

Beautiful Villas Begging for Purchasers.

[N. Y. Times.]

Within the past season, a well-known estate on the Upper Hudson, beautifully situated and carefully laid out, which cost the owner $100,000, was sold for less than the mortgage upon it, or for $30,000. As the traveller sails up the Hudson from Newburgh he will within a short distance see three fine properties, one of which belonged to a British Ambassador, another to one of our own foreign ministers, and the other to an equally prominent person, all of which are in the market, unsalable and unrentable, one indeed, being turned into a brick yard. Passing still further up the stately river, the traveller will be pointed to other splendid properties belonging to old manorial estates—some whose titles came from the British crown, and others whose deeds were signed by the Indian chiefs—now utterly worthless as sources of profit, the expenses of keeping them up exceeding any rent possible for them, and they themselves not finding a buyer at the prices of the mortgages upon them. These places, too, it should be remarked, are among the finest in the Northern States, with handsome lawns and gardens, old trees and parks, and superb views of river and mountain. The houses themselves are perhaps old, but not uncomfortable, and they are easy of access by boat and railroad. The same state of things prevails further from the river. There is one place in Duchess county which is said to have cost $25,000, and which could not be rented, and probably not sold, for a third of its value.

In the interior of the State there are numerous other estates in the same plight.

Fortunes of Singers.

Mme. Parepa-Rosa is said to have died worth some $250,000. She was a thrifty woman, and looked well after the pennies. Mme. Nillson-Rozeaud has certainly not squandered her means, and is reported to have $500,000 invested in stocks and real estate. Miss Kellogg is worth probably $200,000 well invested, and would be worth more if she were not so generous. She, or her mother, who acts for her, is close at a bargain, but liberal with money after she once gets it. Adeline Patti is extravagant and avaricious, too. She makes a great deal of money, and spends a great as well. But she has saved a fortune. Mlle. Albani is just beginning to make money; so she has not saved any so far. Mr. Gye, however, will see that she does not lose anything. Lucca is more like the old-fashioned prima donna. She does not save a penny, though she makes a great many. De Murska, also, is improvident. Adelaide Phillips is poor, through her generosity to her relatives, I am told. Miss Annie Louise Cary would save if she could only get a little ahead. But she is so kind-hearted. Mme. Anna Bishop belongs to the improvident, or rather, unfortunate generation. She has made fortunes, but only to lose them, and is a poor woman today. Carl Formes, Mario, Tamberlik, neither have anything left, not even their voices. Of the present generation, Wachtel is well off; so are Santley, Sims Reeves, Faure, and Niemann. Campanini saved; so did Carpi. Capoul didn't, neither did Maurel nor Brignoli, and the tenors and baritones of the second class are poorer than church mice.

Bald, Disjointed Chat.

Do you recollect Dr. Lowell Mason's last musical convention in Boston? 'Tis all of twenty-five years since; I think it was holden in the old Tremont Temple.

A convention in those days was an affair with which the modern substitute can never be reconciled.

There are men and women of note (no pun,) in musical as well as literary circles, any of whom would be a host for a dozen diluted "conventions" of the present day. They met for musical improvement and social intercourse, and not for the peddling of cheap books. The closing hours were made pleasant by an assurance that something had been done.

Who will forget Anna Stone, whose ringing voice never succumbed to the best chorus Boston could produce?

Her perfect self-possession was finely illustrated one evening at the Music Hall. The occasion was, I think, a miscellaneous concert. The Handel and Haydn Society filled the stage, while at the front sat Henrietta Sontag, of glorious memory, Miss Stone, and petite Mrs. Wentworth.

Miss Stone, while rendering a solo, approached too near the footlights, and her dress took fire. She always wore black in concert; and the material of which her dress was composed, was such as to forbid rapid combustion. Nevertheless the situation was startling. Mrs. Wentworth stepped quickly forward, and crushed out the fire, greatly to the detriment of her delicate yellow gloves. Except a downward glance, the singer made no sign, and continued to the end of her song, without faltering.

In those days were such organists as the elder Hayter of Trinity church, famous as a cathedral organist; his son George, sometime of the Old South, and well-remembered in the concert room; S. A. Bancroft, of Dr. Kirk's, now of Emmanuel, one of the finest extemporaneous players of that day or this; Babcock, of Winter street, celebrated as a Fuguist, and Mueller of the Old South, of whom it was said, his eyes were always a page ahead of his fingers, a fact not difficult to understand by those who heard or saw his playing.

About this time came into notice a new candidate for public honors. During the last afternoon of the convention above alluded to there had been a general performance by all the notables of the gatherings. Mr. Bancroft had just left the grand piano, when it was announced that Miss Bothamly, since Mrs. Mozart, would sing "On Mighty Pens."

An accompanist was called for, but none volunteered. At this moment, the door up the stage opened, and there appeared a delicate looking young man, of perhaps some twenty summers. A lithe figure, graceful and quick in movement, handsome and self-possessed, he came rapidly forward and sat down, himself and Dr. Mason being the only occupants of the stage.

The Dr., unaware that he was not alone, was calling impatiently for the necessary accompanist, when there arose from the audience a cry of "Willcox! Willcox!" "Will the gentleman come forward," asked Dr. Mason. "He is on the stage," was the reply.

Turning around, the request was made personally; and after the protestations of incompetency customary on such occasions, Mr. Willcox went to the piano, and performed the required duty in very fine style. From that day he became a favorite with the public, especially as a performer upon the organ. His great success as an organist, in later years arose from the fact that he became a practical player, having acquired a thorough knowledge of voicing and finishing church organs at the celebrated manufactory of Simmons & Co., of Boston, and with which house he afterward associated himself as a partner.

At a later date, he received the title of Mus. Doc., from one of the English colleges, I think. He was a musician of rare ability, and will long be remembered by thousands as having hardly a superior in exhibiting the beauties or capacities of the organ.

Another of Boston's famous musicians made his debut in a similar manner. Soon after the completion of the present Tremont Temple organ, by the Messrs. Hook, Rev. Dr. Neale's church, (Baptist,) having removed from Union street, to their elegant church edifice in Somerset street, contracted for an organ with Simmons & Co. The contract was filled with one of the largest and finest church organs in America. When nearly completed there came into the church a middle-aged gentleman, accompanied by a lad, the latter conspicuous only from his retired manner, and, perhaps from the appearance of his right forefinger; which, being wrapped in white linen seemed more the badge of a whittling school boy, than that of an accomplished performer. Request was made for permission to try the organ. The lad sat down at the keyboard, and displayed a remarkable proficiency, spite of the disabled digit. Although he had been accustomed to a smaller instrument, yet the sixty odd registers and three banks of keys were difficulties soon surmounted. A proposition was made to play at the forthcoming exhibition, which was accepted, and his first appearance before a Boston audience was in performing Rink's Concerto in F. Maj.

Overtures were then made (no pun,) to the wardens, for the position of organist; and as the remuneration demanded was very small, the position was given to B. J. Lang, to the disgust of the writer hereof, with whom an engagement had already been nearly consummated. Hodie mihi, cras tibi.

The position which Mr. Lang has achieved is so well known that any mention would be superfluous praise.

Volumes might be written of the manner in which these artists have courted their favorite muse, successfully; but an acquaintance with their lives and habits would discover the great underlying principles to be indomitable perseverance, and untiring, persistent labor. F. A. T

New Publications.

Queen Mary; A Drama, by Alfred Tennyson. 16mo. $1.50: A historical drama in five acts, constructed upon the familiar Shakespearean model, with a long catalogue of dramatis personæ, and a frequent change of scene. The action takes place principally in London,—now in the royal palace, again in the streets, or at Whitehall, or in St. Mary's Church; but at the beginning of the second act it is laid at Allington Castle in Kent. The personages introduced include some of the most conspicuous and intrinsically dramatic figures of the sixteenth century. The Mary of the poem is "Bloody Mary," the daughter of Henry and Katharine of Aragon; and the whole period of her reign is used by the poet in unfolding his story. Philip of Spain, Elizabeth, Cardinal Pole, Sir Thomas Wyatt, Cranmer, Gardiner, Bonner, and Courtenay, Earl of Devon, are among the prominent actors; and the incidents of the Spanish marriage, the insurrection of Wyatt, the outbreak of the persecution, are some of the incidents which illustrate the gradual development of Mary's character, and the tragedy of her last hours.

The second number of Wide Awake (D. Lothrop & Co., Boston) surpasses the initial number. Rossiter Johnson, the compiler of Osgood's "Little Classics," has an excellent story. Three D. D.'s are represented by contributors. The serials grow in interest, and there is evidently first-class work upon every page. Price $2.00 per annum. D. Lothrop & Co., publishers, 38 and 40 Cornhill, Boston.

Dedication.

The fine new hall just completed at the Sea View Hotel, Rye Beach, was dedicated on Sunday morning, services commencing at eleven o'clock. Rev. Robert Laird Collyer of Chicago, one of the most eloquent and gifted preachers of which this country can boast, conducted the exercises, and delivered one of his peculiar sermons, from the text: "Go after that which is lost." The speaker commenced his remarks with the proposition that there are many wastes in nature; as seen in light, electricity, coal fields, coral beds, land and even men. The reason is that Nature's work is yet crude and imperfect, but the working and developing process is going on and by and by, in God's time, all these crudities will have been dissolved and perfection attained. Ultimates are not genesis; the child is not the man; and while events are only God in action, we must abide His time. True religion means rescuing. The eternal covenant of God with earth is that he will seek that which is lost until he find it. And it doesn't matter if we are in the lowermost hell of another life, we are bound to find ultimately the truths and the enjoyment of God.

The audience room (capable of seating upwards of 500 persons) was well filled, and every one was delighted with the eloquence of the gifted preacher. The singing was by the congregation, led by Mr. Arthur D. Whitehouse and Miss Ida M. Pierce of Dover, whose fame is too well known to need comment here. Mr. Lougee, the gentlemanly proprietor of the Sea View, in adding the above-mentioned hall and audience room to his already finely-equipped hotel, showed himself thoroughly acquainted with the wants of his patrons; and, adapted as it is to the requisites of the theatre, audience or ball room, it will certainly prove a valuable addition to this well-kept summer resort.

Sudden Death.

Miss Julia Shugrue, a young girl of about nineteen years, died very suddenly at a neighbor's residence on Gates street, Saturday. Going into the house, she complained of being unwell and was advised to go up stairs and lie down. A few minutes afterward she was heard to exclaim as if in pain, and was found sitting on a chair, swaying to and fro, her face being livid. She was removed to a bed, and death ensued immediately. An inquest being deemed necessary, Coroner Whittier summoned Dr. Parsons and Messrs. W. R. Preston and E A. Tilton, who after examination rendered a verdict that death was caused by apoplexy. All sorts of rumors were reported in regard to the case, and we regret to add that the Times publicly set afloat an outrageous charge, without regard to that feeling which should inspire respect for the dead even in the lowest natures, and which was unsubstantiated by the revelations of the inquest. It is charitable to veil the faults of persons from the gaze of the public when death touches its victims with icy hand, and such charity mankind honors and respects; but to unfeelingly insult and wrong the helpless dead is a dastardly act that causes a shudder of revulsion among the living that no words can express.

"The Church."

The Episcopal church of Exeter, has received the sum of $500 from Mrs. N. E. Baylies of Taunton, Mass., toward a fund for its endowment, the interest of which is to be used toward defraying the current church expenses. It is proposed to keep this fund separate from that which already exists, and it is to be known as the "Edmund Lincoln Baylies" fund, after the son of the donor, who has just completed a course of study at Phillips Exeter Academy.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Abbott of Concord, who have for several years summered at one of the Farragut House cottages, have sometime since started a movement for the erection of an Episcopal chapel at Rye Beach, at some of the locations as yet undecided, and have already gathered a considerable fund for this object from interested friends of all denominations. Portsmouth citizens are afforded opportunity to contribute; and it is suggested by one who appreciates the effort of Captain John Mason to establish "the church" on the Strawberry Bank, that if the Rye Beach chapel can be named Mason church, residents of Portsmouth will contribute a memorial window to be doughty Captain for the new edifice.

Jottings.

Civil Engineer William E. Hoyt has completed the preliminary surveys of Richards Avenue, established the grade, located the culverts and prepared estimates of the cost of grading, building stone culverts, and completing the work in accordance with Mrs. Cutts' will. It is said that there will be no further delay, and that the projected improvements will be commenced at an early day.

The Appledore House was full to overflowing on Sunday.

So great is the growth of the excursion business, there is not room sufficient in Railroad Avenue for the numerous stages, hacks, baggage and express wagons, and other teams that congregate there a dozen times a day. Quite a large percentage of the teams are obliged to remain on Deer street. In no place along the route of the Eastern Railroad are there more courteous hackmen or finer teams than here.

Forty-one of sixty-three applicants have passed a successful examination for admission to the High School.

The committee on rules and regulations of the proposed new military organization will report at an adjourned meeting at the Common Council room to-morrow evening. A full attendance of all interested in the formation and maintenance of a military company in Portsmouth is earnestly requested.

Excursion tickets from Great Falls to the Shoals and return are sold for $1.25 each.

The Eastern Railroad are to run the steamer Samuel Houghton to the Isles of Shoals on regatta days, 23d and 24th.

George Lynch and Jerome Conlon, two of the crew of schooner Hope, who had been to Dover, got into a fight on returning, Friday night, and Lynch stabbed Conlon in the breast, inflicting a serious wound. Lynch then jumped overboard, being partially intoxicated, and has not been seen since.

Mr. John F. Leverton's parrot sings with various modulations daily on Congress street. His voice does not seem to be shaken with increasing age, and his loquacity is unbounded.

Comdr. George Dewey, U. S. N., is detached from the command of U. S. S. Narragansett and placed on waiting orders. Lieut.-Comdr. Mortimer L. Johnson has been granted thirty days' leave of absence from receiving ship Ohio, with permission to visit Canada.

Samuel S. Frye & Son had about $90 stolen from their store drawer on Saturday afternoon. The thieves got away with the booty.

The cofferdam which had been built preparatory to excavating the river channel near Dover burst Thursday night, involving a loss to the contractors of about $1200.

J. F. Tenney writes about one of Florida's products, to the Lebanon Free Press, as follows: The alligator is a creation for some purpose, I suppose, but what that purpose is is yet to be determined by me, unless it should be to show what a hideous form animated nature can assume. They are very numerous, and, although quite timid, I have been able to give vent to my disgust of their appearance by the slaughter of hundreds of them,—killing them out of pure malice, as I seldom capture their dead bodies, but let them furnish food for the buzzards. I presume all your readers are as familiar with him as any written description can make them; but he is one of those works which must be seen to be appreciated. See him of a calm summer morning lying on the surface of the water with his upper jaw raised to a perpendicular height of three feet, his body and tail exposed to view, and emitting his dull, heavy roar, which can be heard for miles. They are sluggish in their motions. Their food consists of fish, grass and roots, pine knots, etc., nor will they reject a pig, dog, or even a calf, and very large ones will sometimes, though not often, attack grown cattle that are feeding on the grass that grows in the water near the shores of the river. They are, however, timid of man's approach, and it is with difficulty that you can get within rifle range of them. This I state as the rule, but will relate an exception as a matter of my own experience:

It was sixteen years ago that one calm Summer morning I had taken my boat and brought together some logs that had floated away from my unfinished raft, when, finding the water delightful in its temperature, I was induced to wade out into as deep water as possible, keeping one hand hold of the gunwale of the boat. After I had reached a depth of water clear up to my chin, a tremendous old alligator made a dive for me, giving my hip a fearful whack, but failing to get a perfect grab upon me. How or when I reached the middle of my boat, will always remain a mystery to me. I only know that immediately after his majesty's grab I was sitting bolt upright in my boat feeling fully satisfied that was much the pleasantest place.

—The Boston Journal of Chemistry regrets that the millers use all their finest, soundest wheat for the flour, and the poorest for Graham or brown bread, a general name given to mixtures of bran and spoiled flour. "What we need is good, sweet, whole wheat flour, finely ground, and put up securely for family use, and any Western miller who will give his earnest attention to furnishing such flour will realize a fortune speedily; securing the most nutritive principles the Creator has stored up for man's food."

—The Rural Carolinian says: "It looks a little risky to immerse a growing plant in water at one hundred and twenty degrees for the purpose of ridding it of lice or other insects, but we have tried it with the best results and with no damage to the plants, though it is possible that some very tender-leaved plants may not bear this treatment."

—However rich a man may be, however titled, however proud, let him go his way with humility, remembering that he is only about the two-billionth part of the population of the world, and that he will some day die and be missed by men just about as much as a smashed grasshopper is missed by his swarm.—Ed. Fernald.

A Double Danger Averted.

The inhabitant of a malarious region is threatened by a double danger. He is not only compelled to breathe miasma, but swallow it, since it infects not only the atmosphere, but the water. The aerial poison threatens his system through the lungs and pores, the liquid through the stomach. Against this double peril there is but one protection, and that is to invigorate the entire body through the digestive and secretive organs. Ordinary tonics usually fail to accomplish this—Hostetter's Stomach Bitters never. In the tropics, where the diseases originated by malaria are of a far more malignant type than those originated by the same cause in the temperate zone, it enjoys immense and constantly increasing sales, and there is no portion of this continent where it is not the reigning specific for miasmatic fevers and disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels, proceeding from malaria and other causes.

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH OF THE CITY OF PORTSMOUTH call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10 of the City Ordinances and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the city to aid them in the execution of their duty.

CHAPTER X.

Sec. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, &c. shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the health officers may direct.

Sec. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

Sec. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten days from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time above specified.

Sec. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offals of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

Sec. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisances shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

Sec. 12. When any householder shall know that any person within his family is taken sick of the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 13. When any physician shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for each refusal or neglect forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the health officers in the name of the city.

Sec. 16. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other thing deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier of the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may, by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal forcibly enter upon such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

Sec. 21. No person shall erect, keep or continue or permit to be erected, kept or continued, upon any land occupied or by him, any pen for the keeping of swine, or privy, over either of the mill ponds in this city, or so placed that offensive substances therefrom shall be discharged or drained into either of said ponds, or into any creek, or cove or drain leading thereto. And no person shall construct, keep or continue any drain leading from any pen for the keeping of any swine, slaughter-house, privy vault, or other unwholesome or offensive place, into either of said ponds, or to any flat or marsh adjoining the same. And no person shall throw or suffer to be thrown from his land into either of said ponds, or upon any of said flats or marshes, any dead, decaying, unwholesome or offensive animal or vegetable substances.

—The following is one way to cut a bottle in two: Turn the bottle as evenly as possibly over a low gaslight flame for about ten minutes. Then dip steadily in water; and the sudden cooling will cause a regular crack to encircle the side at the heated place, allowing the portions to be easily separated.

An English Remedy

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS,

For Nervousness and General Debility,

PREMATURE decay, mental and physical prostration, fear, despondency, over indulgence in the use of opium or alcoholic drinks, tobacco, &c., &c. Medicines unrivalled for their wonderful properties and remarkable cures of all Nervous Complaints. Their efficacy is equally great in the treatment and cure of Cancers, Nodes, Ulcers, Pustules, Pimples, Tetter, Fever Sores, Ringworm, Erysipelas, Scald-Head, Barbers' Itch, Scurvy, Salt Rheum, Copper Colored Blotches, Glandular Swelling, Worms and Black Spots in the Flesh, Discoloration, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth and Nose, Sore Legs, and sores of every character, because the medicines are the very best Blood Medicine ever placed before the people, and are warranted to be the most Powerful Alterative ever originated by man. They impart Strength to the Body and Vigor to the Mind, removing Morbid Sensibility, Depression of Spirits, Dementia and Melancholia.

NERVOUS DEBILITY.

However obscure the causes may be which contribute to render nervous debility a disease so prevalent, affecting as it does, nearly one-half of our adult population, it is a melody fact that day by day, and year by year, we witness a most frightful increase of nervous affections from the slightest neuralgia to the more grave and extreme forms of Nervous Prostration.

It is of the highest importance, then, that individuals should be able to judge for themselves, by their own feelings, if and to what extent they are attacked by this insidious enemy to ill health, comfort, and even life itself if left to run its course unchecked by the early and prompt application of curative remedies.

DRUNKENNESS.

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS is the only remedy that has ever proved by practical experience a benefit to those who suffer from over-indulgence in alcoholic liquors. It completely destroys the taste for them, and restores the victim of intemperance to health and vigor. A single trial will prove it to be just what it is recommended to be.

Price $2.50. Large size, $5. Each package of the Cordial Balm contains one box of the Tonic Pills, which may also be had separately at 50 cents per box.

RECENT TESTIMONIALS.

FREWSBURGH, Nov. 12, 1874.

I have used the Cordial Balm and Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills as a preventive and cure for the use of ardent spirits and habitual intoxication, and find them actually specific in such cases. I regard them as most invaluable medicines, and nothing could induce me to be without them.

JACOB MESERVE.

TIPTON, Dec. 3, 1874.

We take great pleasure in informing you of the surprisingly beneficial results from the use of your English Remedy, The Cordial Balm of Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills, in a case of great Nervous Debility and ought to banish not only all ideas of retrogressions, but should inspire the most perfect confidence. It cannot be too often repeated, these are no hypotheses, no vain theories, but palpable truths, material, physical facts, confirmed over and over again by twenty-five years' practical experience in the leading hospitals of England and France as well as by thousands of testimonials held by every one of our agents, freely offered by sufferers restored to sound health and continued use furnished through the means of the world-renowned DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

It is styled as above for the reason that its great efficacy in rheumatic complaints is just as apparent as in gout, and thousands of sufferers in Massachusetts to-day, cured of rheumatism by its use, mention the Proprietor's name with benedictions of praise.

This medicine is for sale at all Druggists throughout the United States and Canada. If it happens that your Druggist has not got it in stock, ask him to send for it to any of the Wholesale Druggists in Boston. Price $1 a bottle.

A BLESSING TO MANKIND,

and no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

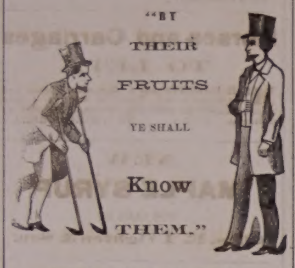
FACTS PROVEN

BY THE

TEST OF EXPERIENCE.



THE CAUSE OF GOUT.

It proceeds from a deficiency of, or an alteration in the cutaneous, urinary or intestinal secretions. This definition leads us to the solution of a second and no less important question:

HOW TO CURE THE GOUT.

This can only be accomplished by a course of treatment capable of establishing the perspiration, if suppressed, of inducing a proper flow of urine, and of destroying the obstinate constipation when it exists. But it is not sufficient that these three functions act properly as respect quantity, but above all, and before all, their quality must have our attention. Indeed, we have mentioned not only a deficiency but also an alteration of secretion. For the perspiration, the urine, and the evacuations should be not only sufficiently abundant, but should carry off certain principles whose stay would produce the most serious disorders.

This is precisely what we see in the Gout. Does it not often happen that after an attack, the joints become deformed by chalky concretions? These gouty deposits have been analyzed by the Chemists Wallaston, Fourneroy, Vanquillin and Barnell.—Every first-class physician should know their composition, then there would remain to find a means to prevent these salts spreading, and, as it were, condensing of themselves throughout the system. The receipt from which is compounded the will produce this desirable result, because it gives to the products of the body the quantity and quality necessary.

CHRONIC GOUT having been engendered insensibly during a certain lapse of time, time is necessary for its removal. Its elimination must take place atom by atom. It is, therefore, not surprising that patience should be required for a complete cure. We must be careful not to confound the acute with the chronic condition; if the latter, it requires weeks to remove it; in the former, a few doses only are necessary to effect a complete cure.

By persevering a longer or a shorter time, according to the severity of the case, the joints will gradually recover their suppleness, and the nodes will be seen to soften and diminish insensibly. This last is an infallible test of the wonderful properties of the

DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

To this unerring proof we can, by the aid of Chemistry, add another, equally palpable and convincing:

The articular concretions are composed principally of uric acid, waters of ammonia, of soda, and of phosphate of lime. These are precisely the salts which we find in the various excreta, particularly in the urine; so that chemical reagents which show not a scarcely a trace of these before taking the DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE, will demonstrate an enormous proportion after its use.

Thus the concretions, the principal components of which analysis has shown can be again reproduced, and will thus furnish the most convincing proof any medicine can offer. This, then, is the most rational plan of proceeding, and which enabled us to answer the question of a certain English M. P., "WHAT HAS BECOME OF MY GOUT?" We told him that "it followed the course of the evacuations," since chemical analysis, as has been said, finds in them all the principles which produce it. Henceforth it is clear that this medicine is and ought to banish not only all ideas of retrogressions, but should inspire the most perfect confidence. It cannot be too often repeated, these are no hypotheses, no vain theories, but palpable truths, material, physical facts, confirmed over and over again by twenty-five years' practical experience in the leading hospitals of England and France as well as by thousands of testimonials held by every one of our agents, freely offered by sufferers restored to sound health and continued use furnished through the means of the world-renowned DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

It is styled as above for the reason that its great efficacy in rheumatic complaints is just as apparent as in gout, and thousands of sufferers in Massachusetts to-day, cured of rheumatism by its use, mention the Proprietor's name with benedictions of praise.

This medicine is for sale at all Druggists throughout the United States and Canada. If it happens that your Druggist has not got it in stock, ask him to send for it to any of the Wholesale Druggists in Boston. Price $1 a bottle.

BOOK AGENTS wanted to sell "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser." It is the cheapest book ever published; 288 pages, over 250 illustrations, $1.50. Thousands buy it at sight, who could not be induced to purchase the high-priced books treating of Domestic Medicine. Unlike other books sold through agents this work is thoroughly advertised throughout North America. This fact, together with the large size, elegant appearance, and many new features of the book, causes it to sell more rapidly than any work ever published in this country. Those of my agents who have had experience in selling books, say that in all their previous canvassing they never met with such success or made so large wages, as since commencing the sale of my work. Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is now discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or Inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours or pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not know ing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

—USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs!

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents.'

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. Preparatory Baptism.

[Vicksburg Herald.]

He is an industrious colored man, living in a small cabin down the river, and his wife is a corpulent, good-natured woman, but very deaf.

Some weeks ago Reuben began to ponder. He had never been a bad nigger, but he had never embraced Christianity, much to the sorrow of Aunt Susan, his wife, who has been prepared for heaven, lo! these many years past. The more he pondered the more he became convinced that he ought to become a Chiristian, and Aunt Susan encouraged him with tender words and tearful eyes.

The old man came to town several days ago to see about joining a church, and was informed that he would have to be baptized before he could become a member. He didn't relish the idea very much, but he informed his wife that he would consent, and she clasped her hands and replied:

"Glory to Richmond—de angels am a comin'!"

Uncle Reuben got the idea, the other day, that he'd like to try the water alone before being publicly baptized, and, while his wife was getting breakfast ready he slipped down to the river bank to take a preparatory dip. He removed his coat, hat and boots, placed them on a log, and, as he descended the bank, his broad feet slipped and the convert came down on the back of his neck.

"What de debbil——!" he commenced, as he picked himself up; but, suddenly remembering that he was soon to join the church, he checked himself and remarked:

"I'm ashamed of dat, and I hope de angels will 'scuse me!"

He put one foot into the water, drew back with a shiver, put in the other, and looked longingly toward the house. At that moment Aunt Susan began singing:

"We's gwine up to glory:
We's gwine on de cars!"

And old Reuben braced up and entered the water.

"Yes, we's gwine up to glory!" he remarked as he waded along—"gwine on de fast express!"

At the next step his foot struck a sunken log, and he pitched over it and under water head first. As soon as he came to the surface and blew the water from his mouth, he yelled:

"Woosh! what in blazes is dis yer performance?"

In raising up, his foot slid over a log and under a limb in such a manner that the old darkey was caught fast. He could hang to a stub of a limb, but he could not pull himself forward enough to slip his foot out of the trap.

"Whar's de angels now!" he yelled out, as he kicked the water higher than his head.

Aunt Susan answered with—

"De angels are a-comin'
I hear the music play!"

When the old man realized that he was fast, and must have help from shore, he yelled out:

"Ho! dere, old woman—hi!"

She couldn't have heard a cannon fired on the bank of the river, and went on singing:

"Dare's a seat for me in Heaven—
I'se gwine to jine de band!"

"Hi! dare—I'll jine yer old black head if yer don't hear me!" yelled old Reuben.

He struggled and kicked, got his head under water and out, and yelled:

"Cuss dat old woman! why don't she hear me?"

"Uncle Reube's a-gwine
To be an angel sho'!"

came the song.

"It's a lie—a big debbil lie!" he yelled, pulling his head under water again.

"And he'll fly among de angels,
And play upon a harp!"

continued the old woman as she turned over the bacon.

"Hi! dere—woosh! whoop!" he yelled, floundering around, pulling at his leg.

"De Lawd has got his name,
And dere is a place for him!"

howled the old woman.

"Angels be cussed—whoa! dere, you ole black villum!" yelled uncle Rube.

"Dey'll dress him up in white, Wid a crown upon his brow," walled Aunt Susan as she poured the water off the potatoes.

"If I ebber git out o' dis ribber alive, I'll break her old deaf head, I will!" growled the victim, and then raising his voice he shouted:

"You dere, old Satan—hi! hi!" As if in direct answer came the song:

"He struggled wid de evil one,
But he gained de victory, shore!"

"Susan—ole cuss Susan—if I had ye by de wool I'd bang dat ole deaf head agin de cabin till yer eyes couldn't see!" he screamed and he made another tremendous effort to get loose. It was successful, and just then she sang:

"Oh, whar's de angels now,
Send him 'long—send him 'long!"

"De angel am a comin'!" growled Uncle Reuben as he waded ashore—"an' he'll turn dat cabin inside out!"

He limped up to the house. She was placing the meal on the table singing:

"He's gwine to be baptized—
He's gwine——————"

when he entered the house and gave her a cuff on the ear which nearly loosened the roots of her hair.

"Oh! yes—Ize an an angel wid wings on I is!" he yelled, as he brought her another cuff—"and Ize a gwine to glory—and I'll knock yer ole head off—and Ize gwine to jine de band—and you deaf ole alligator—and Ize a gwine up to heaven—and blast yer old deaf ears—and de glory am a comin'!"

People who know Uncle Reuben say that he swears again with great relish, and it is certain that he hasn't been up to Vicksburg to be baptized and become a church member.

A Fearful Riot.

Advices from Salvador give the following account of a dreadful riot at San Miguel, a town of 40,000 inhabitants in the southern part of the Republic: Discontent had been excited against the Government by its refusal to allow the pastoral of the Bishop of Salvador, written in a tone hostile to the laws, to be read in the churches. There had also been considerable hostile feeling among the lower classes, owing to some regulations requiring dealers to use a new market place. While matters were in this condition, a Catholic priest named Palacios preached a violent sermon against the authorities on Sunday, the 10th ult. That evening a mob arose, attacked Cabilao, and liberated 200 prisoners. They then proceeded to assault the garrison and took the Cuartel, killed Gens. Espinoa and Castro, cut the former to pieces and threw the pieces at each other, split the skull of Gen. Castro and threw him over a wall. He died in three days. The garrison were nearly all assassinated; also many citizens. After this the mob set fire to some sixteen houses with kerosene. Before the town was entirely destroyed it fortunately happened that the British ship Phantom was at La Union, where she landed her marines, who, with the garrison and troops from Amapala marched to the relief of San Miguel and put down the mob. The Curate Palacios, at last accounts, was arrested with others, and many of the inferior banditti had been shot by order of President Gonzales, who arrived with troops. With the houses destroyed and pillaged the damage is estimated at $1,000,000, and commercial failures are looked for in consequence. The country has been declared in a state of siege, and President Gonzales is taking measures to bring the perpetrators of the outbreak to punishment. The Diario (official) and all public prints abound in indignation against the priests, who were the instigators of the savage and sanguinary affair, the Capilutor-Vicar, for the edict published by his order, and Jose Manuel Palacios, ex-canoningo of the Cathedral of San Salvador Municipality, asked to have Palacios removed, but the Curia Ecclesiastica paid no attention to the petition. He was continually sowing hatred between the lower and the well-to-do classes, and the result follows. One curious discovery was made after the murderous affair was over. On the persons of some of the dead rebels were found passports which read, "Peter, open to the bearer tha gates of heaven who died for religion." Signed, George, Bishop of Salvador, and sealed with the seal of the Bishopric of San Salvador.

A child of Mr. A. Langley, who lives two miles from Gadsden, Ala., while playing in the yard, was attacked by a rooster and was knocked down and spurred several times in the face and head before the mother could rescue it. Dr. Ewing, who was called in, found that one stroke of the spur had penetrated the brain. The little sufferer—eighteen months old—lingered in great agony, when death came to its relief.

On the 12th inst., Mr. Prescott and Ira Chandler, of Newport, were thrown from their carriage while coming down Claremont hill. Mr. P. escaped with slight injuries. Mr. C. fell behind the animal's heels, his head caught between the tugs and the thills, and being also entangled in the lines he was dragged to the bottom of the hill and there taken up insensible. One knee was found to be badly shattered. He also received numerous other bruises.

The Cheshire County Musical Institute will hold its next convention at Keene, commencing Aug. 16th, continuing through the week, with an unusual list of star singers players.

Says the Lawrence Eagle: The members of the Orange Association in this city, propose to get up a celebration and parade, to come off at an early day, provided they can get a dispensation from the Grand Lodge for this purpose. If the thing is attempted it will be a rouser, as lodges from all parts of the State will be invited. We have never been partial to demonstrations of this sort, but if the Orangemen of this State are determined upon a grand parade this Fall, we hope the place selected will be Lawrence. And on the whole, it would not be a bad plan to have such a parade here, so far as to show to the world that such scenes as were enacted on the 12th of July will not be again repeated under any circumstance.

The Saco Water Power Company are constructing a canal on the south side of the Great Ossipee river near Effingham Falls for the purpose of drawing the water off the lake about four feet lower than is now possible. They also contemplate the erection of a dam to raise the water of the lake two feet higher. The surface of the lake and adjacent reservoirs, when raised, will cover fifteen thousand acres. The work has been in progress two years and will take another year. The entire cost of the improvement will be from $30,000 to $40,000.

A Twenty Miles' Swim.

[London Telegraph.]

On Saturday afternoon Captain Webb, master of the Emerald, of Liverpool, accomplished the feat of swimming twenty miles down the Thames. The captain was a seaman on board the Cunard screw steamer Russia on her voyage from New York in April, 1873, when, in mid-ocean, a man fell overboard. The weather was very cold and the wind blowing half a gale. Webb leaped overboard, fortunately loosing his boots as he dived, and kept himself afloat for thirty-five minutes, while he made ineffectual efforts to save the unfortunate sailor, who, it was thought, had been struck by the propeller. The steamer was running sixteen knots an hour at the time and she had to turn and lower a boat, which searched for some time before Webb was found. For this brave act the passengers subscribed £100 and he was subsequently presented with the silver medals of the Liverpool Humane Society and the Royal Humane Society. At the 100th anniversary of the Royal Humane Society, when the Duke of Edinburgh presided at the dinner at Freemasons' Hall, in May, 1874, Captain Webb was selected as the recipient of the first Stanhope gold medal. Having confidence in his own powers the captain has several times published a challenge in Bell's Life to swim a longer distance than anybody else, but his challenge has never been accepted. On Saturday, having backed himself at 2 to 1 for £20 that he would swim twenty miles, a small party embarked on the Falcon steamer at Westminster pier and proceeded to Blackwall, where at 2.25 P. M. Captain Webb took to the water. It was about high water, so that little assistance was obtained from the current for the first few miles. The captain's style of swimming is a slow, steady stroke of the arms, a vigorous action of the legs, and the head is kept down, so that the water flows over the mouth at every stroke. He was accompanied by Professor Beckwith, who from a small boat directed him in a course along the middle of the channel, and a small flotilla of boats at various points brought curious visitors to watch the swimmer. Vessels leaving the port of London gave him a clear course, so that he was little disturbed by passing craft. The wind was steady and the weather fair until shortly after passing Woolwich, when a heavy shower followed several peals of thunder. Occasionally Captain Webb took some brandy and water, but no other refreshment. The distance from Blackwall to Gravesend is seventeen and three-quarters nautical miles—over twenty English miles—and the first half was accomplished in an hour and a half. When asked how he was getting on Captain Webb replied that he was all right but very hungry. He continued the same slow, steady stroke to the end, not once resting by floating or changing his position, except that now and then he took a few strokes on his right side. The entire journey was accomplished in 4h., 53m., and at 7.18 P. M. the Captain was lifted out of the water into the boat opposite the town pier, Gravesend, amid the hearty cheers of the assembled crowd. Captain Webb is a native of Shropshire, and is twenty-seven years of age, a broad shouldered man of medium height and weighs fourteen stone. He went to sea when twelve years old.

Capt. Boyton's Adventures as a Diver.

[Gentleman's Magazine.]

Soon afterward I worked down into the Gulf of Mexico. The first coral I raised was in Catoche. Knocking round about there, I heard of the loss of the schooner Foam. The first mate and three men got saved, but the captain, his daughter, and three men got lost. I slung round to see if she could be raised. After we'd spent the best part of the week we sailed over her and dropped anchor. It was a lovely Sunday morning when we struck her. She lay in sixty feet of water on a bottom as white as the moon. Looking down I could see her leaning over on one side upon the coral reef. When I got down to her I saw she'd torn a great gap in the reef when she ran against it. The mainmast was gone and hung by the fore; I clambered up; I saw whole shoals of fish playing in and out of the hatches. First I went to look for the bodies, for I never like to work while there's any of them about. Finding the fo'castle empty, I went to the two little state cabins. It was rather dark, and I had to feel in the lower bunks. There was nothing in the first, and in the other the door was locked. I pried it open and shot back the lock with my adze. It flew open, and out something fell right against me. I felt at once it was the woman's body. I was not exactly frightened, but it shook me rather. I slung it from me and went out into the light a bit until I got hold of myself. Then I turned back and brought her out—poor thing! She'd been very pretty, and so I carried her in my arms; with her white face nestling against my shoulder, she seemed as if she was only sleeping. I made her fast to the line as carefully as I could to send her up, and the fish played about her as if they were sorry she was going. At last I gave the signal, and she went slowly up, her hair floating round her head like a pillow of golden sea weed. That was the only body I found there, and I managed after to raise pretty considerable of the cargo.

One of my expeditions was among the silver banks of the Antilles, the loveliest place I ever saw, where the white coral grows into curious tree-like shapes. As I stepped along the bottom it seemed as if I were in a frosted forest. Here and there trailed long fronds of green and crimson seaweed. Silver-bellied fish flashed about among the deep-brown and purple sea ferns, which rose high as my head. Far as I could see all round in the transparent water were different colored leaves, and on the floor piles of shells so bright in color that it seemed as if I had stumbled on a place where they kept a stock of broken rainbows. I could not work for a bit, and had a quarter determination to sit down a while and wait for a mermaid. I guess if those sea girls hive anywhere, they select that spot. After walking the inside out of half an hour I thought I had better go to work and blast for treasure. A little bit on from where I sat were the remains of a treasure ship. It was a Britisher, I think, and corals had formed all about her, or rather about what was left of her. The coral on the bottom and round her showed black spots. That meant a deposit of either iron or silver. I made fairly good hauls every time I went down, and sold one piece I found to Barnum of New York.

After I left there I had a curious adventure with a shark. I was down on a nasty rock bottom. A man never feels comfortable on them; he can't tell what big creature may be hiding under the huge quarter-deck sea leaves which grow there. The first part of the time I was visited by a porcupine fish, which kept sticking its quills up and bobbing in front of my helmet. Soon after I saw a big shadow fall across me, and looking up there was an infernal shark playing about my tubing. It makes you feel chilly in the back when they're about. He came down to me slick as I looked up. I made at him and he sheared off. For an hour he worked at it, till I could stand it no longer. If you can keep your head level, it's all right, and you're pretty safe if they're not on you sharp. This ugly brute was twenty feet long, I should think, for when I lay down all my length on the bottom he stretched a considerable way ahead of me, and I could see him beyond my feet. Then I waited. They must turn over to bite, and my lying down bothered him. He swam over three or four times, and then skulked off to a big thicket of seaweed to consider. I knew he'd come back when he'd settled his mind. It seemed a long time waiting for him. At last he came viciously over me, but, like the time before, too far from my arms. The next time I had my chance, and ripped him with my knife as neatly as I could. A shark always remembers he's got business somewhere else when he's cut, so off this fellow goes. It is a curious thing, too, that all the sharks about will follow in the trail he leaves. I got on my hands and knees, and as he swam off I noticed four dark shadows slip after him. I saw no more that time. They did not like my company.

It Was Sam.

[Vicksburg Herald.]

The other day a tall, thin woman from over the river hunted around Vicksburg until she found Coroner Blessing, whose retiring disposition and prompt attention to business are certain to make him famous all over the State within the coming year, and when she was certain of her man, she inquired:

"Business ain't driving now, is it?"

"Well, nothing to brag of. I get a floater or a nigger now or then, but it isn't anything like old times."

She heaved a sigh and continued:

"Sam is missing."

"Sam, Sam," he repeated.

"Yes, my ole man. It's nigh on to twelve weeks since he started to cross the river about six miles above here, and I'm getting anxious. I thought I'd drop down and see if you remembered of having sot on such a man."

"About twelve weeks ago—less see. I believe, I did pull in a floater some ten or eleven weeks since."

"Was he a tall man?"

"Yes I think he was."

"Have a long nose and brick-colored hair?"

"Yes—I remember now."

"Cow-hide shoes and a yeller coat on?"

"Yes—I got that very man!"

"A riz to the surface and was pulled in here, sot on according to law, and duly buried?"

"He was, madam. And do you believe that the body was that of your missing husband?"

"I know it. He could drive mules or paddle a dug-out with any man in Louisiana, but he couldn't swim worth cobs. His canoe flopped over, he went undea, and that's the reason he didn't come home!"

"And do you want the body exhumed so as to make sure?"

"Was he put down to stay?"

"He was well buried, madam."

"Well, it's 'bout as well to let him stay there. He's probably fell away so that I wouldn't know him, and I don't feel like having my narves strung up."

"Well, I'm very sorry for you, madam. If I could have identified the body I would have sent you word right away."

"It's all right. I've felt it in my bones for more'n two months that I was a widder, and the shock don't stagger me like it would at first. I'm sorry, for Sam was kind."

"Yes, it was too bad."

"But he ought to a knowed better, when he couldn't swim. I told him and told him and told him, and that day I told him again, and he hollered back, 'Shut up!'"

"He did!"

"Yes, he did; and now he is under the sile and I'm here! I'm 'bleeged, Mr. ——; I know where he is now, and when I wake up in the night I shan't worry so much. Is there anything to pay."

"No: nothing."

"Well, I'll go home feeling better. It's kinder hard to have the old man go under that way, but I 'spose the Lord knows best. The Bible says we cometh up to be cut down, and I suppose that means drowning as well as shooting."

And she felt to see if her spectacle case was all safe, and started for home.

THE WM. ANSON WOOD'S

EAGLE MOWER.

THE NYE BAY STATE

HORSE RAKE.

Farmers are respectfully requested to inspect these Machines before purchasing elsewhere.

They are believed to be the best Mower and Rake in the Market.

The Mower is strong, durable and of the lightest draft.

IT HAS TAKEN ONE HUNDRED PREMIUMS.

The demand has increased from 200 in 1873 to over 7000 in 1875 which is ample proof of their superiority.

The rake for 1875 is perfected so that by a simple centre-trip attachment, three pounds' pressure with the foot will DUMP THE RAKE.

These Machines can be seen at Hayes Farm and will be cheerfully shown to parties whether they purchase or not. We are ready to compare notes with any other machines in a field trial.

Jottings.

Steamer Appledore became disabled on Monday morning while coming from the Shoals, by the breakage of the cap of the main journal when four miles outside of Whale's Back. Capt. Raud's signals for help were not heard aboard steamer Major until that vessel was inside Fort Point. Capt. Robinson landed his passengers at Jones' wharf and returning, towed the Appledore with her seventy-five passengers into port an hour after the accident. The Appledore was on duty again in the afternoon.

The Court Street Christian Sabbath Schoo and Society, will hold their annual picnic at Pinkham's Grove on Wednesday, leaving this city on the 9 o'clock, A. M. train, and returning on the last train in the afternoon. Tickets may be had at H. B. Buzzell & Son's, or of the committee, at the Depot, on Wednesday morning.

And Now buck-boards will be the rage for a brief season. One appeared on the street, Monday.

The Stavers house on State street, recently sold to Mr. Lyttleton M. Laighton, has been re-sold to Mr. George W. Butler at cost.

Nathaniel of Texas has arranged for a first class fog for the regatta days.

By a private despatch to Mr. D. D. Badger of this city, we learn that the ship Wm. H. Marcy arrived in New York on Monday afternoon.

The Fernalds of Piscataqua.

Editor Biddeford Times; Some few months since I sent a communication to your interesting paper, in which it is stated that Thomas Fernald, the first owner of the Navy Yard Islands in Piscataqua River, was the brother of Dr. Renald Fernald, who came to New Hampshire in 1631. I was led into that belief by reading a biography of one of his descendants; but by the kindness of A. R. H. Fernald, Esq., I have been favored with a copy of the grant of those Islands to the said Thomas, by which I am convinced that he was a son of the said Doctor. Believing it will be interesting to many of the readers of your paper I send a copy of said grant.

There are many lines of descent from Dr. Renald Fernald of the name of Fernald and perhaps as many of other names through his female descendants, and I am one of them, he being my great, great, great grandfather.

Very respectfully
MARK DENNETT.

COPY OF GRANT.

These presents witness that I, Richard Vines, Steward General of the Province of Mayne, have given and granted unto Thomas Fernald, the son of Renald of Piscataqua River Chyveergian, for and in behalf of Sir Ferdinando Gorges, proprietor of the said Province of Mayne.

Two Islands lying and being on the northeast side of Piscataqua River, aforesaid, commonly called or known by the name of Puddington's Islands.

The said Thomas Fernald yielding and paying unto the said Sir Ferdinando Gorges, his heirs and assigns, two shillings and sixpence yearly.

Given under my hand this third day of May, 1845. RICHARD VINES.

This I know and acknowledge to be Mr. Richard Vines, his act and deed written with his own hand.

Per me, EDWARD GODFREY, Gov.

Curiosity.

Curiosity will sometimes lead to acts that cause much tribulation. A lady found herself in rather an unpleasant position recently, all brought about by this incentive referred to. Two families occupied one house. The family in the lower teuements occupied two attic chambers, which were assigned to two men. For some time the men thought the things in their rooms looked as though some one had been turning them over in their absence. But nothing was disturbed in any way. Some time since one of the men, being unwell, did not arise so early in the morning as usual. As he lay in bed the door open and a woman entered, and without noticing him proceeded to a bureau in the room and made an examination of its contents; she then spied a pair of pants lying on the floor, into the pockets of which she immediately put her hand, took out a letter, read it and returned it, and then finding a bunch of keys started to open a trunk in the room. The man lay very quiet all this time watching operations, but when the woman started for his trunk he could contain himself no longer, as he had in that trunk some things he did not care to have her examine, so he gave one bound and landed on the floor near the woman. She ran screaming from the room. It is not even hinted that she had any designs other than those which curiosity led her into. An attempt was made to hush the matter up, but it was considered too good to keep.

Dreads the Fire.

A burnt child always does. At the freight depot yesterday we noticed a barre of flour from John S. Kidder & Co., adl dressed on one side to Gen. Natt Head, on the other to Nathaniel Head, Esq., Hooksett. There will be no chance for Kidder & Co. to lose the amount of their bill through any legal quibble.—Manchester Union.

This barrel of flour was returned to Manchester this morning, the way-bill being endorsed as follows, by the station agent, Horace P. Gage, at Hooksett: "There is no such person as Nathaniel Head, Esq., to be found in Hooksett, and Gen. Natt Head refuses to pay for one end of a barrel flour. He wants a whole barrel or none." Kidder & Co. won't lose the amount on their bill, but they have the freight on a barrel of flour two ways to pay. Burnt children are not so thick in Hooksett as they might be.—Mirror.

—A member of a colored church was conversing earnestly with an acquaintance, and seeking to have him change into better paths, but the friend said that he was too often tempted, to permit him to become a Christian.

"Whar's yer backbone, dat ye can't rose up and stand temptation!" exclaimed the good man. "I was dat way myself once. Right in dis yere town I had a chance to steal a pa'r o' boots—mighty nice ones, too. Nobody was dar to see me, and I reached out my hand and de debbil said take 'em. Den a good sperit whispered fur me to let dem boots alone."

"An' you didn't take 'em?"

"No, sah—not much. I took a pa'r o cheap shoes off de shelf an' left dem boot alone!"

—A boy of five years was "playing railroad" with his sister of two and a half. Drawing her upon a footstool, he imagined himself both the engine and the conductor. After imitating the puffing noise of the steam, he stopped and called out "New York," and in a moment after "Paterson," and then "Philadelphia." His knowledge of towns was now exhausted, and at the next place he cried "Heaven." His little sister said eagerly, "Top, I des I'll det out here."

—Twenty years ago, a poor boy after attentively perusing the life of Lord Nelson, secretly left his parent's roof with a pocket-knife, a sandwich and a bunch of twine as his sole capital, resolving to go to sea and become an admiral. Five miles away from home this brave, ambitious lad was kicked into a duck-pond by an exasperated mule, and he is now one of the wealthiest and most devoted agriculturists in the state of New York.

—As the black clouds rolled up in the west and people prepared for a storm, a citizen standing near the monument wiped his face and remarked: "What a grand sight for an artist!" A woman, not thirty feet away, waiting for a car, soliloquized: "Rain coming, and I'll bet a dollar I get drenched!" Just beyond her was a boy who yelled out: "Oh, yes! rain if yer want to, there haint any circus in town!"—Det. Free Press.

—A young lady in Milwaukee undertook to climb a ladder that had been left standing against the side of her father's house, but before she had gone a quarter of the way up quite a crowd assembled; perceiving which she began at once to descend, observing, with much feeling: "Well, now, there ain't going to be no free circus this afternoon, you bet."

—The Cape Ann Advertiser says: "If a man should wear his pantaloons so long that whenever he appeared on the street, he should be obliged to reach around behind and grab hold of the slack or basement, and hold them up, wouldn't the ladies laugh? And yet half the ladies you meet do just the same thing with their dresses. And it don't look pretty, either."

—Delighted father, viewing the regatta in which his son is taking part:

"Ah, them's the boys for you. When I was young a college student didn't know the difference between a shell and a dug-out."

Sinister spectator, standing near: "Yes, and now they don't know anything else!"

—Tramp, tramp, tramp, the tramps are marching; lock up, housewives, they will come, and demand of you some food, curse you if it isn't good, and rob you of your cash to get them rum.

A Double Danger Averted.

The inhabitant of a malarious region is threatened by a double danger. He is not only compelled to breathe miasma, but swallow it, since it infects not only the atmosphere, but the water. The aerial poison threatens his system through the lungs and pores, the liquid through the stomach. Against this double peril there is but one protection, and that is to invigorate the entire body through the digestive and secretive organs. Ordinary tonics usually fail to accomplish this—Hostetter's Stomach Bitters never. In the tropics, where the diseases originated by malaria are of a far more malignant type than those originated by the same cause in the temperate zone, it enjoys immense and constantly increasing sales, and there is no portion of this continent where it is not the reigning specific for miasmatic fevers and disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels, proceeding from malaria and other causes.

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH OF THE CITY OF PORTSMOUTH call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10 of the City Ordinances and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the city to aid them in the execution of their duty.

CHAPTER X.

Sec. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, &c. shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the health officers may direct.

Sec. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

Sec. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten days from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than ten dollars nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time above specified.

Sec. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any person of fish be permitted to throw any offals of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

Sec. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisances shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

Sec. 12. When any householder shall know that any person within his family is taken sick of the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 13. When any physician shall know that any person who he is called to visit is infected with the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for each refusal or neglect forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the health officers in the name of the city.

Sec. 16. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other thing deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a reasonable time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier —the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may, by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

Sec. 21. No person shall erect, keep or continue or permit to be erected, kept or continued, upon any land occupied by him, any pen for the keeping of swine, or privy, over either of the mill ponds in this city, or so placed that offensive substances therefrom shall be discharged or drained into either of said ponds, or into any creek, or cove or drain leading thereto. And no person shall construct, keep or continue any drain leading from any pen for the keeping of any swine, slaughter-house, privy vault, or other unwholesome or offensive place, into either of said ponds, or to any lot or marsh adjoining the same. And no person shall throw or suffer to be thrown from his land into either of said ponds, or upon any of said flats or marshes, any dead, decaying, unwholesome or offensive animal or vegetable substances.

Daily Chronicle.

—It is said that the romantic story recently circulated about the ex-Empress Carlotta's insanity was all a fiction. "The Empress, instead of being better in health, is worse, and her death, it is believed, is close at hand. For some time her insanity has taken the most brutish form. She never leaves her bed, and has all the habits of an animal. The poor Queen of Belgium has been unable, for two years, to bear the disgusting sight of the unhappy Carlotta, but now, as she cannot last many months, the Queen goes constantly to her. This is the sad truth."

An English Remedy

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS,

For Nervousness and General Debility,

PREMATURE decay, mental and physical prostration, fear, despondency, over indulgence in the use of opium or alcoholic drinks, tobacco, &c., &c. Medicines unrivalled for their wonderful properties and remarkable cures of all Nervous Complaints. Their efficacy is equally great in the treatment and cure of Cancers, Nodes, Ulcers, Pustules, Pimples, Tetter, Fever Sores, Ringworm, Erysipelas, Scald Head, Barbers' Itch, Scurvy, Salt Rheum, Copper Colored Blotches, Glandular Swelling, Worms and Black Spots in the flesh, Discoloration, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth and Nose, Sore Legs, and sores of every character, because the medicines are the very best Blood Medicine ever placed before the people, and are warranted to be the most Powerful Alterative ever originated by man. They impart Strength to the Body and Vigor to the Mind, removing Morbid Sensibility, Depression of Spirits, Dementia and Melancholia.

NERVOUS DEBILITY.

However obscure the causes may be which contribute to render nervous debility a disease so prevalent, so trifling as it does, nearly one-half of our adult population, it is a melancholy fact that day by day, and year by year, we witness a most frightful increase of nervous affections from the slightest neuralgia to the more grave and extreme forms of Nervous Prostration.

It is of the highest importance, then, that individuals should be able to judge for themselves, by their own feelings, if and to what extent they are attacked by this insidious enemy to all health, comfort, and even life itself if left to run its course unchecked by the early and prompt application of curative remedies.

DRUNKENNESS.

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS is the only remedy that has ever proved by practical experience a benefit to those who suffer from over-indulgence in alcoholic liquors; it completely destroys the taste for them, and restores the victim of intemperance to health and vigor. A single trial will prove it to be just what it is recommended to be.

Price $2.00. Large size, $3. Each package of the Cordial Balm contains one box of the Tonic Pills, which may also be had separately at 50 cents per box.

RECENT TESTIMONIALS.

FREWSBURGH, Nov. 12, 1874.

I have used the Cordial Balm and Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills as a preventive and cure for the use of ardent spirits and habitual intoxication, and find them actually a specific in such cases. I regard them as most invaluable medicines, and nothing could induce me to be without them.

JACOB MESERVE.

TIPTON, Dec. 3, 1874.

We take great pleasure in informing you of the surprisingly beneficial results from the use of your English Remedy, The Cordial Balm of Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills, in a case of great Nervous Debility and Prostration, by a member of our family who had been under treatment by different doctors for nearly three years past without any apparent benefit therefrom; but your medicines have produced a most wonderful change for the better and the patient now enjoys comparatively excellent health. MRS. HARRIET STURGISS.

P. S.—We tell all with whom we are acquainte who are similarly afflicted to try your medicines.

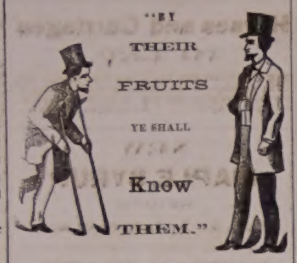
FACTS PROVEN

BY THE

TEST OF EXPERIENCE.



THE CAUSE OF GOUT.

It proceeds from a deficiency of, or an alteration in the cutaneous, urinary or intestinal secretions. This definition leads us to the solution of a second and not less important question:

HOW TO CURE THE GOUT.

This can only be accomplished by a course of treatment capable of establishing the perspiration, if suppressed, of inducing a proper flow of urine, and of destroying the obstinate constipation when it exists. But it is not sufficient that these three functions act properly as respect quantity, but above all, and before all, their quality must have our attention. Indeed, we have mentioned not only a deficiency but also an alteration of secretion. For the perspiration, the urine, and the evacuations should be not only sufficiently abundant, but should carry off certain principles whose stay would produce the most serious disorders.

This is precisely what we see in the Gout. Does it not often happen that after an attack, the joints become deformed by chalky concretions? These gouty deposits have been analyzed by the Chemists Wafanion, Pormeroy, Vanquilin and Barrnall.—Every first-class physician should know their composition, then there would remain to find a means to prevent these salts spreading, and, as it were, condensing of themselves throughout the system. The receipt from which is compounded the will produce this desirable result, because it gives to the products of the body the quantity and quality necessary.

CHRONIC GOUT having been engendered insensibly during a certain lapse of time, time is necessary for its removal. Its elimination must take place atom by atom. It is, therefore, not surprising that patience should be required for a complete cure. We must be careful not to confound the acute with the chronic condition; if the latter, it requires weeks to remove it; in the former, a few doses only are necessary to effect a complete cure.

By persevering a longer or a shorter time, according to the severity of the case, the joints will gradually recover their suppleness, and the nodes will be seen to soften and diminish insensibly. This last is an infallible test of the wonderful properties of the

DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

To this unerring proof we can, by the aid of Chemistry, add another, equally palpable and convincing:

The articular concretions are composed principally of uric acid, waters of ammonia, of soda, and of phosphate of lime. These are precisely the salts which we find in the various excreta, particularly in the urine; so that chemical reagents which should scarcely a trace of these before taking the DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE, will demonstrate an enormous proportion after its use.

Thus the concretions, the principal components of which analysis has shown can be again reproduced, and will thus furnish the most convincing proof any medicine can offer. This, then, is the most rational plan of proceeding, and which enabled us to answer the question of a certain English M. P., "WHAT HAS BECOME OF MY GOUT?" We told him that "it followed the course of the evacuations," since chemical analysis, as has been said, finds in them all the principles which produce it. Henceforth it is clear that this medicine is and ought to banish not only all ideas of retrogressions, but should inspire the most perfect confidence. It cannot be too often repeated, there are no hypotheses, no vain theories, but palpable truths, material, physical facts, confirmed over and over again by twenty-five years' practical experience in the leading hospitals of England and France, as well as by thousands of testimonials held by every one of our agents, freely offered by sufferers restored to sound health and continued use furnished through the means of the world-renowned DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

It is styled as above for the reason that its great efficacy in rheumatic complaints is just as apparent as in gout, and thousands of sufferers in Massachusetts to-day, cured of rheumatism by its use, mention the Proprietor's name with benedictions of praise.

This medicine is for sale at all Druggists throughout the United States and Canada. If it happens that your Druggist has not got it in stock, ask him to send for it to any of the Wholesale Druggists in Boston. Price $1 a bottle.

Pulmocine Cordial.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or Inflammation of the Mucous, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

Moody and Sankey.

Rev. Stuart Dodge, a son of the Hon. William E. Dodge, and Professor in the college in Beyrout, Syria, returned recently from London, where he has been attending the Moody and Sankey revival meetings. Sunday morning, before a small audience in Olive Chapel, New York, he gave an account of these meetings.

"If you were in London to-day," said the speaker, "and wanted to attend a morning meeting in Her Majesty's Opera House or in Haymarket Theatre, you would find these vast halls crowded at 8 o'clock, and the English in London are not generally early risers. Again, in the afternoon, for the endeavor is not to make these meetings conflict with the usual Sunday meetings, you would find the hall crowded with women perhaps, and in the evening a large audience almost wholly of young men. The large halls are always crowded with from 5,000 to 10,000 persons. All classes are represented at them. On week days, when Moody holds the Bible meetings, long lines of carriages stand before the Haymarket Theatre, and sometimes in the private boxes may be seen members of the royal family, and always the Duchess of Sunderland. In Victoria Hall, in South Condon, the poorest classes congregate, glad to hear these men talk and sing.

"Some of us," said Mr. Dodge, "remember Mr. Moody as he appeared some years ago. A rather thin, medium-sized, high-voiced man. Now, when he arises to speak we see a large, burly man, with a deep, commanding voice that can make itself heard in the largest building. One characteristic is striking; his self-forgetfulness. He seems to lose all thought of self, and stands up joyfully to tell men what they must do to be saved. He is without education, but is prodigiously in earnest, full of love for men, and anxious to lead them to Christ. He seems to thrive on hard work, often speaking for forty-five minutes, and many times in one day. When he speaks only two or three times, they say he is resting. He is a medium-sized man, with square shoulders, a magnificent breathing apparatus, and a thoughtful face. He quietly sits down to the little instrument, and saying, 'I trust that Christian people here will pray that this hymn may be blessed,' or perhaps before singing he prays himself, and then sings one of those simple hymns, 'The Ninety and Nine,' or 'Hold the Fort,' his clear voice ringing out through the building amid the breathless silence of the vast congregation, reaching even out into the street further than Mr. Moody's voice could reach. The people drink it. The music reaches their hearts.

"The great secret of the success of these men is that they speak from the heart, and they don't shoot over the heads of the people. Spurgeon said that there had been many men who came to England to preach and convert the people, but too often their utterances had been indistinct, and what they said was not exactly understood; 'but when Moody speaks and Sankey sings, we know just what they mean.'

"There was a good deal of complaint at first about the inquiry meetings. Protestant confessionals' they were called. It was Moody's habit to say, "There are souls here that want to be saved. I wish the Christians here would talk to them. Don't use your own words; use the Bible words.' Or, 'Are there any here who love Christ? I wish such would stand up.' A thousand people would spring to their feet. Then he would ask them to talk with those who had not arisen; and in this way the whole assemblage would be made into a vast inquiry meeting. Christians have thus learned the luxury of helping others to find the Lord. Mr. Moody would sometimes say in a meeting, 'We want to consecrate ourselves to Christ. How many will try, with God's blessing, to point some soul to Christ this week?' and then there would be a general uprising among the congregation.

"Mr. Moody has a wonderful control over his audiences. Sometimes he said, 'There are many unconverted people without who cannot get into the building, I wish the Christians here would go out and let them in, and spend the time they would spend here in praying for God's blessing on the work;' and thousands would arise and go out to admit as many more.

"This movement is doing much toward breaking down denominational barriers, and clergymen of all denominations are gathering around these two men. The whole land seems to feel their influence. At the Epsom races those who, as is their custom, went to distribute tracts met with a far different reception from that usually given them. Instead of being jeered at and jostled and driven from the grounds, they were almost gladly received, and from the duchess' carriage to the costermonger's cart they went unmolested.

"The open air meetings have been very successful, too. 'There was nothing like an excitement,' said the speaker, in concluding: 'but a great stillness and solemnity, and the felt presence of the Lord permeating the whole city.'"

—An elderly lady named Cannon of Massachusetts was standing by an iron sink during a thunder storm when she was prostrated by lightning. She was entirely senseless, and was so charged and battered by the electric current that the gold beads about her neck were melted, but she lives and ascribes her escape to the silken cap she wore.

Daily Chronicle.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 21, 1875.

News and Notes.

The syenite monolith known as Cleopatra's Needle is to be transported to London by sea, by casing it in wood, and rolling it overboard. To make it float properly, it is to be covered with timbers and planks till the boxing is large enough to float stone and all. To compensate for its tapering form, one end is to be made larger than the other, and when finished, the timber dressing will be something over twenty feet at the larger end. The ends will be tapering, to assist the steamer in towing, and even if the cigar-shaped mummy runs aground, its casing will save it from harm. The most riskful part of the voyage will be the launching and the rolling ashore. In this connection it may be transported through the canals in Holland in somewhat the same way. The flues are plugged up with wood, and steam-openings are covered with air-tight caps, and, when well painted with red lead, the boilers are rolled into the canals, and, behind a steamboat, make their voyage in perfect safety.

Last Saturday afternoon the dwelling house of Cotton H. Foss, Esq., in Strafford, was burned to the ground with nearly all of its contents. The fire was caused by a little boy, a grandson of Mr. Foss, exploding fire crackers in the attic. The little fellow thought it was good fun and he had a narrow chance in getting out of the burning building. Mr. Foss and his family were away in an adjoining field haying when the fire broke out. It was impossible to save much of anything from destruction. The loss is about $3000. Partially insured.

The Concord People, the organ of the Roberts wing of the democratic party, boldly denounces the Weston iniquity in the following words: "It is worse than foolishness to declare, or even to imagine, that the masses have any share in approval of the illegal and unconstitutional action of the democrats in matters associated with the Senatorial questions in districts Two and Four."

The Detroit Free Press from Kalamazoo says that employes on the Kalamazoo and South Haven Railroad bring the report that Donaldson alighted between South Haven and Nancotuck, on Sunday, in an exhausted condition, and that medical aid had been sent him from South Haven.

Lady Jane Franklin.

The cable, says the Boston Journal, brings intelligence of the death at London, on Sunday night, of Lady Jane Franklin, whose character exemplified the highest ideal of womanly fortitude and devotion, and whose name is cherished with tender regard among tens of thousands of English-speaking people who know her only by the sad and romantic story of her life. She was born near the opening of the present century, either in 1802 or 1805, and was the daughter of John Griffin, Esq. In 1826 she became the wife of Sir John Franklin, whose first wife, Eleanor Ann, a poetess of considerable reputation, had died the year previous. In 1836 Sir John was appointed to the Governorship of Tasmania or Van Dieman's Land, and his wife accompanied him. This office Sir John retained for five years, during which time he obtained a strong hold upon the affections of the people by his wise administration of their affairs. He founded a college, endowing it from his own funds; established a scientific association, publishing the records of its transactions at his own expense; and in many other ways evinced a deep personal regard for the interests of the people. So fragrant was his memory and so enduring the popular affection for him that years afterward, when his fate in the northern seas was an unsolved mystery, the people of Tasmania collected £1700 and sent it to Lady Franklin to assist her in the search for her husband. It was in 1845 that Sir John set out on his third and last expedition to the Arctic shores. He was put in command of the good ships Erebus and Terror, strongly built, thoroughly equipped, and manned by picked crews numbering 138 men. Months and years elapsed without intelligence from the expedition or its brave commander. Anxiety deepened into suspense, and suspense into melancholy certainty, when, in 1859, after persistent endeavors on the part of Lady Franklin, the British Government, and private explorers, and several unsuccessful expeditions in search of the missing ships, McClintock's expedition solved the mystery, and proved beyond a donbt that the brave Sir John had perished, June 11, 1847, and that one by one his officers and men had followed him, in their desperate attempts to make their way southward. During these fourteen years of terrible anxiety, Lady Jane had never once abandoned the hope that her husband might still be living; and with indefatigable courage and perseverance she organized expedition after expedition to ascertain his fate.

After the fact of his death was established Lady Jane remained loyal to his memory, and to the work which he had prosecuted with so much energy and devotion. Sufficient records of his voyage were found to prove that his party had solved the old riddle of a northwest passage, and she devoted the remainder of her life and all her means to supplementing his labors by further discoveries and explorations. She has been active in schemes of private and public benevolence, and her name is identified with many of the most useful charities in England.

In 1849, in response to an appeal addressed by her to the people of this country, Mr. Grinnell equipped an expedition to the northern seas in search of her husband, and ten years later she visited America as Mr. Grinnell's guest. She has always been regarded in this country with a feeling of reverence and affection not less deep and sincere than that manifested for her in England. Indeed wherever her name and story are known, her character has shed a new lustre on womanhood, and taught an impressive lesson of patience, loyalty and self-sacrifice.

Man and Porpoise.

[New York Mercury.]

Thursday afternoon, when the Coney Island Beach was fullest of strollers and bathers, one of the most remarkable fights on record took place between a man and a large porpoise. The fish had been disporting himself close to the shore, and when the tide reached its lowest ebb he found himself penned up a inlake of perhaps a hundred yards long formed by the sand bars of the inlet in front of the railroad depot. Seaward the fish would have had to plow over ten feet of sand to reach deep water, and up the inlet another bar stretched across so scantily covered with water that the fish, after many fruitless efforts, ceased to attempt to escape, in that way. The idlers on the beach were first made aware of his presence by the appearance of what they all believed to be a shark's fin cutting the water in his swift darts from one bar to another. Although the imprisoned fish occasionally took long leaps above water, succeded by dives in the true porpoise fashion, "A shark! a shark!" was passed from one mouth to another, and the bathers betook themselves to the beach with a haste that savored of panic. Among these was one man, Michael O'Brien, of Dean and Smith streets, Brooklyn, who had been entertaining spectators with marvel-feats in swimming. As soon as he saw the cause of the panic he determined to make an effort to catch a fish weighing more than himself, despite the fact that he, too, believed it to be a shark. The fish made a dart inshore, and O'Brien leaped into the water, and at first attempt grappled it around the body with both arms. The finny monster seemed a little dazed at first, and O'Brien had assumed an upright position, with it in his arms, and was staggering toward the beach before it made a struggle; when it did wiggle its tail, however, O'Brien's grasp loosened, and the fish darted midlake, where the water was eight feet deep in places. O'Brien swam out after him, and with great courage grappled him again in the deep water. The porpoise dived, and the man disappeared with him, and reappeared twenty feet distant, but together, O'Brien apparently having found a fin that was not to slimy to hold on to. The fish seemed thoroughly frightened, and made a swift break toward the bar, towing the man along both disappearing and reappearing, as the fish chose to dive or rise. In the shallow water O'Brien again recovered a foot-hole on bottom, and released the fin to take a better working grasp around the body of the porpoise. The fish made a grand effort for liberty, and almost lifted his tormentor out of the water, by a flirt of his tail. It succeeded in freeing itself, and darted off for the other bar, O'Brien following, not so speedily of course, but fast enough to establish his claim to the highest rank in the natatorial art. The fish was penned in again, and O'Brien got another hold around his body. The slime was too yielding for his grasp, and the tapering body of the fish slid through his arms. Both were well-nigh exhausted now, the fish too much so to swim out of the reach of his pursuer, and the man too tired to exert strength enough to lift his prey out upon the beach. O'Brien, however, renewed his grip upon the pectoral fin of the porpoise, and both were quiescent for a few seconds to regain breath. The fish recovered soonest, and made another dart for liberty toward the outlet bar. This time he was successful, the tide having risen enough during the fight to leave a foot of water over the sand. An incoming wave helped him half over by the undertow, and a second lifted him clean across. O'Brien was close to him when he reached deep water, and watched his porpoiseship swimming from wave to wave until he got clear beyond the breakers. It was a gallant fight. The fish was all of six feet, weighing, perhaps, 200 pounds, and in his supposed character of a shark was an antagonist to be avoided rather than willingly encountered. O'Brien, the all but successful contestant, is a modest-looking individual, about five feet seven inches high, of muscular build, and trained to athletic feats. Still, he would not be taken for a man who would take the chances he did "just for the fun of it," as he afterwards remarked.

—The graduating class of Hamilton College petition the trustees to remove Prof. Henry A. Fink, the rhetorical professor, for "impropriety in his personal intercourse with students," besides partiality, deceit, and inconsistency. The class of 1874 adopted a similar memorial.

—A graduate of the Troy High School misbehaved at the commencement exercises, and by way of punishment the faculty refused to give him a diploma. He will bring a suit to compel them to yield up the document, claiming that, as he had passed the examination, they had no right to keep it from him.

—The Pall Mall Gazette quotes with admiration the beautiful language of the Herald, averring that "the fountain of tears lies very near to that of joy, and the successful jubilant celebration of the hundreth anniversary of Bunker Hill, now that is over, gives place to sentiments that have a tinge of sedate melancholy."

—When the measles broke out among the natives of New Zealand twenty-one years ago, just as the same disease has now broken out in the Fejee Islands, all efforts to cure the Maoris proved hopeless. Their only idea of relief from fever and skin irritation was to plunge into the brook which ran by each "pah," so "driving the disease in," and making it fatal in a few hours.

—An elaborate book on the violin, its famous makers and their imitators, will soon appear in London. Its illustrations will show the exact proportions of the most famous instruments, among them the celebrated violin made by Joseph Guarnerius, on which Pagam's marvellous successes were achieved. Since 1840 it has lain untouched under a glass case in the museum at Genoa.

—Rouher, chief of the Bonapartists, is accused by the French republicans of having destroyed his chances forever with his party by brazenly avowing their conspiracy secrets in open Legislature. He and his party appear more confident than ever of getting back into imperial power, and their organs openly assert that the Marshal President only holds the reins in trust for their benefit.

—A Milwaukee belle, attending a theatre recently, complained in one of the scenes that the light was too dim to show the acting properly. "Won't you try this glass?" asked the escort, handing her his lorgnette. Hastily covering the suspicious looking object with a handkerchief, she placed it to her lips, took a long pull, and handed it back in disgust, saying, "Why, there ain't a drop in it!"

—Over 2,000 inscriptions in the Phœnician tongue, engraved on stone, have now been discovered among the ruins of Carthage lying on one particular spot, or rather hole of the ground. Fify years ago only five or six Carthagenian inscriptions were extant. The more recent findings prove clearly that two styles of forming the letters of the alphabet were prevalent among the inhabitants of North Africa, and also furnish valuable historical dates.

—Vagrants in Springfield are made to pay for a lodging and breakfast by work on improvements from 7 o'clock until 11 in the morning. An overseer watches them closely, because they are always ready, after having the sleep and food, to get away without giving the required equivalent. Ten of them were recently cleaning brick in the burned blocks. A horse ran away, the overseer went to catch it, and when he came back not one of his gang was there.

—Japanese students in European and American colleges have learned to write fluently in English, French, and German, and for some time back have been enlightening the Western world on the nature and functions of Eastern religions, superstitions, and customs. They swing an incisive pen on Buddhism, Mikadoes, etc., far away from home, where candid criticism can't hurt them. They fancy amateur newspaper writing. They ought to be engaged as reporters.

—A young minister was unexpectedly delayed when about to start for a new parish by the incapacity of his presbytery to ordain him, and he explained by sending a telegram to the deacons of that church as follows: "Presbytery lacked a quorum to ordain," which reached the astonished deacons metamorphosed in this shape: "Presbytery tacked a worm to Adam." After grave consultation the mystified church officers concluded it was a facetious way to announce his marriage, and proceeded to provide lodging for two in stead of one.

Rockingham County Farm.

[By an Ex-Commissioner.]

Dear Chronicle: A friend has cut from some poorly-informed newspaper, the following item, and inquires what it can mean:

"A committee has been appointed to investigate the accounts and reports of the county commissioners of Rockingham County, and treasurer, and the superintendent of the county farm, with power to send for persons and papers. We learn that they will commence their investigation at the Brentwood county farm, Aug. 2d."

The statement is partially true in fact, but utterly false by implication. A committee was, on motion of Messrs. Thomas Leavitt of Exeter, James G. Adams of Candia and John M. Weare of Seabrook, appointed by the County Convention of the Legislature, to inquire into the mode of conducting the County Farm, House of Correction and Insane Asylum, and report whether the plan of management is the best for the parties, and the most economical for the County. But the Treasurer's accounts were not alluded to at all, nor was there any suggestion, desire or intimation that any accounts of the Commissioners or Superintendent should be examined or "investigated," except to the end as stated above. On the contrary, all the accounts of the year have already been thrice examined or investigated, and in every case approved.

First, the County Commissioners, who are themselves an auditing board, examined (and approved) the accounts of the Superintendent and Treasurer, as the law requires. Then the County Auditors appointed by the Convention last year, (Chas. H. Smith, Esq., of Newmarket, being chairman,) audited and thoroughly approved the accounts of the Commissioners and Treasurer, as properly vouched, correctly cast, and all monies legitimately and carefully expended. Then a committee of the Convention, of which Hon. A. R. Hatch was chairman, to whom the report, accounts and recommendations of the Commissioners and Treasurer were referred, reported back, desiring information on some details, but recommending that all the money asked for by the Commissioners be granted, and $1000 more, for the next year, and distinctly stating that so far as they knew, all business had been well and properly conducted by the County officers. Both Mr. Hatch and Mr. Leavitt repeatedly stated that there were no charges or suspicions against any officer, but if a better or cheaper policy could be adopted for the County, it was desirable to ascertain it.

After all that has been said in a general way, against the County Farm, and its management, and this almost invariably by those who have never examined and know little or nothing about it; the institution has constantly grown in public favor, and increased in usefulness, against all opposition, ever since its establishment. And we have yet to meet the first individual competent to judge without bias or prejudice, who, after acquaintance with the Farm, does not pronounce it well and economically managed, and of great benefit and saving to the County.

In some remarks made by Mr. Hunnewell of Exeter, at the meeting of the convention at the Farm, he was reported as opposing the Farm and its management, but he informs me that he regards Mr. Pollard as particularly capable and faithful as Superintendent of the Farm, which he deems none too large, and decidedly the best way to support the paupers and lesser convicts.

The fact is, that in this County, almost alone of all the State, the Farm has always encountered a great amount of ignorant and mistaken opposition and misrepresentation; and the present movement for a committee of inquiry, pending the report of which, the completion of the new House of Correction, so much needed, is delayed, can but work detriment to the public interest and increase the public cost. The result will unquestionably be, the completion of the House of Correction, for no competent committee, after due examination, will ever report against it, nor will the convention ever vote to rescind their order to build it—but all the doubt and delay respecting it, can work only injury by exciting distrust and uncertainty in the public mind.

As to this committee having power to send for persons and papers, we don't see who has any power to pay either committee or witnesses, or to compel their attendance. The convention above can order appropriations; but there their power ends, and the Commissioners may order a meeting of the convention, at their discretion, and pay the same as for attendance on the legislature. There may be a question whether the convention can legally meet and draw pay at the call of their chairman, as it is understood they stand adjourned.

The Rockingham County Convention, with all its lawyers, has before this done some queer things, such for instance as choosing a committee to purchase the County Farm, and build a County House, when the law distinctly gives all such business into the hands of the Commissioners. And when this delegation procured the passage of an act authorizing the appointment of County Auditors, they failed to fix any pay for their services, and the Commissioners were left to complete the work and pay them.

In no other County but Rockingham, as far as we know, is there this constant discussion and bickering relative to the County Farm policy; and the sooner it is discontinued here, the better for the institution and the public. The management should of course be, and we believe is the best practicable— if not, improve it; but all talk of abandoning or radically changing it, we deem but idle and injurious. That the general policy of the Commissioners has met the approval of the Conventions successively, is shown by their year after year granting all their recommendations for appropriations; and the County form of supporting paupers ought by this time to be beyond question in this State.

The popular voice was undoubtedly against it in this County, and especially in this city; but with all the Counties about us adopting it, our doing so was only a question of time, after all, as otherwise we should have to support most their paupers on our more popular town farms. The necessary cost of supporting all the paupers at one County Farm instead of on thirty or forty town farms, is about one-half the old expense, after all that has been said and sung on this favorite and voluble topic, which everybody else deems themselves so much more capable to handle properly and humanely, than those to whom it is legally entrusted. The pauper taxes of nearly every town in the County except Portsmouth, have been materially reduced by the County taxes. Thus Exeter, who of all towns has least reason to complain of this institution, appropriated $2500 in 1868, before the purchase of the County Farm; this year, but $500.

To Portsmouth almost alone the County Farm has been of little if any benefit, if not indeed an actual bill of increased expense. And why? simply because Portsmouth, where the County Farm might well have been located, still retains her extensive and expensive city farm, for the accommodation of a very small number of paupers, who could be equally happy and comfortable at the County Farm at one-quarter of the cost —while nearly all the other towns have wisely sold their town farms. When all paupers shall be made County paupers, then will much useless expense of ascertaining who are town and who county charges, be prevented, and the taxes of Portsmouth be lessened several thousand dollars annually, and not one pauper be inconvenienced or incommoded thereby.

All these matters are now of only general interest to me, as to any other citizen and tax-payer; but having so recently been connected in the public business with the officials above referred to, I have deemed it worth while to offer this explanation:—defence they need none.

Very truly, your own and the public's humble servant,

FRANK W. MILLER,
Late Co. Commissioner.

Errata.

In the article on the Fernald Genealogy published in the Chronicle this morning, are two errors in the grant, viz: the word, "Chirurgeon" is spelled wrong, and the date 1845 should be 1645. Yours,

A. R. H. Fernald.

Jottings.

We don't wish to find fault with our Street Commissioner, because he is a good man, and seems to know how to repair streets, but we greatly marvel at the fact of his indifference to the claims of his long-suffering and longer-waiting friends who were always born in Portsmouth, always voted the straight democratic ticket through evil as well as good report, and always paid their taxes (when compelled to.) This indifference is particularly manifest in the employment on the public streets of at least one unnaturalized foreigner as one of the assistant foremen in the street department; one who not only does not pay taxes, but does not vote, or at least cannot legally do so. Our belief is that Mr. Commissioner Holmes is doing just right in employing the foreigner alluded to; for the stranger alien seems to know his business; and, in fact is an adept in grading streets and laying sidewalks. But to the victors belong the spoils, is the good old democratic song, and it don't matter, generally, whether or not one is fitted for his position,—he must have a job. There is one profitable lesson, however, that the democrats have learned, and that is, that their men do not set a very high price on the privilege of the ballot; and, as a fortnight's job on the streets just before the city election will fix things, it is throwing away money to employ them the year through. Let us have peace.

At the meeting of the Reunion committee of 1873, Monday evening, the report of a special commitee appointed to select a committee of twenty-five to plan and carry out a proper celebration of the centennial of American Independence next Forth of July, was adopted. The names of the committee are, Ichabod Goodwin, E. H. Winchester, Augustus W. Odiorne, Daniel J. Vaughan, Chas. W. Gardner, Wm. R. Preston, William H. Sise, George W. Marston, Chas. C. Guppy, Dr. A. P. Stevens, Chas. C. Akerman, Wm. R. Boardman, Marcellus Eldredge, Elbredge G. Pierce, Jr., Edward D. Coffin, John E. Colcord, Chas H. Mendum, Albert Laighton, Samuel Dodge, Chas. M. Laighton, William Simes, Frank W. Miller, E. A. Tilton.

A green scum of moss and filth floats continually on the surface of the South Mill Pond, emitting a sickly odor, of which the neighbors justly complain. Cannot these flats be drained and a portion of the alluvial deposits thereon be carted off? If this could be done and the incoming tide be allowed its irrigating power, the offensive smell would soon pass away. There are plenty of farmers and land owners in the immediate vicinity of the Pond who would be glad to remove its sediment for the value received in its richness as a fertilizer.

There were sixty-four entries to the three days' trotting carnival, (20th, 21st and 22d,) a portion of which list consisting of some valued and noted trotters. Pools sell lively at the Rockingham House every evening, and there is good fun at the Trotting Park every afternoon.

At a meeting of the General School Committee on Monday evening it was voted to amend the Regulations and extend the present summer vacation to seven weeks, instead of six, as the rules prescribed.

The fast sailing yacht Wm. H. Russell, Capt. Charles W. Drown, will take passengers to the Oceanic races on Friday and Saturday at $1.50 each for the round trip. This will afford a fine view of the races. Passengers may land on Star island or sail out on the course of the contesting yachts.

A man answering to the description of George Lynch who stabbed Jerome Conlon in Dover river a day or two since has been arrested in Portland and City Marshal Marden has telegraphed the authorities of that city to hold him until he arrives.

At the Rockingham Trotting Park Races on Wednesday in the three minute class, best three in five, ten horses started. G. Dalrymple's mare Lady Sheridan won two heats, Laurel Maid one, and M. A. Linfield's horse Farmer Boy also won two heats when the race was postponed until to-day at half-past one o'clock.

In the 2.38 class five horses started, the chestnut mare Fleetwing, owned by H. G. Smith of Concord, took first money, $150, winning in three straight heats; best time, 2.47 1-2. John Wiggin's horse, Paul Britton taking second money, $100. M. A. Linfield's mare Alice winning third money, $50.

See advertisement in another column of Capt. Shields, who will take out parties to visit the Regatta on Friday, in his neat schooner, called "Can't come it."

It is said that flies are more plentiful this season than ever before; a fact that augurs well for the good health of every one, as the little creatures are said to be very healthy when taken in large doses.

Col. J. C. Butler's annual excursion to Appledore takes place to-day. Fare for the round trip, seventy-five cents. Steamer leaves Jones' wharf at eleven o'clock, A. M., and six, P. M.

Heats and colds abound just now,—colds in the head and mile heats best 3 in 5.

Now is the winter of our discontent made glorious Summer.

This is the season of excursions and picnics, and right well is it being improved.

A Double Danger Averted.

The inhabitant of a malarious region is threatened by a double danger. He is not only compelled to breathe miasma, but swallow it, since it infects not only the atmosphere, but the water. The aerial poison threatens his system through the lungs and pores, the liquid through the stomach. Against this double peril there is but one protection, and that is to invigorate the entire body through the digestive and secretive organs. Ordinary tonics usually fail to accomplish this—Hostetter's Stomach Bitters never. In the tropics, where the diseases originated by malaria are of a far more malignant type than those originated by the same cause in the temperate zone, it enjoys immense and constantly increasing sales, and there is no portion of this continent where it is not the reigning specific for miasmatic fevers and disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels, proceeding from malaria and other causes.

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH OF THE CITY OF PORTSMOUTH call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10 of the City Ordinances and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the city to aid them in the execution of their duty.

CHAPTER X.

Sec. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, &c. shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the health officers may direct.

Sec. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

Sec. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten days from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time above specified.

Sec. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or scatter over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offals of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

Sec. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisances shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

Sec. 12. When any householder shall know that any person within his family is taken sick of the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 13. When any physician shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for such refusal or neglect forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the health officers in the name of the city.

Sec. 16. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other thing deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier —the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may, by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

Sec. 21. No person shall erect, keep or continue or permit to be erected, kept or continued, upon any land occupied cy him, any pen for the keeping of swine, or privy, over either of the mill ponds in this city, or so placed that the offensive substances therefrom shall be discharged or drained into either of said ponds, or into any creek, or cove or drain leading thereto. And no person shall construct, keep or continue any drain leading from any pen for the keeping of any swine, slaughter-house, privy vault, or other unwholesome or offensive place, into either of said ponds, or to any flat or marsh adjoining the same. And no person shall throw or suffer to be thrown from his land into either of said ponds, or upon any of said flats or marshes, any dead, decaying, unwholesome or offensive animal or vegetable substances.

Daily Chronicle.

—Surgery has made a far more rapid progress in this century than medicine. It has been found much easier to cut and mend man than to discover the causes of diseases and the proper remedies therefor. The development of chemistry, truly wonderful, has gone a good way in lending a helping hand to the investigations of the pathologists and promises still greater aid. Not more than two decades since, doctors affected to slight chemical science, and Trousseau, the famous French doctor, and chief of a school, averred that he never had any use for it in his practice.

An English Remedy

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS,

For Nervousness and General Debility,

PREMATURE decay, mental and physical prostration, fear, despondency, over indulgence in the use of opium or alcoholic drinks, tobacco, &c., &c. Medicines unrivalled for their wonderful properties and remarkable cures of all Nervous Complaints. Their efficacy is equally great in the treatment and cure of Cancers, Nodes, Ulcers, Pustules, Pimples, Tetter, Fever Sores, Ringworm, Erysipelas, Scald-Head, Barbers' Itch, Scurvy, Salt Rheum, Copper Colored Blotches, Glandular Swelling, Worms and Black Spots in the flesh, Discoloration, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth and Nose, Sore Legs, and scores of every character, because the medicines are the very best Blood Medicine ever placed before the people, and are warranted to be the most Powerful Alterative ever originated by man. They impart Strength to the Body and Vigor to the Mind, removing Morbid Sensibility, Depression of Spirits, Dementia and Melancholia.

NERVOUS DEBILITY.

However obscure the causes may be which contribute to render nervous debility a disease so prevalent, affecting as it does, nearly one-half of our adult population, it is a melancholy fact that day by day, and year by year, we witness a most frightful increase of nervous affections from the slightest neuralgia to the more grave and extreme forms of Nervous Prostration.

It is of the highest importance, then, that individuals should be able to judge for themselves, by their own feelings, if and to what extent they are attacked by this insidious enemy to ill health, comfort, and even life itself if left to run its course unchecked by the early and prompt application of curative remedies.

DRUNKENNESS.

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS is the only remedy that has ever proved by practical experiments a sure fit to those who suffer from over-indulgence in alcoholic liquors; it completely destroys the taste for them, and restores the victim of intemperance to health and vigor. A single trial will prove it to be just what it is recommended to be.

Price $2.50. Large size, $5. Each package of the Cordial Balm contains one box of the Tonic Pills, which may also be had separately at 50 cents per box.

RECENT TESTIMONIALS.

FREWSBURGH, Nov. 12, 1874.

I have used the Cordial Balm of Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills as a preventive and cure for the use of ardent spirits and habitual intoxication, and find them actively specific in such cases. I regard them as most invaluable medicines, and nothing could induce me to be without them.

JACOB MESERVE.

TIPTON, Dec. 3, 1874.

We take great pleasure in informing you of the surprisingly beneficial results from the use of your English Remedy, The Cordial Balm of Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills, in a case of great Nervous Debility and Prostration, by a member of our family who had been under treatment by different doctors for nearly three years past without any apparent benefit therefrom; but your medicines have produced a most wonderful change for the better and the patient now enjoys comparatively excellent health. MRS. HARRIET STURGISS.

P. S.—We tell all with whom we are acquainte who are similarly afflicted to try your medicines.

FACTS PROVEN BY THE TEST OF EXPERIENCE.

THE CAUSE OF GOUT.

It proceeds from a deficiency of, or an alteration in the cutaneous, urinary or intestinal secretions. This deficiency leads us to the solution of a second and not less important question:

HOW TO CURE THE GOUT.

This can only be accomplished by a course of treatment capable of establishing the perspiration, if suppressed, of inducing a proper flow of urine, and of destroying the obstinate constipation when it exists. But it is not sufficient that these three functions act properly as respect quantity, but above all, and before all, their quality must have our attention. Indeed, we have mentioned not only a deficiency but also an alteration of secretion. For the perspiration, the urine, and the evacuations should be not only sufficiently abundant, but should carry off certain principles whose stay would produce the most serious disorders.

This is precisely what we see in the Gout. Does it not often happen that after an attack, the joints become deformed by chalky concretions? These gouty deposits have been analyzed by the Chemists Wallaston, Fornercy, Vanquilin and Barrneil.—Every first-class physician should know this condition, then there would remain to find a means to prevent these salts spreading, and, as it were, condensing of themselves throughout the system. The receipt from which is compounded the will produce this desirable result, because it gives to the products of the body the quantity and quality necessary.

CHRONIC GOUT having been engendered insensibly during a certain lapse of time, time is necessary for its removal. Its elimination must take place atom by atom. It is, therefore, not surprising that patience should be required for a complete cure. We must be careful not to confound the acute with the chronic condition; if the latter, it requires weeks to remove it; in the former, a few doses only are necessary to effect a complete cure.

By persevering a longer or a shorter time, according to the severity of the case, the joints will gradually recover their suppleness, and the nodes will be seen to soften and diminish insensibly. This last is an infallible test of the wonderful properties of the

DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

To this unerring proof we can, by the aid of Chemistry, add another, equally palpable and convincing.

The articular concretions are composed principally of uric acid, waters of ammonia, of soda, and of phosphated lime. These are precisely the salts which we find in the various excreta, particularly in the urine; so that chemical reagents which showed scarcely a trace of these before taking the DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE, will demonstrate an enormous proportion after its use.

Thus the concretions, the principal components of which analysis has shown to can be again reproduced, and will thus furnish the most convincing proof any medicine can offer. This, then, is the most rational plan of proceeding, and which enabled us to answer the question of a certain English M. P., "WHAT HAS BECOME OF MY GOUT?" We told him that "it followed the course of the evacuations," since chemical analysis, as has been said, finds in them all the principles which produce it. Henceforth it is clear that this medicine is and ought to banish not only all ideas of retrogression, but should inspire the most perfect confidence. It cannot be too often repeated, these are no hypotheses, no vain theories, but palpable truths, material, physical facts, confirmed over and over again by twenty-five years' practical experience in the leading hospitals of England and France, as well as by thousands of testimonials held by every one of our agents, freely offered by sufferers restored to sound health and continued use furnished through the means of the world-renowned DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

BOOK AGENTS wanted to sell "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser." It is the cheapest book ever published; 885 pages, over 250 illustrations, $1.50. Thousands buy it at sight, who could not be induced to purchase the high-priced books treating of Domestic Medicine. Unlike other books sold through agents this work is thoroughly advertised throughout North America. This fact, together with the large size, elegant appearance, and many new features of the book, causes it to sell more rapidly than any work ever published in this country. Those of my agents who have had experience in selling books, say that in all their previous canvassing they never met with such success or made so large wages, as since commencing the sale of my work. Pulmocine Cordial.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-two years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, genly stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all this afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON. Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. News and Notes.

The Cincinnati Commercial closes a long article reviewing the political history of Ohio during the past two years with this paragraph: "We come, therefore, to the conclusion that a republican victory in Ohio this time is a certainty—and that the majority for Hayes will be handsome and emphatic, larger than he received on former occasions, and sufficient to pronounce the doom in the nation forever of the sort of democracy that is now asserting itself in this State."

A party of three, two ladies and a gentleman, came near being lost recently at Hampton Beach by venturing beyond their depths, and but for the presence of mind of an "old salt" would have been seen no more.

The pipe used to carry off the water from the pond in Concord square, Manchester, became clogged up, and investigation revealed the fact that roots had grown directly through the pipe, which is of cement, and becoming matted in the inside completely stopped the passage of the water.

At the New Hampshire and New England Fair a $75 purse is offered for pulling oxen, and $40 for a ploughing match, open to New England States. Sporting men are taking considerable interest in the proposed dog show. Dr. N. Row, of the Turf, Field and Farm, has agreed to deliver a lecture on the peculiarities and uses of the various breeds of dogs.

This suspension of the speculative mania is allowing us to get back toward real prices. Shall we give up all the progress we have made to go to another such a whirl?—Boston Herald.

Says the New York Herald: The Beecher of the old days is dead. The Beecher of freedom and emancipation and religious tolerance—the Beecher who did such valiant service in England—no longer lives. He died under the pen and pistol of Frank Moulton when he signed the letter of contrition—a letter which he could no more deny to the common sense of mankind than Shakespeare could have denied "Hamlet." This Beecher whose speeches we read is only a phantom, who haunts Plymouth church as the ghost of the Danish King haunted the castle of Elsinore. There will be a few faithful watchers to listen to his oracles; but the majesty is gone, the royalty is dead, the crown is tarnished, the sceptre is broken, the glory of the past is inured; and the highest office which even love can bestow is to remember him only as he lived, and to turn in sorrow and shame from the unwholesome apparition which bears his name.

Prof. Quimby has approximately computed the altitude of several mountains as follows: Kearsarge, 2950; Croydon, 2800; Cardigan, 3440; Ascutney, 3100; Sunapee, 2690.

If thirteen reasons why the republicans will carry Ohio this Fall are not enough, we will give two additional points: 1. There are more republicans than democrats—or, rather, more citizens who prefer the republican to the democratic party—in Ohio at this time. 2. The republicans of Ohio propose to vote next fall.—Cincinnati Commercial.

The waste mill of P. C. Cheney & Co. of Amoskeag Village was burned on the 21st, probably by spontaneous combustion. Loss $6000, insured for $2300.

The Medway Murder.

Further particulars of the murder in Medway, Me., have been received. William Pangburn, aged eighty-two years, killed his wife, sixty-one years old, nearly severing her head from her body with an axe as she lay asleep in her bed. The execution of the deed caused no noise and others sleeping in the next room were undisturbed by any movement or outcry. Pangburn made no attempt to escape and at daylight was found sitting in the doorway. He directed the attention of people in the house to the room where his wife lay dead, and it was not until three or four hours had elapsed that he was taken in custody, having remained about the place the whole time, seeming hardly to appreciate what had occurred.

Monday morning a preliminary examination took place resulting in his being fully committed for trial at the August term, and he was carried to the Bangor jail. The material evidence elicited at the examination showed that he frequently quarrelled with his wife; that he had recently threatened her, and that she had told her sister, with whom they were boarding, Mrs. Jones, that she was afraid of her life.

In an interview with a reporter, Pangburn said he and wife retired at 9 o'clock, Saturday night, and for some time were talking pleasantly together of a house which he had rented and into which they were to move very shortly. The next he remembers is that he was was sitting on the front edge of the bed, having gone to sleep on the backside. He had no idea whether he had been there half an hour or three hours, and as he gradually came to himself by the light of the moon he discovered an axe lying on the floor by the side of the bed, and wondered how it came there. Next he noticed how pale his wife was, her face being turned toward him. He went up to her, put a hand on her head and found it was cold. He did not notice any blood and picking up the axe he carried it out of the room. When Mr. Jones got up to kindle a fire shortly after, Pangburn sent him into the room where the body of his wife was lying. The head was nearly severed from the body, having been struck at the base of the brain, and he says he must have thought he was fighting some wild beast to strike such a blow. He says he does not think any one else could have done it, but has no recollection of any participation in the tragedy, for which he expresses the greatest sorrow, saying he would not had it happened for the whole world.

The murdered woman was his second wife by whom he had nine children, six of whom are now living. He formerly lived in Monquart, Parish of Kent, N. B., but the last two years has been in Medway and Winn. Since last March he has been at his old home, where he has some property and had some business affairs to settle, and he only returned to Medway last Friday. He says his wife was a good woman; that they never had any serious trouble, and that he loved her. While jealousy is assigned as the cause by his family connections and neighbors, the attendant circumstances are of such a peculiar character as to strongly suggest insanity. Pangburn is a man of good height, has nearly white hair and a face that is not unprepossessing, while in general appearance he would readily pass for a man ten or twelve years younger than his actual age.

Pomeroy has not only been a close student of the savage ways of torturing human beings and of the taking of life, as shown in the diabolical murders of the little Curran girl and the boy Millen, but he has been an apt scholar in the advance school of criminals, and has with great acuteness planned and partly succeeded in—as far as any criminal could without direct outside aid—an escape from the Charles Street Jail. The bold attempt was frustrated by the officers yesterday morning, and the prisoner stopped in his work within a week of what he looked forward to as the hour of his deliverance. His plans, which are now sufficiently well known, did not contemplate the aid of anybody other than that of his mother, to whom he had attempted to send letters containing strong pleas and arguments for certain tools which he was to use in the most approved manner of the skilled jail breaker. He was intending to escape from jail and make his way to Canada, using the greatest care to avoid being retaken both in the States and Canada.

The detail of his plan was to cut out the bricks by the window looking upon the corridor sufficiently to admit the passage of his body, and getting outside the cell wall to lower himself from the iron gallery to the rotunda floor, by means of cords taken out of the window. He was to leave the cell at midnight when the watch was being changed, take advantage of the unlocking, as he supposed he could, fell all who opposed him, clear the jail building and scale the outside wall.

With his love for writing and drawing diagrams, Pomeroy attempted to describe and illustrate his method of escape and flight to some of his family, imagining that there was nothing in his way but possibly the attempt of scared jailors to defend their lives and try to stop him.

The way his work in getting out the mortar has been conducted shows a great deal of cunning, and he had succeeded in loosening several of the bricks while apparently engaged in studying at his table near the window. He had a large Atlas which aided him to cover up his work, and in less than a week he would have been able to throw down enough of the wall to get out of his cell, providing he could file into an iron bar. Some other filing would have been necessary, and he had, as he supposed, arranged for the tools to do it with.

That he had boldly and shrewdly laid plans for his escape must be admitted, but that he could not possibly have got free is certain to those who know how the jail is built. The result of a final act would have been either his death or that of an officer. In one or two matters he had miscalculated, and the fatal mistake was in not knowing about the change of night watches inside the jail. He had counted upon meeting but one officer, "knocking him over" and releasing himself.

Had he succeeded in reaching the rotunda he would have met not one officer but a second, who would have been aroused from a cod nap, in an open adjacent room. Had he been able to have disposed of these, he would have found that they had no means of getting out themselves, and were virtually prisoners in the hands of the turnkey as he was.

The officers are very reticent about the matter, feeling doubtless that they can well take care of their prisoners, and that this merely shows that the boy is more dangerous than at first believed, and requiring a little closer watching. The instrument with which he was releasing the bricks of his cell was a piece of his iron wash dish.

In speaking of the affair Pomeroy coolly says he should have laid any one out who would have tried to prevent his escape.

—The story of the Buffalo operator who was locked in the office at dinner time, and who had to telegraph to various cities to get out, is surpassed by a similar occurrence which happened in St. Louis, lately. An operator was working on one Chicago wire, and feeling a desire for a toothful of the weed, quietly interrupted the report he was sending to instruct the gentleman who was taking from him in Chicago to ask the gentleman on the Detroit wire to tell Powers, who worked about six feet from him, to hand him a chew of tobacco. The instructions were followed out, and in a half a minute Powers tossed over his tobacco box, as he could not fail to respond to a friend who had sent for the favor so great a distance.

New Publications.

The publishers of Scribner call attention to the series of Col. Waring, now being published in that magazine, under the title of "A Farmer's Vacation." These papers are claimed to be among the most amusing as well as practically valuable illustrated articles which have appeared for some time past. Col. Waring is well known as a graceful and entertaining writer. In his recent European travels he was naturally attracted not only by picturesque phases,—quaint scenes and quaint people—but also by the various agricultural customs and devices. His article in the August number describes the pretty isle of Guernsey, and tells a great deal that is of interest about the famous so-called Alderney Cow, which is here "at home." "A Middy in Manila" is a rollicking little illustrated sketch, which reads very like a familiar letter to some old "chum" at home. Albert Rhodes' paper, "Along the Seine," is timely through its summer quality. George W. Cable, of New Orleans, has a story entitled "Madame Delicause," which is thought by some to be his best work. It will have a very foreign smack to Northern readers, but they will find it none the less graphic, witty and charming for that. Dr. Holland, in this number of "Sevenoaks," celebrates a wedding in that rural neighborhood. Then there is a solid essay by G. F. Magoun, on "Education and Free Thought," also "A Word of Encouragement for Timid Linguists." "The Stone Period of the Antilles" (containing some matters not hitherto made public,) "An Englewood Mystery," "How to Treat the Indians," by an Indian Agent; an illustrated paper on "Ice," more of "The Mysterious Island," and verses by poets of note, and poets not of note. In the "Topics of the Time," by Dr. J. G. Holland, "The Old Cabinet," "Home and Society," "Bric-a-Brac," "The World's Work," etc., the usual variety is maintained.

We have received from H. S. Mackie, great Piano, Organ and Music Store, 82 State Street, Rochester, N. Y., the following songs and chorus: Darling Flown to Heaven; Kissing at the Gate; Will you love me when I'm Old; You are Life and Light to me.

Plymouth's Pastor.

[Golden Age.]

If anything were needed to prove that Mr. Beecher is a guilty man after the revelations of the trial, he has supplied the deficiency. His conduct since the trial has had all the force of an unconscious and unintentional confession. At the Plymouth church meeting in which he defied public sentiment, and declared that he was a manly fellow, and told what he should do, and boasted that he and God were against the world, he lifted the mask from a conscience-stricken mind so that any one of ordinary insight could see its writhings and feel its desperation. But the Peekskill demonstration lifted the mask still more. At Plymouth he was defiant; on his farm he was exultant, and broke into braggadocia. He had gone through the Red Sea, and had gained strength by the exercise. He had come out of the fiery trial with not so much as singed hair. He was all right. And he even went on to tell the reason of his escape. His honesty had saved him. His truthfulness had supported him. His character had carried him through! Such assertions are enough to make one gasp for breath. He himself confesses that the trial cost him over $75,000. But for the constant and herculean efforts of an able counsel and devoted church and hundreds of friends, he would have been convicted. No unbiased human being can read his answers to the cross-questioning of Mr. Fullerton, and see his miserable shufflings and evasions and pattering with a double sense, without feeling that the truth was not in him. For four years, according to the showing of the witnesses and his own confession, he was engaged in a prolonged and complicated conspiracy to deceive the public and cheat friends, and even to hoodwink his own investigating committee. And yet this man now has the impudence to boast that his truthfulness has saved him. The man who has confessed on the witness stand and in his letters to conduct which shows the want of common morality, proclaims himself an example of character for young men to imitate! Such brazen declarations show an utter demoralization of mind. They lift the mask on features that are enough to make the discerning shudder. He is having his punishment in what he is. Everything he does shows what no mask can conceal. Judged by any worthy standard of morals, he is an unconvicted crime, a living lie. And the professions of virtue and claims to piety with which he insults mankind, are the despairing clutches of a mind that knows its utter nakedness at anything to cover its depravity.

A Domestic Tragedy.

One of those frequent city paragraphs relating to an inquest upon the body of a woman who had died suddenly while visiting friends up town was followed up, the other day, by a reporter whose time hung on his hands. He evoked a tragedy, whose final details he gives at length in the New York World, while its secret is left to be conjectured. The mother of six children, just turning 40, goes out, one afternoon, and does not return. After one in the morning she is brought in, feet foremost, dead, accompanied by a doctor and by "a friend of the family." The friend tells his story. He met her on Broadway at 8; she said she was exhausted; she ate a chop and an ice with him; they started to such a park; she was taken ill; he took her into a house, the nearest; when the doctor came she was dead; that was at 9:30. The women, her neighbors in the house, want to know, if she died at 9:30, why it is 1:30 before she is brought home, and why her limbs are still warm. The friend listens with a nervous patience, but says nothing. The next day, the bustling coroner, an autopsy, and a verdict—congestion. But what says the neighbor who lays the body out, do these marks on her neck mean, and that purple spot on her shoulder? Four on one side, one on the other. The husband would not hear of an investigation. He would rather not know how that afternoon was passed. The friend was not his friend; he visited his wife, the dead woman; they had been seen in each other's company. The house she was taken into had on the door-plate a name handled loosely by loose men, the reporter finds, and gets no news there. The doctor had been handsomely paid by the friend of the family; that individual does not deny intrigue, but scouts the idea of violence. All parties think the matter had better drop. And it does drop. The World says that these events have happened within ten days, and that this is a common story.

Extraordinary Marksmanship.

[Richmond Whig.]

An elderly man name d Beckwit, residing in one of the peninsular counties, came to this city last Thursday on business. He brought with him an old-fashioned flint-lock rifle to have a stock and lock put on. On the cars he fell in conversation with a party of three gentlemen from this city, when one of them, to test the reality of some of the extraordinary feats he boasted of, offered him $10 to repeat some of them, to which the other two added $5 between them. The trial came off in an old field half a mile below Rocketts, and was witnessed by about a dozen persons.

The old flint lock was fired several times, and only once missed its aim. The old gentleman, after making two shots at small objects to one side, to get his hand steady, as he said, handed his son a potato and stationed him at fifty yards' distance, holding he potato between his thumb and fore-finger. The rifle cracked, and the potato fell, cloven in three or four pieces. One of the larger pieces was thrown in the air, the marksman keeping the same distance, and again the shot told. An inch and a half auger was then produced, and a hole bored in the fence, behind which was fastened a piece of white paper. At a distance of sixty yards the marksman sent a ball clear through the aperture, piercing the paper. At the fourth shot, from 60 yards distance, the bowl of a pipe, which his son was smoking, was crushed. At the fifth shot a copper cent was thrown in the air and hit. The sixth and seventh shots were delivered at a blackened five-cent nickle piece, thrown up by the son, standing about thirty yards off.

At the first attempt the shot missed. The old gentleman showed considerable mortification, and laid the blame upon a bystander, who at the critical moment sneezed loudly. The next attempt, however, was an entire success. The old man declined any further trial of his skill, and when offered a sum of money to repeat the shooting a potato from his son's hand he refused, saying he didn't care to try such experiments unless his weapon was freshly cleaned. The exhibition was the more remarkable from the fact that the marksman was an old man, at least fifty. His eye, however, is a clear, bright gray. His appearance is that of a poor farmer. The young man showed not the least anxiety during the dangerous experiment upon himself. The old man, referring to his son, said, "Bob can shoot just as well as I can."

—Down in Tuckahoe, N. J., there is a man named Simpson, who has a flat roof on his house covered with tin,—so says Max Adeler. The roof got to leaking badly, and it happened to occur to Simpson that it would be a good thing to cover the whole surface with the material out of which concrete pavements are made, in order to make it perfectly tight. A man was accordingly engaged, and he covered the tin with concrete to the depth of four inches. The curse of Tuckahoe is cats. In warm weather millions of them assemble and hold ratification meetings and rehearsals and general synods out in the back yards and on the roofs. In Tuckahoe the heat is unusually intense, and Mr. Simpson was unusually annoyed by the animated discussions of the cats in his neighborhood. The more he "shooed" them and flung old boots at them, the more they yelled. Night after night it grew more terrific, and day by day Mr. Simpson observed that the mysterious caterwauling continued during all hours of daylight. Simpson hadn't a boot-jack or a blacking-brush or a rolling-pin or a cologne-bottle left to throw at them.

At last, one moonlight night, the uproar got to be so outrageous that Simpson arose from his bed, determined to ascertain what all this growling meant anyhow! It appeared to him that the noise came from the top of the house. He went up into the garret and put his head out of the trap-door. There he found one hundred and ninety six cats stuck fast knee-deep in the concrete, which had been softened by the heat. Some of them had been there four days. The minute they caught sight of Simpson the whole one hundred and ninety-six doubled up their spines, ruffled up their black hair, snaked their tails and gave one unearthly howl which shook Simpson's nerves so much that he dropped the trap-door and fell down the step-ladder on the head of Mrs. Simpson, who was standing below dressed in a thing with a frill on it, and armed with a palm leaf fan and a bed-slat, determined to protect Simpson to the death. Simpson has since sold the house to a man who makes sausage and fur tippets, and it is whispered around Tuckahoe that his actual gains average forty dollars a night.

—Three men and a cross-eyed boy could not lift a lady's trunk at Saratoga last week, and she had to unpack all her pretty things in the corridor and carry them up four flights. Poor thing!

—A Virginia widow refused to marry a bald-headed man, though he was a millionaire. She explained: "We'd have a family fight some time, and he has no hair to catch hold of."

Jottings.

Chief Engineer R. M. Bartleman, U. S. N., is ordered to proceed to Philadelphia and report for duty as inspector of coal at that station.

The funeral of Mr. William E. Sargent, who was drowned at the Wentworth recently, took place at the residence of his father, ex-Mayor Sargent of Cambridge, on the 19th, and was attended by a large delegation from the Boston Custom House, where the deceased held a position. The services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Corr. It is singular, says the Globe, that Mr. Sargent, while in the United States Navy for two and a half years, was three times rescued from drowning at sea, and at last perished within fifty feet of the land, and in the sight and almost reach of friends.

Mr. Marcellus Eldredge having purchased the Clapham property on the corner of McDonough and Cornwall streets contemplates the removal of the house now occupied by him on Islington street to one of the vacant lots, and the building of a nice dwelling house on the site of his present residence.

U. S. Steamer Iris, Capt. Johnson, is below and will remain for a few days, inspecting light house, buoys, etc. We hope Collector Howard will call attention to the dangerous condition of the spar buoys in the river above and below the Narrows. These buoys are carried under water at certain stages of the tide, and surge about, plunging right and left. They are liable to make their appearance unlooked for at such times through the bottom of a sail-boat or wherry. Boatmen complain a great deal of their dangerous condition, and their situation should be plainly marked by chaining to them other buoys, or in some manner to remedy the evil; or they may be sawed off at low water mark sometime.

The schooner Active, which arrived at this port on the 21st, has a cargo of coal for the Manchester Gas Light Co., from the celebrated Albert mining company at St. Johns, N. B., the value of their product being $21 per ton in gold at St. Johns.

Captain Francis A. Roe, Lieutenant Commander Geo. W. Wood, Lieutenants Edward H. Green, John S. Newell and Charles H. Black, Master Charles E. Calahan, Ensign J. B. Murdock, Midshipmen Thomas E. Muse and O. W. Lowry, Acting Passed Assistant Surgeon N. V. Greene, Passed Assistant Engineer Arthur Price, Boatswain John Hall, Gunner Wm. E. Webber, Carpenter B. E. Fernald and Sailmaker Gilbert B. Macy are detached from the Lancaster and placed on waiting orders. Paymaster Richard Washington is detached and ordered to settle his accounts. As soon as the health authorities will allow the crew to go ashore they will be paid off and discharged.

Among the arrivals on Wednesday were eleven schooners bringing thirty-three hundred tons of coal, the larger part of which is to be transported over the Concord Railroad.

Several hundred persons attended Col. J. C. Butler's Appledore excursion.

U. S. Steamer Kansas arrived on Wednesday from New Orleans, and went into quarantine although there have been no cases of yellow fever on board. The officers and crew will probably have liberty in a day or two.

A new life boat built at Haverhill, Mass., by Mr. P. B. Curtis, will be tested at the Shoals to-morrow.

Have Citizens Any Rights

which the store owners and store keepers on Market Street are bound to respect? This is a question which has occurred to us often of late years, as we have noticed the intrusion (or rather extrusion) of dry goods displays, baby carts and huge signs on the sidewalks and the daily violation of the law prohibiting awnings, etc., from reaching within six feet of the ground. But this Summer when one end of the street is impassable, except in single file, on account of baskets of stale fruit, boxes of vegetables and hampers of all sorts ranged in treble ranks on both sides of the pavement; while at the other end a ruthless murder has been committed on a beautiful tree, which was planted at private expense, and has been nourished with assiduous care, and was protected, at least nominally, by a city ordinance. It seems as if matters had come to a point where if the City Marshal and City Fathers do not interfere in our behalf, the case should be taken in hand by an

INDIGNANT PUBLIC.

The Races.

At the races at Rockingham Park, Wednesday afternoon, Farmer Boy, of Boston, won the deciding heat of the three-minute race 2:50, Lady Sheridan second, Laurel Maid third.

The 2:34 race was won by Fleetwing, of Concord, in three straight heats, in 2:45, 2:47 1-4, 2:44 3-4, Grace second, John Franklin third.

The 2:44 race was won by Richmond Girl of Concord, Nelly of Brockton, Mass., second, Jim of Boston, third.

One driver, Mr. H. G. Smith of Concord, has won three of the four races trotted.

John Powers of Brighton, Mass., ran three miles three seconds inside of eighteen minutes.

—The Baltimore American describes an interesting game of ten-pins by two Chinamen, in that city, Ti Si Wing and Ah Fung: Last Friday night they entered the room, and, after a hurried consultation, that was carried on in whispers, Ah Fung waltzed over to the proprietor and in a modest manner remarked, "Me likee knockee dloun ting pin." From Ah Fung's remarks the proprietor very naturally inferred that the Mongolians desired playing a game. The alley was prepared and the game began by Ti Si winding his pigtail carefully around his cranium, and after selecting a ball, and walking up and down the alley a few times, sending it toward the pins. Four pins went down on the first ball, and Ti Si manifested his delight by a long and excited controversy with Ah Fung. Ti Si's second and third balls knocked down five more pins, and the result was chalked down in hieroglyphics on the blackboard. Then came the gallant Fung's turn, and after walking down to the pins and examining them, he returned to the head of the alley and rolled. The ball went off the side and missed the pins, to the indescribable delight of Ti Si, who chalked something on the blackboard and refreshed himself by a "drink a watee." Fung appeared rather abashed when his second ball followed the first and the pins all remained standing. This led to more chalk marks by Ti Si. Ah Fung, however, took up the third ball, and, after weighing it carefully in his hand, rolled it down the alley, and, to his own surprise and delight, made a ten strike. This was such an unlooked-for event that both Ti Si and Ah Fung walked down and looked at the pins, as if they doubted their eyesight. Ti Si then remarked; "He knockee down plenty," and they returned to the blackboard and made a couple of dozen chalk marks. When Ti Si rolled his first ball he ran some distance down the alley, and it struck Ah Fung that this was not right. A lengthy argument followed, and it was only ended by a "Melican" man being called, who decided that Ti Si should not gallop half way down the alley before he rolled the ball. The game went on in this way for an hour and twenty minutes, when the score stood: Ah Fung, 97; Ti Si, 105. In keeping the score Ti Si had a style all his own, and when the game was concluded the blackboard was literally covered with dots, dashes and half circles. After the game Ti Si and Ah Fung paid the score and left, greatly elated with the manner in which they had passed the evening.

—"Gath" writes from Saratoga: "They say mine is the biggest single room in the house, Very good! If it had been the next room below the biggest I don't know what I should have done. I have three pitchers of ice water and one pitcher of wash water. The excess of the former is to be attributed to the great love the bell boys bear for me. They have no way to express their interest except by bringing you ice water and dnsting you off. I am the best dusted-off man in the country. I am the best iced-off man. Here I have chunks of ice striving to get into impossibly small pitchers, all glancing bluely at me like dissected eyes. If I open the door the boys all charge at me with brooms, crying; 'I was yo' waiter last summer! I breshed you off afo' the war!' So I sit in the theological room and look out at the church."

—He left the spelling bee at 10 o'clock, and stopped in a saloon on his way home. Here he met several friends who "set 'em up" divers times, and he reached home about midnight with a confused brain and a very demoralized pair of legs. Then he swore that somebody had stolen the keyhole, but his wife, with a fearful scowl on her brow, and a lamp in her hand, admitted him. "Drunk!" she exclaimed. "D-r-u-n-c (hic) drunk. Thaz easynuff." "Brute!" "B-r-o-o-t (hic), give us harder one." "Idiot!" "Thaz harder (hic), but I kin spellum. I-d—I-d—I-d-i-g-t Idiot. Now give us a stunner (hic)." She picked up a poker and gave him a "stunner," and the spelling bee adjourned sine die.

—A curious point of inquiry among zoologists has been, for a long time, how many eggs there are in an ovary of a hen. To determine this, a German naturalist a short time since instituted some careful investigation, the result of which showed the ovary of a hen to contain about 600 embryo eggs. He also found that some 20 of these are matured the first year, about 120 during the second year, 135 during the third, 144 during the fourth, and during the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth years, the number decreases by 20 annually; it consequently follows that after the fourth, or at the most fifth year, hens are no longer profitable as layers, unless it may be in exceptionable instances.

—"In a recent scandal case in Smith county, Kansas, a lady witness declined to answer a question, and the attorney demanded her reason. "Because it is not fit to tell decent people." "O, well," said the lawyer, "just walk up here and whisper it to the judge."

—A western physician has just discharged a case of confluent small pox without a pit. He painted the face of of his patent with collodion and ivory black, applied as often as necessary to keep up a complete mask.

Don't Make War on the Stomach.

If you are bilious, dyspeptic and constipated-don't make war on the stomach by successively swallowing blue pills, strong purgatives and powerful astringments. Such a procedure damages digestion and weakens the bowels, leaving stomach, liver and intestines, after the immediate effect, in a condition of greater disorder than before. That complete relief which remedies of the above description signally fail to afford is obtained by using Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. And for the best of reasons. Biliousness is the result of inactivity of the liver, dyspepsia of weakness of the digestive organs, and constipation is produced by the above causes operating together. The Bitters, being a powerful stomachic, overcome indigestion by stimulating the secretion of gastric juice, relieve biliousness by promoting greater activity of the liver, and thus enable the bowels to act with renewed regularity.

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH OF THE CITY OF PORTSMOUTH call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10 of the City Ordinances and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the city to aid them in the execution of their duty.

CHAPTER X.

Sec. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, &c. shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the health officers may direct.

Sec. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

Sec. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten days from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time above specified.

Sec. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offals of fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

Sec. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisances shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

Sec. 12. When any householder shall know that any person within his family is taken sick of the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 13. When any physician shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for each refusal or neglect forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the health officers in the name of the city.

Sec. 16. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other thing deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier —the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may, by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

Sec. 21. No person shall erect, keep or continue or permit to be erected, kept or continued, upon any land occupied by him, any pen for the keeping of swine, or any privy either of the mill ponds in this city, or so placed that offensive substances therefrom shall be discharged or drained into either of said ponds, or into any creek, or cove or drain leading thereto. And no person shall construct, keep or continue any drain leading from any pen for the keeping of any swine, slaughter-house, privy vault, or other unwholesome or offensive place, into either of said ponds, or to any flat or marsh adjoining the same. And no person shall throw or suffer to be thrown from the land upon either of said ponds, or upon any of said flats or marshes, any dead, decaying, unwholesome or offensive animal or vegetable substances.

Daily Chronicle.

—It seems to me that I read all kinds of cure for ivy poison except the right one. I have always endeavored to keep it before the public but have failed. It is to dissolve sugar of lead—a bit the size of a hazelnut—in half a teacup of sweet milk or warm water. Apply as warm as can be easily borne with a soft, linty piece of linen rag. Three or four applications are sufficient to effect a cure. If the poison is on the face and nearing the eyes or mouth, this astringent wash may be constantly applied. It is a marvelous cure, and by watching closely one can see the fevered blisters turn from white to yellow during the application. This remedy for ivy poison should prevent a great deal of suffering. It is well where a member of a family is easily poisoned to keep sugar of lead in the house all the time. Let it be labeled and kept where it can be found the moment it is wanted. Keep it well wrapped up, that it may not lose its strength.

An English Remedy

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS,

For Nervousness and General Debility,

PREMATURE decay, mental and physical prostration, fear, despondency, over indulgence in the use of opium or alcoholic drinks, tobacco, &c., &c. Medicines unrivalled for their wonderful properties and remarkable cures of all Nervous Complaints. Their efficacy is equally great in the treatment and cure of Cancers, Nodes, Ulcers, Pustules, Pimples, Tetter, Fever Sores, Ringworm, Erysipelas, Scald-Head, Barbers' Itch, Scurvy, Salt Rheum, Copper Colored Blotches, Glandular Swelling, Worms and Black Specks in the flesh, Discoloration, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth and Nose, Sore Legs, and sores of every character, because the medicines are the very best Blood Medicine ever placed before the people, and are warranted to be the most Powerful Alterative ever originated by man. They impart Strength to the Body and Vigor to the Mind, removing Morbid sensibility, Depression of Spirits, Dementia and Melancholia.

NERVOUS DEBILITY.

However obscure the causes may be which contribute to render nervous debility a disease so prevalent, affecting as it does, nearly one-half of our adult population, it is a melancholy fact that day by day, and year by year, we witness a most frightful increase of nervous affections from the slightest neuralgia to the more grave and extreme forms of Nervous Prostration.

It is of the highest importance, then, that individuals should be able to judge for themselves, by their own feelings, if and to what extent they are attacked by this insidious enemy to ill health, comfort, and even life itself if left to run its course unchecked by the early and prompt application of curative remedies.

DRUNKENNESS.

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS is the only remedy that has ever proved by practical experience a benefit to those who suffer from over-indulgence in alcoholic liquors; it completely destroys the taste for them, and restores the victim of intemperance to health and vigor. A single trial will prove it to be just what it is recommended to be.

Price $2.50. Large size, $5. Each package of the Cordial Balm contains one box of the Tonic Pills, which may also be had separately at 50 cents per box.

RECENT TESTIMONIALS.

FREWSBURGH, Nov. 12, 1874.

I have used the Cordial Balm and Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills as a preventive and cure for the use of ardent spirits and habitual intoxication, and find them actually specific in such cases. I regard them as most invaluable medicines, and nothing could induce me to be without them.

JACOB MESERVE.

TIPTON, Dec. 3, 1874.

We take great pleasure in informing you of the surprisingly beneficial results from the use of your English Remedy, The Cordial Balm of Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills, in a case of great Nervous Debility and Prostration, by a member of our family who had been under treatment by different doctors for nearly three years past without any apparent benefit therefrom; but your medicines have produced a most wonderful change for the better and the patient now enjoys comparatively excellent health. MRS. HARRIET STURGISS.

P. S.—We tell all with whom we are acquainte who are similarly afflicted to try your medicines.

FACTS PROVEN

BY THE

TEST OF EXPERIENCE.

THE CAUSE OF GOUT.

It proceeds from a deficiency of, or an alteration in the cutaneous, urinary or intestinal secretions. This definition leads us to the solution of a second and not less important question:

HOW TO CURE THE GOUT.

This can only be accomplished by a course of treatment capable of establishing the perspiration, if suppressed, of inducing a proper flow of urine, and of destroying the obstinate constipation when it exists. But it is not sufficient that these three functions act properly as respect quantity, but above all, and before all, their quality must have our attention. Indeed, we have mentioned not only a deficiency but also an alteration of secretion. For the perspiration, the urine, and the evacuations should be not only sufficiently abundant, but should carry off certain principles whose stay would produce the most serious disorders.

This is precisely what we see in the Gout. Does it not often happen that after an attack, the joints become deformed by chalky concretions? These gouty deposits have been analyzed by the Chemists Wallaston, Fornercy, Vanquillin and Barnell.—Every first-class physician should know their composition, then there would remain to find a means to prevent these salts spreading, and, as it were, condensing of themselves throughout the system. The receipt from which is compounded the will produce this desirable result, because it gives to the products of the body the quantity and quality necessary.

CHRONIC GOUT having been engendered insensibly during a certain lapse of time, time is necessary for its removal. Its elimination must take place atom by atom. It is, therefore, not surprising that patience should be required for a complete cure. We must be careful not to confound the acute with the chronic condition; if the latter, it requires weeks to remove it; in the former, a few doses only are necessary to effect a complete cure.

By persevering a longer or a shorter time, according to the severity of the case, the joints will gradually recover their suppleness, and the nodes will be seen to soften and diminish insensibly. This last is an infallible test of the wonderful properties of the

DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

To this unerring proof we can, by the aid of Chemistry, add another, equally palpable and convincing.

The articular concretions are composed principally of uric acid, waters of ammonia, of soda, and of phosphate of lime. These are precisely the salts which we find in the various exuvia, particularly in the urine; so that chemical reagents which showed scarcely a trace of these before taking the DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE, will demonstrate an enormous proportion after its use.

Thus the concretions, the principal components of which analysis has shown can be again reproduced, and will thus furnish the most convincing proof any medicine can offer. This, then, is the most rational plan of proceeding, and which enabled us to answer the question of a certain English M. P., "WHAT HAS BECOME OF MY GOUT?" We told him that "it followed the course of the evacuations," since chemical analysis, as has been said, finds in them all the principles which produce it. Henceforth it is clear that this medicine is and ought to banish not only all ideas of retrogressions, but should inspire the most perfect confidence. Hundreds of testimonials, not forced, these are no hypotheses, no vain theories, but palpable truths, material, physical facts, confirmed over and over again by twenty-five years' practical experience in the leading hospitals of England and France, as well as by thousands of testimonials held by every one of our agents, freely offered by sufferers restored to sound health and confirmed use furnished through the means of the world-renowned DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

It is styled as above for the reason that its great efficacy in rheumatic complaints is just as apparent as in gout, and thousands of sufferers in Massachusetts to-day, cured of rheumatism by its use, mention the Proprietor's name with benedictions of praise.

This medicine is for sale at all Druggists throughout the United States and Canada. If it happens that your Druggist has not got it in stock, ask him to send for it to any of the Wholesale Druggists in Boston. Price $1 a bottle.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the, lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent its spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not know ing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents.'

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

Desperate Fight with a Rat.

[New York Sun.]

No less a person than Engineer-in-Chief of the Navy W. W. Wood came hobbling, like a wounded soldier, and with his ankles bandaged, into Walker's this morning in search of a breakfast.

"Gout, gout," said I; "too much of Robeson's old Madeira."

"No, no," he replied, solemnly. "Rat, rat!" and he proceeded to tell me of a desperate combat, lasting nearly an hour, that he had with a monster rat the night before. The family being away, and the rats not getting anything to eat for some days, had become hungry and desperate. Mr. Wood was sleeping alone in a back room, the bed being near a door. About one o'clock in the morning he was awakened suddenly by a severe pain in his foot, and heard something jump heavily to the floor. A light revealed the fact that a deep gash had been made on the ball of his left foot, from which the blood was flowing freely.

As there was no cat in the house, Mr. Wood at once concluded that it was a rat, and that it had made its exit. After washing and bandaging the wound, he again stretched himself on the bed and fell into a doze. The rat came at him again, this time making an ugly gash in the heel of his right foot. After bandaging the second wound, Mr. Wood went in search of the rat, resolved to exterminate him if possible. But his ratship had eaten his way into a bureau in the front room. A screw-driver was brought into use, and one by one the drawers were opened, and there in the lower one was found, to use Mr. Wood's own words, "Mr. Rat, half as big as the water pitcher, and looking directly at me with a pair of the wickedest eyes. Then he made a desperate jump directly in my face." Mr. Wood had shut the door, and the only thing he had to defend himself with was a small rattan. The rat made a desperate fight with him, more than a dozen times jumping to the top of the bureau, and thence to Mr. Wood's face and at his throat. The combat lasted nearly an hour by the clock, when, finding that he could neither kill or wound the infuriated thing, and that he might get more seriously injured, he withdrew, leaving the rat in possession of the field, and, indeed, the victor.

Wood waited for morning and his servant man to arrive. In the meantime the rat went desperately to work gnawing at the door, in order to again attack the Chief Engineer, and had got more than half way through when the servant came, and the two entered the room, armed with stout sticks, to renew the combat. Removing all the furniture but the bureau, into which the rat had again retreated, they drove him out and renewed the fight. The infuriated creature fought as desperately as before, now jumping at the throat of one of his assailants, now at the other, inflicting ugly wounds on both; and it was not until after the battle had lasted twenty minutes that the rat was killed. His big head is now exhibited at the Navy Department as a trophy.

EAGLE MOWER.

THE NYE BAY STATE

HORSE RAKE.

Farmers are respectfully requested to inspect these Machines before purchasing elsewhere.

They are believed to be the best Mower and Rake in the Market.

The Mower is strong, durable and of the lightest draft.

IT HAS TAKEN ONE HUNDRED PREMIUMS.

The demand has increased from 200 in 1873 to over 7000 in 1875 which is ample proof of their superiority.

The rake for 1875 is perfected so that by a simple centre-trip attachment three pounds' pressure with the foot will DUMP THE RAKE.

These Machines can be seen at Hayes Farm and will be cheerfully shown to parties whether they purchase or not. We are ready to compare notes with any other machines in a field trial.

A Tribute to a Worthy Officer.

Editors Boston Journal; I have just read in your issue of Monday last a notice of the sudden death at Epsom, N. H., of Captain Andrew McClary Heath, Adjutant of the late 12th New Hampshire Volunteers, and more recently Master of one of the Manchester Grammar Schools, in which capacity he was spoken of as a "faithful teacher and a highly esteemed citizen." My personal acquaintance with Captain Heath was slight, and I know little of his career since the close of the war. But as an officer of the 12th New Hampshire Regiment and a participant in the battle of Gettysburg I am better informed, since in my researches for data for the history of that battle I received a letter from the commander of the regiment of which he was an officer, written March 24, 1864, only eight months afterward, detailing an act of his gallantry, which proves him to have been a man of daring courage and great intrepidity.

The 12th New Hampshire Regiment was at that time attached to the 2d division 3d corps, commanded by that gallant soldier, Major General Humphreys, the present Chief Engineer of the armies of the United States. It formed a portion of Carr's brigade, of which the 1st, 11th and 16th Massachusetts, 26th Pennsylvania and 13th New Jersey Volunteers, were the remaining regiments, a brigade sustaining a record inferior to none in the Army of the Potomac. This brigade held the extreme right of the 3d corps, and was formed along the Emmetsburg road slightly on the posterior slope of a ridge supported by the "Excelsior" brigade. Graham's brigade of Birney's division lay on its left, and held the salient of the line at the peach orchard, against which Gen. Longstreet made a furious assault with Barksdale and Wilcox's brigades, breaking the infantry lines, forcing the artillery to retire, and carrying the position, thus threatening Gen. Humphreys' left and compelling him to "change front to the rear." During the execution of this intricate evolution Longstreet's victorious troops continued to advance, their attack seriously embarrassing the movements of Humphreys' division, and at the same time Perry's and Wright's brigades, which had advanced under cover of the ridge, attacked Humphreys' right. It was a fearful moment, and will be remembered by every participant as one of the most thrillingly exciting scenes of their experience. Gen. Humphreys could readily have withdrawn his command, but such an act would have endangered the success of the battle, and perhaps the loss of the army, and he instantly decided to hold the enemy in check even at the sacrifice of his own life and his whole command, until a new line could be formed in his rear, (which was subsequently done, and brought up by Gen. Meade in person.)

General Humphreys, placing himself in the midst of his command, was everywhere present, sustaining and encouraging his men. His officers fell thick and fast about him. At this moment, Captain Chester of his staff was seen to spring with a convulsive start. Turning to his commander Chester said, "General, I'm shot!" Gen. Humphreys, who had noted the gallantry of this officer, sprang to his assistance, clasped him in his arms and sustained him in the saddle till Capt. Harry Humphreys, his son, could take him in charge. An orderly took the horse to lead him from the field, when at the instant a round shot killed the horse and carried away the orderly's head! At this moment Gen. Humphreys' horse, bleeding from seven bullet wounds, was struck by a shell, and, springing convulsively into the air, threw his rider violently to the ground, though fortunately without seriously injuring him.

Just then Captain Humphreys was shot through the arm. Gen. Carr, Captains McClellan and Cavada each had their horses killed. A portion of the guns of Turnbull's Battery retired through the infantry, with a prolonged firing as they went. Others were drawn off by members of the 16th Massachusetts Vols., and others were captured. It was then that General Barksdale fell mortally wounded. In the very centre of this terrible conflict stood the 12th New Hampshire Regiment. Thick and fast fell its gallant members. The bearer of the State colors, Sergeant Parker, was wounded. The bearer of the national colors, Sergeant Howe, Co. E, took them both, and while defiantly waving them in the breeze was himself killed; the colors fell to the ground and were about to be captured when Adjutant Heath, the subject of our sketch, in the face of death seized them both and bore them triumphantly from the field, carrying them until the Brigade was halted, the line rectified and ready for another advance. It is to do justice to the gallantry and memory of such a man that I have trespassed upon your space.

JOHN B. BACHELDER.

Donaldson's Fate.

[Chicago Tribune.]

There is every reason to fear that Prof. Washington Donaldson and his hapless companion, Mr. Grimwood of the Journal, perished in the hurricane of Thursday night.

The departure of the balloon was full of evil augury. A frail bag of cheap cotton, harnessed by wreaths of old cordage to a crazy wicker basket, there were no signs of care or precaution in the process of making ready. On the contrary, half a dozen indifferent fellows in the hippodrome service hung to it in a listless way, and the aeronaut himself paid so little regard to the swelling globe that one might have been excused for supposing that he had no concern with it whatever. It was impossible to avoid noticing the rents and patches, some of them very clumsily repaired, which disfigured what should otherwise have been its unbroken contour. The ropes by which the car was attached were knotted, spliced, and tangled in a fashion more indicative of hurry and economy than of a proper regard for the safety of the Professor and his companions. Altogether, the balloon wore an air of shabbiness and debility, not to have detected which, in the light of present evidence, seems unaccountable.

Donaldson was evidently very nervous about the start. He whistled vacantly to himself, and took frequent observations of the wind and the promise of the sky. Sunburnt, dusty and restless, he formed a picturesque contrast with the apathetic canvassmen who kept the balloon to its moorings. The two reporters who entered the car together held no conversation with him, and while they were in the heat of an inaudible dialogue, he swung himself, monkey fashion, to a platform of wire netting just under the neck of the balloon, in which unfragrant neighborhood he remained until the machine became a speck in the upper blue. The crowd had a good chance to scrutinize him as he leaned, in the attitude of an auctioneer, over the upper hoop and exchanged some sharp and nervous raillery with an acquaintance down below. He looked short and very square shouldered, with a gymnast's breadth of chest and big-jointedness. His coat collar was turned up to shield a large, muscular neck from the sun, and a silk hat was drawn down over his face. This latter was brown as a berry, with hair cropped short, a thick dyed mustache twisted up in an inquisitive point at each end, and a pair of dark bright eyes which roved hither and thither. Just behind him the brasses and the reeds and the drums of the band were braying and banging cheerily. A hundred wags shot their quips at him, and once in a while somebody, with lungs stronger than the rest, caught his attention and won a reply.

Just before the balloon began the series of short bumps and jerks which was the prelude of its departure, Donaldson covered his eyes with his hand and gazed steadfastly over the treacherous lake. One of the wags sung out: "Donaldson, you'd better get out." The aeronaut was silent for a minute, then he muttered: "I wish to Christ I could!"

Grimwood of the Journal was in that dingy wicker car, peering through the network of ropes like a caged bird. Donaldson's wire perch was fully three feet above him. While the Professor played at being captain of the air ship, the sole passenger made himself at home, and upraising a bundle of circulars, meant for aerial distribution, asked if they were the provisions. Everybody laughed at the lightness of the fare except Donaldson, who had his arms turned around a pair of the main ropes, and whose face was like a copper mask.

The journalist looked to be a slender young fellow, with a plain, honest countenance, and was serious enough for one on the eve of such a fatal voyage as that which, little recking, he was about to take. That he realized some of the perils of his situation was evident in the extreme gravity of his features, which were in marked contrast with the reckless and mocking faces of the mob.

It would be hard to define the exact moment of the start. Half a dozen men held to the cable, and the balloon, slowly mounting three or four feet, reeled to and fro as if it were some monster caught in a trap and frantically bent on escape. Now rolling its huge bulk this way, now that, with Donaldson swinging from the upper hoop, and Grimwood jerked back and forward in the basket, it frightened the crowd into a succession of stampedes. Then Donaldson gave an order, and Grimwood seized a sand bag and poured its contents through the cordage on a score of upturned faces. There was a vast laugh all round, a shower of hand bills from the car, floating to the earth like a hundred thousand white figures, and before its flight could be realized, the balloon shot up into the clear sky, and was soon hanging over the lake like Sinbad's hovering roc. Donaldson still kept his footing on the perch, and waved his hat. Grimwood still peeped through the hempen grate which imprisoned him, and shed bundle after bundle of hand bills. Thus, amid the shouting of the mob and the crash of the band, the two unfortunates went to their fate.

On Friday morning, after a night of unusual hurricane, there was early and anxious inquiry at the Hippodrome for the adventurous pair. To the first as well as the latest questioner, Mr. Barnum's agents could only reply with an expression of hopefulness. Donaldson had survived such momentous perils in the past, had come out scathless from so many hand to hand encounters with death, that there was excuse enough for being confident. But when, later in the day, a coasting schooner brought news of the balloon's dire peril at an early hour of the night, some time before it was called upon to stand the tremendous shock of the tempest, hope for the voyagers' safety gave place to a reluctant belief that they had both perished. The Little Guide, a small craft, employed in the lumber and tan bark trade, entered this port about 9 o'clock. Upon her arrival, her captain, a Swede named Anderson, and his mate, a compatriot named Rasmussen, both told how at 7 o'clock on Thursday evening, when off Grosse Point, some twelve miles north of Chicago, and while standing out thirty miles from the shore, they had seen the balloon dropping its car once in awhile into the lake, only some mile and a half distant from their vessel. Realizing the dangerous situation of the aeronauts, Capt. Anderson headed his schooner in their direction. But before he could overtake the machine, which was bounding at a rapid rate on the water, there was a sudden lightning of the car, and the globe shot upward to a great height, soon disappearing from the view of the crew of the schooner.

The Chicago Journal of the 21st, contains the following in regard to the balloon mystery: A balloon, high up in the air, was seen passing over this city by credible witnesses, yesterday forenoon, coming from the northeast and passing away in a southwesterly direction. A similar balloon is reported to have been seen also high up; in the air at Goshen, in Northern Indiana, passing easterly on Saturday morning. A report from Fort Wayne, Ind., states that on Sunday, at noon, a balloon was seen sailing southeasterly at that place at a great height, and another report states that at midnight on Sunday night, persons at Richmond, Ind., saw a balloon by the bright moonlight, sailing southeasterly. Now, inasmuch as we have no information of a balloon ascension recently in any part of the West except that made from this city, last Thursday, the question that naturally suggests itself is, whether this mysterious balloon seen by different persons in different localities, is not Donaldson's air ship, which ascended from Chicago on Thursday evening. Can it be that the balloon is still floating about the high atmosphere; that the aeronauts seeing the approach of the storm, which threatened to overtake them; threw out all their ballast in order to lighten their vessel sufficiently to rise above and escape it; that ascending to an altitude where the atmosphere was so extremely rare that breathing became impossible and the balloonists sank lifeless into the bottom of their basket and have since been wafted about in various directions by changing currents, the balloon having no one to guide or control it? The theory is plausible so far as the throwing out of ballast and the rising into the upper strata of atmosphere is concerned. There is still a chance that the missing balloon is still drifting about the higher atmosphere, the voyagers lifeless and the vessel at the mercy of the currents; if so, it will of course ultimately descend to the earth and be heard from.

Professor King, the aeronaut, has been engaged by Barnum to take the place of Donaldson, and that he will make ascensions in connections with his shows.

Keely's Great Motor.

[New York Sun.]

"What do you think of the Keeley motor?" a Sun reporter asked Mr. Matsell, yesterday.

The venerable and portly President of the Police Board wiped his glasses clean, put them on, and looked into the reporter's eyes.

"The Keeley murder?" he said. "When was that?"

"No, not a murder. A motor. The Keeley motor."

"Oh," said the President, as if he understood at last, "stealing a locomotive. Yes, yes, I remember that. It was up at Sing Sing, about four months ago."

"I don't thing you quite understand me," the reporter replied. "I wish to know what you think of the Keeley motor. M-o-t-o-r. motor. Something to make something else go. What do you think of it?"

"I don't think anything about it," said Mr. Matsell, "for I don't know what it is. What are you talking about, anyhow?"

"Sit down, Mr. Matsell," said the reporter, "and I'll talk business to you. Now tell me, candidly, what you think about it."

"Think about what?"

"The Keeley motor."

"I don't lie awake nights thinking about motors, my friend," said Mr. Matsell. "In fact, I never heard of the Keeley motor. I don't know anything—"

"Oh, don't say that, Mr. Matsell. I'm sure, with your experience—"

"I say I don't know anything—"

"Don't disparage yourself, Mr. Matsell. This is merely a little matter of business. Let us look at it calmly. I wish to get the benefit of your years of experience in the editorial chair and in the police department, and to spread the information before the public. In short, what do you think of the Keeley motor?"

"Before we go any further, young man," said the President of the police Board, "suppose you tell me what the Keeley motor is."

"The Keeley motor, Mr. Matsell," the reporter replied, "is the great invention of the nineteenth century. It's unparalleled in the history of mechanics. It's a machine to run without fire or steam; in fact, a machine to run by water and air. The air goes in soft, and comes out in cakes. It's so powerful that an ounce vial of the vapor will blow up a fort; and the inventor says a bucketful of water, compressed, would run thirty cars from New York to Philadelphia."

"That must be a great machine—a very great machine. A first-rate machine to keep away from. When I was an editor—"

"But what do you think of the Keeley motor?"

"What, the mashed-air concern?"

"Yes."

"Oh, that's all wind."

Not being fully satisfied with the theories advanced by Mr. Matsell on the motor subject, the reporter sought Mr. Harry Hill for further information. Mr. Hill is well informed on motors, but the Keeley motor, he says, is too much for him.

"Talk about condensed air in bottles" said Mr. Hill, "look at those bottles on the shelf. There's more motive power in each one of them than in ten of Keeley's machines. That's not condensed air—that's condensed lightning. It's genuine apple jack, straight from Jersey. And that reminds me that the first time I ever got drunk, and the only time in my life I ever got so drunk I couldn't walk, was on apple jack in New Jersey. I went over to look at some fancy stock, and the auctioneer had a cask of apple jack that slid down like new milk. I was tired and hot, and it was so good I kept on drinking, and the first thing I knew I was so drunk I couldn't stand up."

"But about the motor, Mr. Hill?"

"Oh, yes, the motor. Well, I 'spose Keeley thinks he's got a good thing—let me fill your glass. He runs his machine with pressed air, does he? I have a machine that runs with air, too, and the air don't have to be pressed a bit. My machine's a yacht. If I thought this vapor in bottles was good for anything, I'd feed it to my trotting hoses all the time, to make them fast. But I don't take much stock in it. Don't give it away; but between you and me, I think it's a humbug. If Keeley's got a machine that'll run, why don't he dun it? That's what I want to know. It the thing ever does go, as he says it will, let him call on H. Hill, Esq., if he wants to sell his stock. But before the thing starts—humph, does he think we're all fools?"

News and Notes.

Col. John B. Clarke, of the Manchester Mirror, has issued a handsome volume, finely printed and interestingly written, being a history of Manchester from the original grant in 1622 to the present time. The facts were collected by Mr. Maurice D. Clarke, who seems to have done his work faithfully and well. All the prominent men of Manchester have capital likenesses among the illustrations, but we do think that our good friend Ex-Governor Fred Smyth shows up to life better in the original than in his Jewish-looking counterfeit presentment. The ladies all admire the Governor, and we await their verdict through the press ere we decide whether our first impressions are correct. We miss the genial expression in the face of Gov. Cheney, too, but presume the artist did his best. Col. John B. Clarke's jocund visage is true to life. He ought to have been a half-brother to P. T. Barnum. In presenting this work to the public he has done New Hampshire's chief city credit. Of course its publication will be a success. Every Manchester man should have a copy, and many outsiders will have.

Speaking about punishment of bribery in elections, the Providence Journal says: "It has seemed to us that a law making disfranchisement, for a specific time, the only punishment of bribery and making the other party as witness by remitting the penalty in his case, when called to testify, might have great effect. There is a poetic justice in such a penalty, by which the law says to the offender: 'You have sold your vote. This shows that you do not properly estimate the elective franchise and are not a proper person to be trusted with it; therefore it is taken from you.'"

Oho! The Concord People didn't mean to go back on the Weston iniquity, and blames its mistake to the types. It said "democrats" and meant "republicans"—which makes a world of difference. Has the well run dry, John Henry?

And now the Washington Republican annihilates him by calling him Gnawdoff.

The Bangor Whig says William Pangburn, the old man who murdered his wife in Medway, was in jail for the first time in his life, Monday night. The hours passed uncomfortably with him; he could not sleep, and was up and down half a dozen times from midnight till daylight, he disturbed prisoners in cells adjacent by his pitiful moans and groaning. All day he was despondent and hopeless; he has grown very weak, having eaten nothing since last Saturday. He says he has no appetite, but thinks that it may come to him after a while. He said to a reporter that he "had been wondering how it could have happened." "I couldn't have strength to lift an axe over her; It would have dropped out of my hands." "Who, then, could have done it?" was asked. "That is the thing; there was nobody else to do it. And, if anybody had come into the room and struck her, it would woke me up. If there had only been some one to speak a word to me I should have come out of it. There is not money enough in all the world, or any other temptation, that could make me do such a thing to any human being, if I knew it, much less to her," he said.

John Stone, aged thirty-five, made a murderous assault upon Nathaniel Bettis, aged twenty-five, in Bedford, on the 21st., by stabbing him with a shoe knife in the left breast, severing the intercostal artery, and inflicting, it is feared, a fatal wound. Stone was under the influence of liquor, and his wife went to Bettis' house for protection. Bettis, with others, went to Stone's house, about a fourth of a mile distant, and tried to quiet him, when Stone drew the shoe-knife and stabbed Bettis.

On the 19th, E. F. Pratt Esq., of Milwaukee, with a driver, started in a carriage to which was attached six horses, from the Summit House for the descent of Mt. Washington. They had proceeded but about half a mile, when a sudden and tremendous gust of wind struck the carriage, breaking the pole. Mr. Pratt leaped out and caught one of the leading horses by the bridle, while the driver kept his seat and held the reins. They got the horses' heads turned up the mountain when another blast came with a velocity of eighty miles an hour, striking the carriage and hurling it and the driver down a precipice twenty feet, on the ragged rocks below. Mr. Pratt let go the horses, and crawled as best he could down the rocks to where the wreck of the carriage was lying, expecting of course to find the driver dead or seriously injured. What was his surprise, however, when he reached the spot, to see the driver clearing himself from the debris, with scarcely a bruise or a scratch upon him.

Jottings.

The question of to-day—Will it rain?

Rev. A. J. Patterson will preach next Sunday at the Universalist church.

A dense fog came in from the eastward yesterday.

There are are nearly 200 yachts at the Shoals.

The assessors will hold a meeting at the city rooms this evening at 7.30.

Dover people seem to have stormed Rye Beach this week, going to North Hampton and thence to the Beach.

Capt. Edwin M. Baker, formerly of steamer Appledore, is to sail yacht Contest in to-day's race.

Schooner yacht Resolute, N. Y. Y. C., sailed by Mr. Rufus Hatch, of New York, left Newport, R. I., Tuesday morning, for the Isles of Shoals, with a large party on board to witness the yacht race.

Yachts Rambler, of New York, Wanderer, of Salem, Lillie, of Lynn, Brinda, Eureka, Tempest, Rebecca, Rambler, Starlight, Romance, Kittie, Euchre, Scud, Sunbeam, Contest, Nautilus, Lidia, Weaite, Coquette, Wraith, of Boston, and Alice, of Providence, came into the harbor yesterday.

Steamer Major will run to Star island to-day and to-morrow at 8:30 and 11 A. M., returning after the regatta. Tickets $1.50 for the trip. The Appledore will run as usual, and the schooner Wm. H. Russell is advertised to take passengers out and back at $1.50 each.

Joshua Getchell of Exeter, formerly Joshua Getchell & Son, has failed for $70-000. He kept a large variety store, embracing stoves, crockery, etc., and had, it is claimed, one of the best establishments in New Hampshire. Large investments in real estate and the dullness of the times are said to be the cause.

One of the attractions of to-day at the Shoals will be the famous steamer Plymouth Rock with an excursion party of 1500 on board from Boston and vicinity. A restaurant is on board, where first class meals may be procured at reasonable rates. Accompanying the excursion will be Gilmore's Band, a choir of madrigal boys, and a chime of church bells, which will from time to time "discourse most elegant music."

The gun for the start of first-class yachts in to-day's race will be fired at 11.45. The second class yachts will start a half hour afterward. The course marked out for the races is: From Star Island 10 miles to stake boat, about south southwest; then 10 miles due east, to stake boat; then 10 miles to judges' boat; leaving all stake boats on the port. The commodore's boats may be known to observers by ensigns terminating with two points, with an anchor surrounded by stars in centre of field. Commodores' flags will have a blue field, vice-commodores' red, rear-commodore's white. Acting commodores will carry a plain blue flag of same form as the others.

The largest yacht entered for the Oceanic regatta, which comes off to-day, is the Rambler, Capt. Thomas, which came up the river yesterday and moored at Adams & Co.'s wharf, where she was visited by hundreds of people. Mr. I. Nelson Goodrich of this city, who sailed the winning yacht Vindex so skillfully last year, has been engaged as sailing master in to-day's race, the Vindex failing to put in an appearance. Of the 150 or more yachts in this vicinity, yesterday, the Rambler was the largest, her tonnage by old measurement being 247. She is a third larger than the famous yacht America, is 123 feet long, 25 feet beam, 10 feet deep, and draws 11 1-2 feet of water. In common parlance, she is a "beauty," and will have a good show in the race to-day and to-morrow.

Ordination of Rev. Wm. A. Rand.

The Newburyport Herald says; The event of the year at South Seabrook was the ordination on Friday last, of Mr. William A. Rand as pastor of the Congregational church, which he founded eight years since at that place. It is hardly needful that we should preface a report of the ordination with any extended account of his labor among the people of his parish, as it is well known to our readers. To be sure, before he begun his self-sacrificing labor, the condition of public morals there was anything but healthy, and doubtless much degradation and much poverty existed, but justice compels us to deny and condemn the absurd and extravagant stories concerning this people which have found their way to the public through sensational press reporters, who pictured the village as a sort of Hades, and the people as scarcely a whit better than cannibals. It is no marvel that these stories drew from some of the more respectable citizens a most indignant protest. Nature has done very much for the village, and we doubt not that the signs of thrift which already appear, are indicative of the general prosperity which will ere long be manifest on every hand, and if the people do one-half as much for their village as dame nature has done, this will certainly be true, and South Seabrook will be classed among the most attractive of our New England villages. The tide of ridicule which has assailed Mr. Rand through unthinking sensationalists, has spent itself, and people are recognizing the good which is being accomplished. Mr. Rand has never quailed before the discouragements and rebuffs which he has encountered. He came to a hard field hardly cleared of the stubble, and set his plough in the soil, and having put his hand to the plough he has never for once looked back. He had to be at once a missionary and a preacher. He set out with a strong heart, a stern faith and a sure conviction of duty. The ordinary man would have given over the work in despair before a year's ministry was accomplished, but he had faith to believe that the light would break through the clouds, and that the designs of the scornful would in God's good time be made the instruments of His will. He struck where the blow was needed;—he aimed at the real necessities of the people, and by that means made his religion practical and attractive. The little company who came to hear him preach on Sunday was augmented to scores, and in 1868 he was enabled through the co-operation of the better people and that of churches round about to erect a commodious house of worship. This house is still in a very crude state, there being only one thickness of coarse pine floor, and no inside "finish." Outside, the house is clapboarded and painted, and wears the appearance of comfort, but the interior presents an admirable opportunity for the exercise of a well-directed benevolence. The vestry on the ground floor is by far the most comfortable room in the building. Its walls are covered with the mottoes which afforded the basis of so much ludicrous comment by the Boston press, on the occasion of the wedding of the pastor some months since. It is ornamented also by a fine clock. The auditorium, if it can in its present rude state be dignified by the name, is reached by a set of rough stairs, very like the temporary ones erected by carpenters while a building is in process of construction, affording an admirable opportunity for the breaking of one's limbs. The upper room has been used as a place of worship only a short time. As we have before intimated, there is no lathing, and the room presents the appearance of the exterior of a well-constructed ice-house. The seats, which were taken out of some old church, were formerly very long, but have been sawn in too, and "telescoped" so that there may be an arm at each end. On the platform at the south end is a very respectable pulpit and sofa, and on the occasion of the ordination the front of the room was further equipped by a melodeon which was dexterously put together by pieces like a dissected map. The church has quite a supply of hymn and tune books, donated by a church in Dover. In the tower in front of the church is a fine bell which must have created quite a sensation by its first ringing.

At the ordination, the brother of the pastor extended the right hand of fellowship. Mr. Rand rehearsed briefly the earlier work of his young brother, commenced while he himself was pastor of the church at Amesbury, and which he said all came back to him. The visit of his brother —his remonstrances unavailing against the attempt his brother proposed to make; how he rode away over the hill, and how he watched him out of sight; then the foundation of the church—it all came back, and he thanked God that he had lived during all these eight years. He extended the hand of fellowship in behalf of the Christian world, and of the churches all about in behalf of the ministry. During the eight years since 1867, father and mother had passed over the river, and to-day he could hear them saying, "Give the words of heavenly fellowship to our dear son;" he heard the great hosts of the redeemed saying, "Do not leave us out —tell him to be faithful—that the fellowship of the cross must come before the fellowship of the crown."

The following was the order of exercises:

Invocation—Rev. Charles R. Seymour of Newburyport.

Reading of Scripture—Rev. Swift Byington of Exeter.

Hymn—"I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord"—read by Rev. Mr. Chandler.

Sermon by Prof. Chas. Mead of Andover.

Hymn—"Glorious Things of Thee are Spoken,—read by Rev. T. V. Haynes of North Hampton.

Charge to pastor—by Rev. A. Peabody.

Right Hand of Fellowship—by Rev. E. A. Rand of So. Boston.

Hymn—"The Lord is my Shepherd."

Charge to the People—by Rev. D. T. Fiske, D. D.

Concluding Prayer—by Rev. J. D. Emerson of Biddeford, Me.

A Gambler's Magnificence,

["Gath's Saratoga Letter to Phila. Times.]

Just six days ago I went to see the Long Branch gamester, Chamberlain, having to gain some information on his race horses. While waiting there I sat down and made the following note: The celebrated sideboard at John Chamberlain's is of imitation ebony, with moldings and figures of real bronze and glass. It is twelve feet by eight in outlines, and is essentially of four parts, three of which are in the base, consistiug of a centre door, recessed, and two side doors advanced. The third part is the whole upper portion, consisting of a great oval mirror and two alcoves, canopied with gilt moldings. There are four fine bronze figures on the base—one representing Dante, the other Tasso; these are in the centre; at the angles are Proserpines; these four figures serve as caryatides to support the lower cornice, which ornaments the main plane of the sideboard. The centre door below and the two alcoves are elegantly painted with representations of musical instruments, shaded with bays and laurels. The two side doors are painted in bright colors with views of Spanish convents. Over the mirror is an elegant enameled miniature of a love scene. The effect of the whole is that of something rich, dark and armorial, with bits of light and brightness breaking through. In the same room with the sideboard are Chamberlain's games, generally covered during the day with green baize. There is nothing pretentious about this room, which is about thirty by twenty feet, and occupies the back centre of the house. It has one bay window and another long window beside the sideboard, and its extension is a reading and business room, with desks for writing, piles of newspapers, and genteel, easy furniture. An extension in another direction is the supper room, a light and cheerful apartment like the reading-room. All the ceilings are richly painted, the borders heavy and molded with blue canopies and inlaid lotus leaves. Over the gaming table are representations of the four seasons, depicted in graceful mock heroic as little urchins, male and female. John Chamberlain has had bad luck. He is a rather amiable man, with no hardihood of character or great head.

Don't Make War on the Stomach.

If you are billious, dyspeptic and constipated-don't make war on the stomach by successively swallowing blue pills, strong purgatives and powerful astringments. Such a procedure damages digestion and weakens the bowels, leaving stomach, liver and intestines, after the immediate effect, in a condition of greater disorder than before. That complete relief which remedies of the above description signally fail to afford is obtained by using Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. And for the best of reasons. Billiousness is the result of inactivity of the liver, dyspepsia of weakness of the digestive organs, and constipation is produced by the above causes operating together. The Bitters, being a powerful stomachic, overcome indigestion by stimulating the secretion of gastric juice, relieve billousness by promoting greater activity of the liver, and thus enable the bowels to act with renewed regularity.

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH OF THE CITY OF PORTSMOUTH call the attention of the public to the following sections of Chapter 10 of the City Ordinances and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the city to aid them in the execution of their duty.

CHAPTER X.

Sec. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, &c. shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the health officers may direct.

Sec. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

Sec. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten days from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time above specified.

Sec. 6. No vender of meat at the stalls shall be permitted to leave any stale meat, heads, feet or offal of any kind about their stalls or stores over night, or suffer them to be thrown into any street, lane or alley of the city. Nor shall any sellers of fish be permitted to throw any offals or fish into any street, lane or alley of the city, or upon any wharf but shall either bury them or throw them into the river beyond low-water mark.

Sec. 7. If any dead animal or decaying vegetable substance, or any other nuisance, shall be found in any part of the city, the owners or occupiers of the premises where such nuisances shall be found, shall cause the same to be removed within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by one or more of the health officers.

Sec. 12. When any householder shall know that any person within his family is taken sick of the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 13. When any physician shall know that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with the small pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health, such physician shall immediately give notice thereof to the health officers.

Sec. 14. If any such householder or physician shall refuse or neglect to give the notice required in the preceding sections, he shall for each refusal or neglect forfeit the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered by either of the health officers in the name of the city.

Sec. 16. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other thing deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier —the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may, by direction of the mayor, and accompanied by the city marshal, forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

Sec. 21. No person shall erect, keep or continue or permit to be erected, kept or continued, upon any land occupied by him, any pen for the keeping of swine, or privy, over either of the mill ponds in this city, or so placed that offensive substances therefrom shall be discharged or drained into either of said ponds, or into any creek, or cove or drain leading thereto. And no person shall construct, keep or continue any drain leading from any pen for the keeping of any swine, slaughter-house, privy vault, or other unwholesome or offensive place, into either of said ponds, or so as to flow or marsh adjoining the same. And no person shall throw or suffer to be thrown from his land into either of said ponds, or upon any of said flats or marshes, any dead, decaying, unwholesome or offensive animal or vegetable substances.

Daily Chronicle.

—They tell about a man who bought a farm, last spring, without knowing very much about agriculture. His oxen flung their tails about with such vigor, while he was plowing, that he was annoyed. So it occurred to him that it would be good thing to hold the tails down with weights and compel them to stand the fly-bites. In pursuance of this theory he affixed a brick to each tail, and went on with his work. A few minutes afterward, while he was talking with his son, a particularly hungry Jersey fly bit the off-ox, whereupon the animal swung around suddenly with a kind of a vigorous jerk and brained the boy on the spot with the brick.

An English Remedy

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS.

For Nervousness and General Debility,

PREMATURE decay, mental and physical prostration, fear, despondency, over indulgence in the use of opium or alcoholic drinks, tobacco, &c., &c. Medicines unrivalled for their wonderful prompt cures and remarkable cures of all Nervous Complaints. Their efficacy is equally great in the treatment and cure of Cancers, Nodes, Ulcers, Pustules, Pimples, Tetter, Fever Sores, Ringworm, Erysipelas, Scald-Head, Barbers' Itch, Scurvy, Salt Rheum, Copper Colored Blotches, Glandular Swelling, Worms and Black Spots in the flesh, Discoloration, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth and Nose, Sore Legs, and sores of every character, because the medicines are the very best Blood Medicine ever placed before the people, and are warranted to be the greatest Powerful Alterative ever originated by man. They impart Strength to the Body and Vigor to the Mind, removing Morbid Sensibility, Depression of Spirits, Dementia and Melancholia.

NERVOUS DEBILITY.

However obscure the causes may be which contribute to render nervous debility a disease so prevalent, affecting as it does, nearly one-half of our adult population, it is a melancholy fact that day by day, and year by year, we witness a most frightful increase of nervous affections from the slightest neuralgia to the more grave and extreme forms of Nervous Prostration.

It is of the highest importance, then, that individuals should be able to judge for themselves, by their own feelings, if and to what extent they are attacked by this insidious enemy to life and happiness, and even life itself if left to run its course unchecked by the early and prompt application of curative remedies.

DRUNKENNESS.

THE CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS is the only remedy that has ever proved by practical experience a benefit to those who suffer from over-indulgence in alcoholic liquors; It completely destroys the taste for them, and restores the victim of intemperance to health and vigor. A single trial will prove it to be just what it is recommended to be.

Price $2.50. Large size, $5. Each package of the Cordial Balm contains one box of the Tonic Pills, which may also be had separately at 50 cents per box.

RECENT TESTIMONIALS.

FREWSBURGH, Nov. 12, 1874.

I have used the Cordial Balm and Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills as a preventive and cure for the use of ardent spirits and habitual intoxication, and find them actually specific in such cases. I regard them as most invaluable medicines, and nothing could induce me to be without them.

JACOB MESERVE.

TIPTON, Dec. 3, 1874.

We take great pleasure in informing you of the surprisingly beneficial results from the use of your English Remedy, The Cordial Balm of Syricum and Lothrop's Tonic Pills, in a case of great Nervous Debility and Prostration, by a member of our family who had been under treatment by different doctors for nearly three years past without any apparent benefit therefrom; but your medicines have produced a most wonderful change for the better and the patient now enjoys comparatively excellent health. MRS. HARRIET STURGISS.

P. S.—We tell all with whom we are acquainted who are similarly afflicted to try your medicines.

FACTS PROVEN

BY THE

TEST OF EXPERIENCE.

THE CAUSE OF GOUT.

It proceeds from a deficiency of, or an alteration in the cutaneous, urinary or intestinal secretions. This definition leads us to the solution of a second and not less important question:

HOW TO CURE THE GOUT.

This can only be accomplished by a course of treatment capable of establishing the perspiration, if suppressed, of inducing a proper flow of urine, and of destroying the obstinate constipation when it exists. But it is not sufficient that these three functions act properly as respect quantity, but above all, and before all, their quality must have our attention. Indeed, we have mentioned not only a deficiency but also an alteration of secretion. For the perspiration, the urine, and the evacuations should be not only sufficient in amount, but should carry off certain principles whose stay would produce the most serious disorders.

This is precisely what we see in the Gout. Does it not often happen that after an attack, the joints become deformed by chalky concretions? These gouty deposits have been analyzed by the Chemists Wurzer, Fremery, Vauquilin and Barruel.—Every first-class physician should know their composition, then there would remain to find a means to prevent these salts spreading, and, as it were, condensing of themselves throughout the system. The receipt from which is compounded the will produce this desirable result, because it gives to the products of the body the quantity and quality necessary.

CHRONIC GOUT having been engendered insensibly during a certain lapse of time, time is necessary for its removal. Its elimination must take place atom by atom. It is, therefore, not surprising that patience should be required for a complete cure. We must be careful not to confound the acute with the chronic condition; if the latter, it requires weeks to remove it; in the former, a few doses only are necessary to effect a complete cure.

By perseverance a longer or a shorter time, according to the severity of the case, the joints will gradually recover their suppleness, and the nodes will be seen to soften and diminish insensibly. This last is an infallible test of the wonderful properties of the

DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

To this unerring proof we can, by the aid of Chemistry, add another, equally palpable and convincing:

The articular concretions are composed principally of uric acid, urates of ammonia, of soda, and of phosphate of lime. These are precisely the salts which we find in the various excreta, particularly in the urine; so that chemical researches which showed scarcely a trace of these before taking the DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE, will demonstrate an enormous proportion after its use.

Thus the concretions, the principal components of which analysis has shown can be again reproduced, and will thus furnish the most convincing proof any medicine can offer. This, then, is the most rational plan of proceeding, and which enabled us to answer the question of a certain English M. P., "WHAT HAS BECOME OF MY GOUT?" We told him that "it followed the course of the evacuations," since chemical analysis, as has been said, finds in them all the principles which produce it. Henceforth it is clear that this medicine is

A BLESSING TO MANKIND,

and ought to banish not only all ideas of retrogressions, but should inspire the most perfect confidence. It cannot be too often repeated, these are no hypotheses, no vain theories, but palpable truths, material, physical facts, confirmed over and over again by twenty-five years' practical experience in the leading hospitals of England and France, as well as by thousands of testimonials held by every one of our agents, freely offered by sufferers restored to sound health and continued use furnished through the mails of the world-renowned DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE.

It is styled as above for the reason that its great efficacy in rheumatic complaints is just as apparent as in gout, and thousands of sufferers in Massachusetts to-day, cured of rheumatism by its use, mention the Proprietor's name with benedictions of praise.

This medicine is for sale at all Druggists throughout the United States and Canada. If it happens that your Druggist has not got it in stock, ask him to send for it to any of the Wholesale Druggists in Boston. Price $1 a bottle.

BOOK AGENTS wanted to sell "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser." It is the cheapest book ever published; 885 pages, over 250 illustrations, $1.50. Thousands buy it at sight, who could not be induced to purchase the high-priced books treating of Domestic Medicine. Unlike other books sold through agents this work is thoroughly advertised throughout North America. This fact, together with the large size, elegant appearance, and many new features of the book, causes it to sell more rapidly than any work ever published in this country. Those of my agents who have had experience in selling books, say that in all their previous canvassing they never met with such success or made so large wages, as since commencing the sale of my work. Pulmocine Cordial.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England;

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

—USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. A Sunday Horror.

[New York Tribune.]

The affray in New York, Sunday, in which one negro was instantly killed, another mortally wounded, and several others cut and otherwise injured, grew out of an altercation in John M. Lyle's liquor saloon at No. 158 West Thirtieth St. On Saturday night twelve or fourteen colored men assembled there for a carouse. Among them were William, alias "Bally" Henry—who has just returned from Sing Sing Prison, where he had served out a five years' sentence for a felonious assault upon a policeman—Daniel Matthew, Jefferson Sanders, Thomas Sorrell of Baltimore and Henry Baughnaugh of Washington and Thomas Hicks. Sorrell and Baughnaugh are servants of Col. McDaniels, the well-known owner of race-horses.

Henry and Sanders played against Mathews and Sorrell in a game of cards known as "Spanish Monte," which is common in the South and Far West. The game was for money, and the crowd who were not playing billiards were looking on. A quarrel arose over some point in the game, and Sanders accused Mathews of cheating, Mathews retorted and struck Sanders in the face with his fist. The whole room was in an uproar in a moment. Some supported Mathews; others defended Sanders. A general fight followed around and across a billiard table in the rear of the saloon. The fight began about 12 1-2 o'clock and was kept up for nearly half an hour. Billiard cues were used freely and the chairs were broken to provide the combatants with weapons. Sanders seized a heavy crockery beer-pitcher and struck Mathews upon the head with such force that the pitcher was shivered to pieces. The alarm was then given that a policeman was coming, and the fight was stopped. Mathews was bleeding profusely from the wound made by the pitcher. Officer Rhoades took him to the Twenty-ninth Precinct Police Station and there his wounds were dressed. He refused to make a complaint, and no arrests were made. After his head had been dressed Mathews went away. The crowd had scattered in different directions, and all was quiet again.

Most of the men engaged in the fight were from the Eighth Ward, and about noon Sunday they were again together in Everhadt Dilger's lager-beer saloon, at No. 521 Broome Street. Their overtures were made to Mathews to settle the quarrel of the early morning, and to make peace with Sanders. Sorrell interfered, and the quarrel was renewed in a violent dispute. Sanders went out and came back with "Bally" Henry, who was armed with a butcher's cleaver. Henry sprang forward toward Sorrell and attempted to split his head open with the cleaver. Mathews interfered for his friend, and a struggle ensued for the possession of the cleaver. Baughnaugh seized Sorrell by the arm and urged him to leave the place, saying: "The crowd are too much for us and will kill somebody." Sanders and "Bally" Henry then ran up the steps to the street. Then Sorrell followed. There he turned upon Sanders, and the latter drew a razor and cut Sorrell's left arm to the bone. "Bally" Henry, Sanders and Mathews then ran up Thompson St., toward Spring St.

Sorrell, wild with pain and excited by what he had been drinking, drew a clasp-knife and followed. The colored people who live in that quarter were returning from church, and a crowd quickly gathered around Sorrell. He struck about him like a maniac, yelling and cutting wildly in all directions. His wound bled profusely, and this added to his savage appearance. Seeing a man in front of him who resembled "Bally" Henry, he sprang upon him and drove his knife through his heart. The man dropped to the ground, the blood bursting from his wound, and died almost instantly. The assassin then cut several persons in the crowd and ran on toward Spring Street. Seeing a man who looked like Sanders leaning upon the railing in front of a carpenter's shop, Sorrell sprang toward him. The man turned to flee. But the murderer shouted "Kill him," and, seizing the man by the nape of his neck, he thrust his hand under his arm and drove his knife into his back, through the spinal cord. The wounded man staggered a few paces and then fell in the middle of the street.

At this time Roundsman Crook and Officer McDonald and Larkin came up and soon dispersed the excited crowd. Roundsman Crook arrested Baughnaugh, Officer McDonald captured Sorrell, who was beginning to grow faint from loss of blood, and the two were soon afterward locked up. Capt. McDonald sent out his reserve to bring in the victims of the affray and arrest all who had seen or taken part in the struggle.

The dead man lay in Thompson Street, between Broome and Spring Streets. The body was taken to the Prince Street Police Station and laid out in the back room. The man whom Sorrell had stabbed in the back was found where he had fallen, in front of No. 109 Thompson Street. He was carried to the Police Station on a stretcher. The wounds were pronounced mortal. The ambulance reached the station in a short time, and the injured man was transported to Bellevue Hotel.

The knife used by Sorrell was a white-handled clasp-knife with a blade three inches and a half long. Sorrell did not deny that he had killed the man. He said that

Sanders had cut him on the steps of the saloon. When he got into the street the crowd tried to stop him. He then drew his knife and endeavored to cut his way out. He did not know the name of the man whom he had killed. The other he had believed to be Jeff. Sanders. Sorrell was then taken down stairs and locked up.

A coroner was summoned as soon as possible. A jury was empanelled from the neighborhood and they viewed the body. The body of the dead man was taken to the Morgue. A large number of people from the neighborhood called to identify the body if possible. but no one recognized the murdered man until evening. It was then identified as Samuel Peterson of Elmira, N. Y. Mr. Peterson was in business on the lime docks in this city, looking after shipments from Elmira. He was a young man, about 30 years of age, and has always borne a good reputation for honesty and respectability.

SATURDAY, JULY 24, 1875.

An Unfortunate Lady.

Tuesday morning a woman of refined appearance but shabbily dressed was brought by a policeman into one of the precinct stations of New York, and complained that an assault had been made upon her by five men on board the tugboat Mike Norton. She gave her name as Louisa Merritt, and said she was the wife of Col. Merritt, of the United States Army, and that about three weeks ago she had made her escape from a lunatic asylum near Washington called the Elizabeth Asylum, but better known as the Government Asylum. She had been confined there by her husband, she said, a year ago last September, in order to break her of the habit of taking morphine. At the time mentioned she managed to make her escape through a hole in the wall, and went to Alexandria, Va., on foot. From there she went to Baltimore, and thence to Philadelphia, where she remained for some days. She then sold a heavy gold ring she had in her possession and procured a few necessary articles of clothing. She saw in the Philadelphia newspaper that Detective McDevitt, of Washington, was in the city, and, fearing that he might be looking for her, determined to go away at once. She therefore took the train for Jersey City, where she arrived on Tuesday morning. Hoping to find a situation, she looked over the advertisements in the daily papers, and saw that a stewardess was needed on a steamer, and came to New York to apply for the position. She lost her way during the day, and at last, when she attempted to return to Jersey City, became bewildered and wandered aimlessly about. While standing on a corner she was approached by a man who asked her what she was doing there. She told him her story, and he said he was the agent of the vessel she was looking for, and told her he would take her on board. She then went with him to the tug Mike Norton, and entered the cabin with him. After she had been there a short time four other men made their appearance, and the assault was made. The moment she effected her escape she sought the protection of the first patrolman she met, who took her to the Police Station. It was with great difficulty that the captain of the precinct could get her to tell her story, as she said that she did not want her troubles to be made public, and that all she desired was to be allowed to go away in safety. The lady had a quantity of morphine in her pocket when arrested, and was evidently under the influence of it. Two men were arrested on board the Mike Norton and identified by her as her assailants.

News and Notes.

It is said that since his recent attempt to escape from the Charles Street Jail, young Pomeroy has been kept under close surveillance. The officers at the jail are of the opinion that he had been at work in attempting to break out before Tuesday, though he says he began on that day. In furnishing the material for his biography, which was recently published, he for the first time broke the rules of the jail. The attempt to escape was the second breach of discipline. The biography was passed out in sheets, or a few sheets together, which were enclosed in soiled clothing, which he sent out of the jail to friends. The parcels which he, as well as other prisoners, have sent out have have not been subjected to very close inspection, and under ordinary circumstances this would not seem necessary.

The wise in boating matters—or rather those who pretended to possess that special wisdom, said that the Dartmouth boys had "no stroke and no style." The same wiseacres were at the same time betting their lost doubloons on Yale, which Dartmouth beat four seconds in the University race, and only lacked five seconds' time to beat Harvard. Considering their disadvantages no crew deported themselves more nobly or bravely than did that four Dartmouth.—Concord People.

On Commencement Day at Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Me., last week, Horatious Bridge, one of the famous class of 1825, exhibited a document containing the terms of a wager between Nathaniel Hawthorne and Jonathan Cilley, of Nottingham, a classmate. The date of the bet was Nov. 14, 1824, and by its terms Mr. Cilley agreed to give Mr. Hawthorne one barrel of old Madeira wine if the latter was not married or a widower twelve years from that, or Nov. 14, 1836, while if he did not marry before that time Mr. Hawthorne was to put the wine in Mr. Cilley's cellar, Mr. Cilley lost and was given one month to pay.

There is great excitement in Praire Du Chien, Wis., in consequence of a bold case of kidnapping. The victim is a lady named Mrs. Rush, who has been boarding for some time past at the Mondel House, pending a suit for a divorce from her husband, who is a wealthy resident of West Union, Ia. Four men drove in an open carriage to the Mondel House; two of them entered the hotel, and proceeded to the parlor, where they found Mrs. Rush, whom they seized and dragged to the street; then, after a desperate struggle, she was forced into the carriage and driven rapidly to the river, where she was placed in a boat and taken to the Iowa side. The affair was witnessed by several persons, who were astonished and so frightened that they made no attempt to interfere. Officers soon started in pursuit, but were too late to catch the parties in this State.

"A prophet is not without honor," etc., and the Chicago Tribune remarks that Moody ranked low in the scale as compared with the average ministerial standard in that city, but adds: "At home we saw Moody every day, and were so familiar with him that we took no note of the possibilities of success in his composition. We saw only the illiterate, self-opinionated, obstinate, enthusiastic, dry and somewhat tedious, and, as Mr. Collyer says, 'muddle-headed' Moody. We did not see the dauntless, unabashed, determined, concentrative, incisive Moody. We saw Moody as an earnest, sincere, inflexible Christian, with no great gifts, but ready to perform any hard or disagreeable work he might find to do in the ranks. We did not see him as the grand leader, with his campaign clearly marked out and moving to its accomplishment with an irresistible determination and strength of purpose. This is what the English have seen. His labors in Chicago were evidently only the training to this work."

Clara Morris has turned newspaper correspondent and the Graphic has the benefit of her services. She writes as dramatically as she acts. The following is a pathetic scrap from her first letter written on shipboard: "I heard that Kate Field was "awful sick." I am mean enough to wish every one was sick—no, I take that back. That poor, lonely, frightened-looking girl, who sits all day long on deck—I don't wish her to be sick. Its such a sad little story. Her mother died years ago. Her brother, a fine, stalwart young fellow, kissed her good-bye one morning, and with a smile and a merry speech on his lips started off to a fair. That evening when they brought him home to her there was neither smile nor speech on his whitened lips, only the ugly little hole in his breast told the story—shot to death! She has never recovered from the shock; the doctors say she has heart disease, and have recommended this ocean voyage. Her only remaining relative, a poor, hard-working old father has secured a cabin passage for her, but is himself in the steerage. Poor girl; she is so miserable! If she remains in her berth she is lonely. Her clothes are so thin and worn that if she comes on deck she half perishes with cold, while any attention from the ladies only seems to embarrass her and make her feel awkward. Her only pleasure is in creeping down to the lower deck to talk to the hard-featured old father, who, I very much fear, will return to New York alone.

The great question at Georgetown, D. C., is whether new flour should be put into old barrels. It seems rather late to bring this question up when the new and old package business was decided so long ago.

Poor Donaldson! As day succeeds day, hope for his safety dies out, until there is hardly any margin left to cling to. He was a brave man, and the most intrepid and probably the most skillful aeronaut that ever this country produced.

Mr. Grimwood, the journalist, who accompanied Prof. Donaldson, was a young man of much promise. One of his fellow-reporters, when bidding him good-bye, said to him in a jocular way: "I shall have an opportunity to write your obituary."

His Order.

(Cincinnati Gazette.)

It was during the festival week. Hunt's was full to repletion. So were the men and women who came out of there. I was in getting supper. A consequential, important chap stalked down the room, strode up to the side-table in front of me, stood his cane by the side of the table, slammed the sugar-bowl back against the wall, subsided into a chair, crossed his legs, and waited. Waiters, full-armed and empty-armed, were rushing in all directions, but none paid any attention to the chap in front of me. He looked puzzled and out of patience. The fellow in front of him left and another took his seat. In a moment a waiter was taking his order, but still my friend waited. This however, was too much for him to bear. He began to mutter under his breath and pound on the table with the salt-cellar. In the din he wasn't heard. It was getting interesting, and I forgot to eat, watching him. He was getting very red in the face, and commenced to beckon to the waiters, but could not catch their eye. He half started once or twice to leave, but his hunger conquered his ire. He now took his cane and began to hook for the waiters' legs as they went by. For some time his fishing operations were unrewarded. He looked savagely for one fellow's legs and floored him. Oh, what a waste of eatables was there, my countrymen! The waiter did not know what tripped him, but supposed it was the foot of my hungry and impatient friend. The waiter accordingly, when he had wiped the mashed potatoes from his nose, asked him fiercely what he was doing with his feet. This question took him by surprise, and he replied that he did not know. Why did he ask? The waiter looked at him as if he thought him a fool, and marched off with a lot of cracked china and broken victuals.

By this time the fellow in front of him had left, and a third man seated himself there. A waiter was promptly on hand and took his order. This was too much. He sprang on the next waiter that passed, and dragged him to the table.

"Haven't you ordered yet?" asked the trembling captive.

"Ordered yet! That is nice. No, I hain't ordered yet, you thick-skulled aborigines. Where's your eyes?' Hunt's eating-house? Why don't you hunt? I've been hunting an hour for something to eat on this table, and I hain't found anything yet. You bring me a porter-house steak quicker'n lightnin,' or you'll find out whether I've ordered yet."

The waiter slunk away. My indignant friend turned around to the table, readjusted his cane, settled his vest, shoved the sugar-bowl out to the end of the table, and felt inclined to grow more pacific.

Instantly a waiter was at the table.

"Ordered yet?"

"Yes I have ordered yet?"

The waiter shoved the sugar-bowl back to the wall and vamoosed. My friend looked daggers at the retreating waiter and pushed the sugar-bowl out to the end of the table again. In an instant another waiter was at his side.

"Have you ordered?"

"Oh! you're very attentive, ain't you? How long since you was took? Yes, I've ordered."

The waiter slung the sugar-bowl back to the wall and passed on.

"Look-a-here, young man," said my friend, but the waiter did not hear him and he finished his remark in an undertone, addressing it to his eyes. This time he put the bowl out to the end of the table very emphatically and made some remark to the effect that he thought it would stay there.

"Ordered, sir?" It was another waiter. My friend looked up with an expression of deep redness and said meekly, while his under lip quivered and tears gathered in his eyes: "Young man, don't be hard on me. When my supper comes, you eat it for me, will you? Where will you have the sugar bowl? Arrange it to suit yourself; don't mind me." And he took his cane and departed a broken-spirited man. The waiter looked bewildered, and walked out into the kitchen, in a dazed sort of a way. My meal had grown cold long before, so I departed, too.

The price of gold opened Friday morning at 112 1-2, but the market was weak, and the quotation dropped. The price at 12 M. had declined to 111 3-4.

LOCAL AGENTS WANTED.

An Agent Wanted for Each Town and County in the United States.

Parties desiring to act as agents must accompany their application by a letter of recommendation as to character and responsibility from and signed by the Editor of a newspaper published in the town or county for which the agent proposes to act. The agency is to sell the bonds of the Industrial Exhibition Company.

BONDS, $20 EACH.
HALF BONDS, $10 EACH.
QUARTER BONDS, $5 EACH.

The Industrial Exhibition Company will furnish agents with circulars, etc., etc.

Each newspaper published in the town where an agent is located will, as soon as the agency is established, be given an advertisement, advertising such agency and the Company, and fully explaining the plans, purposes and objects of the Company. Such advertisement will continue in such papers as long as an agency is successfully conducted.

The Industrial Exhibition Company is the first to adopt the plan so long in use by the European governments of issuing bonds when the principal is made secure and not risked, but where there is a chance for a large premium, an investment of $20 is sure to return to the investor $21—one dollar more than cost—and the holder of a $20 Bond may obtain a premium either of $50, $100, $200, $500, $1,000, $5,000, $5,000, $10,000, $25,000 or $100,000. The interest, which is ordinarily distributed to all the bondholders pro rata, is in this loan distributed by chance. The purchaser of a bond knows he will receive back his investment, with a small rate of interest, he has a chance in the above named premiums, which are simply the distribution of interest on the whole loan.

Each bond participates in four drawings each year, until it has drawn a premium, when it is surrendered, the premium paid, and the bond cancelled.

The Industrial Exhibition Company, under a special charter granted by the State of New York, is given authority to issue these bonds. The Legislature of the State, recognizing the great benefits which will arise from the success of this enterprise, have exempted all the real estate and property of the Company from taxation and assessments for five years, and has also conferred other great privileges.

Every American who understands the purposes of this Company will, of a necessity, feel a pride in aiding it to a successful termination.

Each individual who buys a bond becomes an owner and an interested party, and when he views the structure erected with his money can say, "I aided to erect in our country the most magnificent building the world has ever seen, a palace which, in truth, represents the industry, energy and mechanical genius of the American people."

The manufacturers and the inventors of America are peculiarly interested in the success of this enterprise, for the reason that it is to be their home, where all their inventions and manufactures can be exhibited and sold.

The building will contain 5,330,000 square feet of space.

Purchasers desiring Bonds before an agency is established where they reside, will communicate direct with this office, from where they can be supplied.

Parties desiring to act as agents or to purchase bonds will address

Local Matters.

An Error.

The Journal says that "parties who lately moved into the house of Mrs. Louisa Gardiner at South end, left suddenly, insisting that the ghost of the departed pays nocturnal visits to the old house."

Which is not only wholly untrue, but a mischievous statement. Such an item serves to frighten timid women and children, and depreciates the value of the property in question. The story loses nothing by circulation and the person who sets in motion such a yarn is gravely responsible. Mrs. Gardiner's house remains unoccupied and in about the same condition which she left it. No one has leased it, or even applied for it. No ghost, or phantom or spectre has been seen or heard, either at the house or in its vicinity since the night of the mysterious murder. The dingy curtains remain closed, the front door double-locked, the ricketty gate padlocked, the large garden grown to weeds,—in fact, the utmost quietude exists there undisturbed. At least, so say the property owners and citizens living in the immediate vicinity of the premises in question.

City Council.

In the Board of Aldermen on Thursday evening, the petition of J. C. Butler and others for a school house at the west end was referred to a special committee consisting of the Mayor and Aldermen Hatch and Hackett.

A committee consisting of the Mayor and the chairman of the committee on streets was appointed with power to act in all matters relating to the improvement of Richard Avenue.

The committee on School Houses were authorized to make the necessary repairs at the Haven School House.

The Mayor was authorized to settle the claim of John B. Hutchings for injury to child.

The committee on City Lands and Buildings reported names for the new streets to be laid out at the City Farm as follows: Sullivan, Whipple, Thornton, Pitt, Stark, and Bartlett.

A joint resolution relating to the sale of a part of the City Farm was passed under suspension of the rules.

A resolution requesting the City Marshal to enforce the ordinance relative to the South Mill Pond was passed.

The question of paying the execution of the Associated Mechanics and Manufacturers of the State of New Hampshire was referred to the Mayor with power.

Jottings.

The haying season was suddenly interrupted on Friday by a heavy rain.

The poor man's street sprinkler was about yesterday.

Col. George F. Towle of this city, has been transferred from Fort Lyon, Colorado, to Fort Dodge, Kansas.

Elder E. A. Stockman will preach Sunday in the Advent chapel on Hanover street. The public are cordially invited.

Advices from the Shoals received on Friday evening inform us that the Regatta will positively take place today.

Rev. C. E. Lord, D. D. of New York, will lecture next Sunday P. M. in the North Church, on "The Huguenots." The public are invited.

Right Rev. Bishop Niles will officiate at St. John's Church to-morrow, and Rev. Dr. Davies on the first, third, fourth and fifth Sundays in August and first Sunday in September.

The New York Tribune says that Congressman Jones is the richest man in New Hampshire, and pays a tax three times as large as that of any other man in Portsmouth.

The tax-payers of that portion of Water street between South Mill Bridge and Sowersby's Bakery are chuckling over a newly relaid sidewalk just completed. Don't you forget that our city fathers look out for the interests of Water street. Hunking street has also been repaired and graded.

The pay of the Navy Yard watchmen has been increased from $2 to $2.26 per diem, and that of the several Captains of the Watchmen has been raised from $2.75 to $2.76—one cent! This slight increase, however, should not be received with contempt, as with it they can buy a cent's worth of yeast every day, which may result in raising their wages still higher!

The Aqueduct Company in laying pipes for the new water supply for the city have thus far been fortunate enough to run across only a single ledge, which they had no difficulty in blasting. The general work is progressing well, and it is thought that in two weeks the principal main will be let on. Already one main has been connected with Fountain Head and our water takers note a perceptible increase not only in the volume but in the quality of the water.

The fellow who was arrested at Portland and supposed to be Lynch, who stabbed Jerome Conlon on the river between Dover and Portsmouth, was not the right man. Officer Stackpole of Dover went to Portland Thursday afternoon to identify him and bring him back, but not being the one he wanted, he returned without him. Lynch is still at large, unless, possibly he was drowned in trying to swim ashore at the time Conlon was stabbed.

There are about thirty families at the Methodist camp ground including one or two families from this city. It is a beautiful grove and a comfortable place wherein to wear away a few weeks of Summer's heat. The fact that the primitive object of camp meetings is fast dying out cannot be disguised, however, and it is doubtless just as well that it is so, for as society changes, new customs are introduced, and old habits and fashions must stand back and give place to new.

One of the trials that afflict mankind is the suspender subject. Not the scaffold horror, but the braces that sustain pantaloons on the mortal diaphragm of bipeds who walk the streets, and want their clothes to hang right. The "Mohawk Patent Helical Spring Suspender" is the latest candidate for public favor. We have tried it and find it to be the best and easiest suspender ever manufactured or sold, having more elasticity than any elastic webbing suspender ever made. The elasticity is where the suspender is attached to the pants, thus leaving no draw or strain upon the shoulder. The suspender holds its elasticity until entirely worn out, there being not a particle of rubber in the same.

—Fifty thousands Feejeeans are said, on the best authority, to have perished since the present epidemic of measles began in the Feejee Islands.

—The Troy (N. Y.) clergy have telegraphed to Moody and Sanky an invitation to help them at the Round Lake camp meeting near Saratoga in September.

—A Kentucky woman writes to the Woman's Journal to say that "the dawn of freedom for women here is begun," because "many wives are demanding stated incomes from their husbands."

—The prisoners in the Penitentiary at Joliet, Ill., were afforded a fair opportunity to escape on the 5th of July, but respected their parole, and went back to their cells without any attempt to do so.

—Some scholars in the normal school at Westfield, Mass., turned violets green by dipping them in ammonia, and tricked the botanical teacher into a lecture about the apparent discovery of a new flower.

—The old superstitious idea that the hand of a dead man is a talisman against evil, once prevalent among Southern negroes, seems not to have died out. A vault in Greenville, Mass., was recently broken open and a hand cut from a corpse.

—The Rev. Peter Green, a Methodist, preached a sermon in Scottsville, Ill., and invited any dissenter from his doctrine to reply. Mr. Olbert, a Baptist, accepted the invitation. Brother Barr, an adherent of the clergyman, commanded Brother Olbert to stop talking. A quarrel ensued, then a fight, and the meeting ended in confusion. The factions next met in court, where they fought with canes, stones, knives and pistols; but nobody was more than slightly hurt.

—A farmer on the road between Charlton and Worcester, Mass., having been terribly annoyed by drummers, put up a sign: "No sewing machines wanted here. Got one." It was no use; the next drummer wanted to see the machine, "and perhaps he'd hitch up a trade." So the farmer put up, "Got the small-pox here." That worked well for a little while, but then came along a drummer frightfully pitted with the small-pox, who suddenly said: "Seeing you've got it bad here they've put me on this route."

—Saw Dust, a station on the Georgia railroad, is not a peaceful place. It had a champion fighter named Ransom, who one day got whipped by Robert Bolton, a robust new-comer. Ransom demanded another fight, got it, and was whipped more thoroughly than before. Soon afterward Bolton was surrounded by masked friends of the vanquished rough, and stabbed with knives until he died. His mutilated body and the masks worn by the murderers were found in the woods, and that was the end of the occurrence, no effort having been made to punish anybody.
